The house of Henry Wells, in the town of Fremont, Lake County, Ill., on the evening of the 22d inst, was struck with lightning. The lightning came in contact with the chimney, which it followed into the rooms, and, after shattering stoves, ripping up floors and playing around an iron bound trunk, passed off under the house. Eight persons were in the building at the time of the accident—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wells, four children, William Wells (Henry's brother), and a boy fourteen years old—all of whom were more or less injured. All were struck senseless, and now have no knowledge of the shock. Henry thinks he recovered in about ten minutes, and, after discovering the condition of the rest of the inmates of his residence (though badly burned), immediately proceeded to the house of a near neighbor with the sad intelligence, and medical aid was procured forth with. Henry was burned badly about the feet and legs. Mrs. Wells was also burned very severely about the feet and legs and otherwise injured, having been thrown upon a stove. William was marked from the right elbow across the bowels and down the left leg. His clothing was torn and his boot shivered but he was not badly hurt. The boy fourteen years old bore no mark upon his person but appeared fearfully unconscious of anything for half an hour. A little girl five years old was marked with a bit-tered streak, commencing on the right side, and running across the breast, thence to the bowels, on the surface of which it takes a number of circles, and then passes down the left leg. A boy three years old was scorched, but it is not known to what extent he is injured. A little girl aged two years was to all appearance, dead for about thirty minutes, but recovered.

SYMPATHY BETWEEN RUSSIA AND THE UNITED STATES.—The Buffalo Patriot of 5th instant has an interesting leader on that subject. It says:

"There are in the whole world hardly two governments so friendly towards each other, or affording each other mutually such effectual support, as the administration of the great American Republic and the despotic Government of the Russian Empire." It then enumerates many facts proving the intente cordiale between the two governments, amongst others, the zeal shown by the Pierce administration, in parrouting (alleged) British recruiting agents during the late war with Russia; the great consideration which which Russian agents are treated at Washington, and, on the other hand the distinguished courtesies paid to Americans in Russia. Russia has been proposed by the United States as the umpire in controversies between herself and other Governments. The laudation heaped by the Anglo-American press on the Russian Government, as being one of "civilization and progress," was especially remarkable. The Patriot remarks that "this friendship between two countries so different in their institutions appears very strange. We, on the contrary, should find it very strange if the Government of the United States, controlled by slaveowners, should not actively sympathize with Russia, the empire ruled by serfowners."

The number of the Canada an News received by the Asia, states that the price of Canadian securities had been kept up chiefly by the gradual decline in the English stock market, and Government Six per cent, bonds had been in good demand at £111. The bonds of the Grand Trunk Railway had also been more inquired for, and the price had advanced to £93, but there had been little done in the Great Western of Canada bonds, with a slight fall in their prices. There had been a steady market in Canada Land shares, with a preponderance of purchases on the fortnight's business; the price has ranged between £151 to £158, closing, buyers at £154; no sellers under £157.

Great Western Canada Railway shares had steadily advanced, on the full expectation of an increased dividend for the half year, and a large business had been done, principally for Scotch account. Doubtless the intelligence of the Dej rtha Canal accident would cause a fall in these securities. Without any marked change in prices, the Grand Trunk stock has been in fair request, and the shares been dealt at 12¾ and 13, improving afterwards to 13¾. The statement was renewed that six per cent, interest will be continued on the shares until the Victoria Bridge is opened for traffic.

A singular case has lately been tried in Memphis, (U. S.) in which a Mr. and Mrs. Helbing had sued Philip R. Bohlen, for breach of marriage contract, in failing to marry Mrs. Helbing after the death of Mrs. Agnes Handworker, and the jury has given the injured parties $1,250 damages! The idea of Helbig suing Bohlen because he did not marry his wife, is certainly the richest thing of this fast age.—Globe.

An auction sale of the furniture of the late Dr. Burdell took place on Monday afternoon at the house, No. 31 Bond street, by order of the Surrogate, granted on application of the public Administrator. Every room in the house was thronged with persons anxious to see the premises which a mysterious murder had invested with such horrible interest. A large proportion of the crowd were women. The bidding was eager, and most of the articles were sold off at a pretty high figure. Some of the sales were as follows:—Book case, $60; Lincoln's chair, $23; mirrors, $70, $70, and $50; sofa bedstead, $21; landscapes, $23 $11, and $8½; picture of the Holy Family $17, &c. While the sale was going on, the people who were prevented by the pressure from getting into the room to see the articles for sale held, passed the time in discussing the question of Eckel's and Mrs. Cunnigham's guilt or innocence with as much zeal and interest as ever.

The Indian (Canadian line) left Portland on Wednesday, March 4th. The Asia (Cunard line) left New York on the same day. The Indian arrived in the Mersey early on Monday, 19th ult., and her mails were not delivered in Liverpool the same morning. The Asia did not get in until late on Monday, and her mails were not delivered until the next day. The fact is worthy of the attention of all, and more especially claims the notice of the mercantile community on both sides of the boundary line.—Globe.

A QUEER CASE OF FRAUD.—A queer case of fraud was recently brought to light in Toronto through the Customs. A newly-established dealer in wines, &c., advertised some Champagne for sale, which some of his competitors in business found had never been entered at the Custom-House. Accordingly information was given, and the wine seized. The fellow thereupon had the impudence to go and demand the release of his goods from seizure on the ground that the Champagne was of Toronto manufacture! He produced invoices showing he had imported and paid duties on the bottles, the forged labels, and the old corks bearing the genuine brands, which had been picked up in the hotels at New York to be resold for this purpose.—Post.

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—A man named J. C. Taylor, 58 years of age, from Herkimer county, State of New York, had a very narrow escape from death at the Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, yesterday. He had descended the staircase from Mr. Winter's mill above the bridge, lost his balance, and fell into the current, (which at this point runs sixty miles an hour,) and was carried about 150 or 200 yards down the current. There he was most fortunately thrown by an eddy and thrown on a rock, where he managed to hold on until assistance was given by the people in the vicinity by ropes and ladders, and he was finally landed on the bank 250 feet from the water, quite exhausted. He was carried to the Hotel, Whitesboro, Oneida Co., being the end of the race. The names of these heartless men are Dalton and Taylor. They pushed on unmercifully, until at Frankfort Dalton's horse gave out, having then gone eighty nine miles. Taylor continued to race on a while with his horse under blankets. Of course both horses will die—that was expected on the start, and if we had our way about it, Messrs. Dalton and Taylor should eat them raw, hides and hoofs, without dressing.—Ex.

A YOUNG CANADIAN "DECORATED."—We have always great pleasure in recording whatever is honorable to Canada and creditable to her children. It will be seen from the subjoined notes that the rare distinction the Victoria Cross, has been conferred upon Alexander Duncan Dunn, Lieut into 11th Hussars —for having in the Light Cavalry charge on the 25th October, 1854, saved the life of Serjeant Bently, 11th Hussars, by cutting down two or three Russian Lancers who were attacking him from the rear, and afterward cutting down a Russian Hussar, who was attacking Private Levett, 11th Hussars.

SALE OF TELEGRAPH LINE.—The "International Telegraph" has finally ceased to exist. We understand that the whole concern, including nearly eight hundred miles of line with instruments, batteries, offices, furniture, and all appendages, has been bought by the Montreal Company, for the sum of three thousand five hundred pounds—less than one tenth its actual cost. Portions of the line me not entirely worthless are to be put in repair for the summer business. The Montreal Company have something over three thousand miles of line now in operation extending from the Detroit River to the Atlantic coast, with branches to almost every town of importance in Canada East and West. Two or three wires are erected on the main routes.

A COWHIDING AFFAIR WITH A FEMALE IN IT.—A Citizen of this place was cowhided at the Louisville Hotel yesterday Morning by a lady of Cincinnati, who came down purposely to inflict the castigation. The particulars sustained the relations of husband and wife, but have been living apart some years, one of the party obtaining a divorce. The lady was a long time connected with the stage; is handsome and highly accomplished. She alleges that he has constantly slandered her in a manner that discredits her fair fame. That up to this period she has borne the calumnies in silence, hoping by irreproachable conduct to make apparent their falsehood. But finding these slanders persisted in and her position in society and means of livelihood seriously interfered with, she chose this plan to right herself. It is but due to state that the gentleman in question has furnished us a version of the affair appertaining to this occurrence, which is different and quite unfavorable to the lady.

PAYING TO SUPPORT ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE.—A novel and strange case of alimony has just been decided in Louisville, Ky. A man named Ferguson separated from his wife and she sued for alimony. Settlement was made by agreeing to pay her $500 a year during her life.—Subsequently the parties were divorced, and neither party was restricted from marrying again—the husband relying upon the religious faith of his wife (she being a Catholic) to prevent her from taking another husband. She did marry, however, and Mr. Ferguson thereupon stopped the supplies. He didn't relish the idea of feeding and clothing another man's wife without deriving some little benefit from the outlay. Suit was brought to compel the payment of the $500 per annum, and decided in favor of the wife.

THE ATLANTIC TO BE SEAMED WITH WIRES.—Presently we shall have morning and evening editions of London and Paris news, for the Company now organized, with its American terminus in Newfoundland, is not destined to a monopoly of communications. A rival scheme is proposed in the metropolis of the British empire, intended to traverse a route through more Southern latitudes. The cable is to run from the Land's End in Cornwall to Cape Finisterre, thence to the Western Islands, and thence to Cape Cod. The last-named stretch is the longest, and is estimated at eighteen hundred miles, the whole distance being within a fraction of four thousand. We are not informed whether the Company proposes to wait the result of the experiment already commenced, or whether it will bid defiance to sharks, animalcules, and the other perils of the deep, to which wire and gutta percha may be exposed.

A bill has passed the New York Senate providing that all bills of exchange, or drafts drawn payable at sight, at any place within the States, shall be deemed due and payable on presentation, without any days of grace being allowed; and that all such checks, bills and drafts, appearing on their face to have been drawn on any bank or banking institution, or individual, banker, carrying on the business in accordance with the law in relation thereto, shall be deemed due on the day mentioned for the payment of the same, without any days of grace.—Globe.

THE END OF THE WORLD.—While politics and many other ties agitate the European world at large, a new theme has been revived, very injurious to the nerves of timid folks, old women and young children generally. It has re started in Paris and sounds very much like a scientific desire to see our world knocked into "pi."

Thus we find at present in Paris, the question is of quite other things than revolution on the abuses of the ancient regime. Many people are firmly convinced that the prophecy of Dr. Cumming is about to be realized. On knows that Dr. Cumming has irrevocably fixed the year 1857 for the end of the world. For two years past the prophecy of the Scotch Dr. has been nearly forgotten, but the astronomers are making every effort to revive the closing terrors They announce the journey of a ..idly comet with great velocity, which is coming to dash its head or tail against our globe with the intention of reducing it to powder. It is on the 13th of June the shock is to take place, and this date the 13th does not contribute little in terrifying the imaginations of the weak. A learned member of the Institution, M. Babinet, who is familiar with all the heavenly bodies does not deny the vagabond course of the comet in question, he declares on the contrary that it is on its way, but the voyage will be made without accident In case he says the comet strikes the globe, the shock produced on the world we inhabit will be like a fillip on the back of an elephant. A learned German, who considers himself much wiser than M. Babinet, pretends that he will see himself greatly deceived, that the comet is enormous, and of such force that it will precipitate our world into immensity, like a balloon falling from the moon. Which are we to believe, the learned German or the learned Frenchman?

The millenium must be near at hand. Last evening Mr. MACKENZIE carried two bills through a second reading. The first was to alter the present mode of taking evidence in the case of contested elections; by providing that it be taken before the county judge, as in the state of New York, instead of before a committee of the House; and was carried without a division, Attorney General MACDONALD adopting the principle of the measure. Four years ago, the House spent a whole night in opposing the same principle. The other was a bill to render the mayors of towns and cities, Upper Canada, elective. The second reading was carried with a vote of 55 against 4. The only objection urged to this bill was that it had not been petitioned for. There is no denying however, that public opinion indicates a sanction of the measure; and there seems to be every probability that it will become law.—Berlin Chronicle.

Accounts from Washington state that Lord Napier, in pursuance of his instructions, has asked the United States Government to give its "moral support" to France and England in their war upon China; and that Gen. Cass, acting as the agent of the Government, had given a distinct refusal to this proposition. The role offered to the United States was, it seems, not of a sufficiently ambitious nature to come up to the notions of Mr. Buchanan's Government.—That Government is said to contemplate the inauguration of a new foreign policy of a more positive kind than has hitherto existed; that it will seek to effect the conquest and annexation of Central America; for that is what the civilization of that part of the world, when pronounced by American writers, means. England and France will doubtless have their common policy in regard to China, just as if they had obtained the "moral support" of the United States. The chief object of Lord NAPIER'S mission has been stated to have reference to China; and if so it must be considered to have fa l.—Leader

Quite a stir was excited in our usually quiet village during the last week or two by the announcement that there had been discovered within our borders a bed of gypsum, or Plaster of Paris, [sulphate of lime.] A small quantity has been ground up, and it appears very like the material, though it has a darker hue than that imported from Oswego. The tinge is greenish blue. It has been examined by parties engaged in working the Oswego plaster, and we understand it is pronounced by them to be of a richer quality than the imported. It has not been ever yet been chemically tested, and it may yet prove to be nothing more than common limestone, [carbonate of lime] We would recommend that a specimen be sent forthwith to Sir William E. Logan, the Provincial Geologist, that it may be properly tested and its richness ascertained, should it prove to be the sub-tate of lime.—Newburgh Index.

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On the Nos. is a large, roomy and substantial FOUR STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and formerly fitted as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Mills House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in the locality, and which is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus there will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the bank of the said River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale completed.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays,
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being built on the model lines each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers with a degree of comfort and luxury, entirely unequaled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties in New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandize with greater despatch Than has ever yet been attained

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SEYMOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

WINDSOR NURSERIES.

JUST PUBLISHED, a Descriptive Catalogue of the Fruit Trees for sale at the Windsor Nurseries, containing a more accurate description of a greater variety of Fruits, than can be found in any other Catalogue issued on this continent, the whole having been compiled by the undersigned, with great care, from personal inspection of the Fruits grown on his own ground. Directions for Planting, Cultivation, Pruning, &c., will be found in the Catalogue.

Also, in Press, and will be published in a few days, a Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Tulips, Peonias, &c., &c.

Catalogues will be sent gratis, on application, (if by letter post-paid), to the undersigned, at Windsor, C. W.

The stock of Fruit Trees, more especially Apples and Pears—both Standard and Dwarf—is extremely thrifty and well grown, and such as can be procured in no other Nursery. A large portion of them are just commencing to bear, and having been twice trans-planted, can be removed with perfect success.

All orders promptly attended to, the Trees carefully packed so as to carry any distance with safety, and forwarded with despatch.

As the undersigned intends discontinuing the Nursery Business, those wishing considerable lots of Trees will find it for their interest to apply early.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS
CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alternatives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review" and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma
Bowel Complaints
Coughs,
Colics,
Chest Diseases,
Costiveness,
Dyspepsia,
Diarrhœa
Dropsy,
Debility,
Fever and Ague,
Female Complaints,
Gout,
Headaches,
Indigestion
Influenza,
Inflammation,
Inward Weakness
Liver Complaints,
Lowness of Spirits

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Saturday, the

6th day of May next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society, to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid; and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

Rhubarb, or Pie Plant.

Rhubarb may be brought forward very early in spring, in several ways. It is the practice of some to place an old barrel or box (with the bottom and head out) over one or more plants, early in April, and to surround the whole with fresh horse manure, a foot in depth. This stimulates the plant into growth, and the barrel shading the leaves, causes them to shoot up long and rapidly. The stalks are more tender and less acid than when grown in the open air. An amateur of our acquaintance takes up a few roots of rhubarb every fall, and placing them in tubs of dirt, sets them into his cellar to enjoy a nap of about three months, and then brings them into a warm closet behind his fire place. Opening the window blinds in this closet, and giving his plants a free watering, they soon begin to grow, and furnish his family with a healthful and delicious desert, while yet the garden without is covered with snow. We have known others to bring forward rhubarb in green houses and other warm buildings. Others, again, set out several plants near the stable yard, and in the fall place barrels over them, having holes in the top, and cover the whole with leaves or coarse litter. In the latter part of February, they remove the litter, and surround the barrels with warm manure, a foot in depth, and add to the same from week to week as the leaves extend. The manure warms the roots, and gives almost a summer atmosphere within the barrel, so that in about a month's time the barrel is full of leaves finely branched, tender and crisp, which can be used until the other plants have come forward in the garden. The market gardener who forces his plants in this way is sure of a recompense for his trouble. In New York market alone, many thousand dollars worth, are sold every spring. But if any man has not the time or means to pursue either of the above methods, let him set his plants in a sunny aspect, and in the fall cover a portion of them with six or eight inches of black peat, earth or warm litter, and he will hasten their growth in spring a week earlier than those unprotected.

As to the best sorts of rhubarb, we must say, that, as a general rule, the best are those best cultivated. The Giants and Mammoths owe a debt to the manure heap for some of their fair proportions. There is, however, a choice, and these are among the best:—

Tobolsk: Scarlet stalks, small, but very early.

Myatt's Victoria: Large, red stalks, with a rich, fruitlike flavour, and early.

Giant: Large, grown stalks; later than the preceding; a great favorite in England.

Mammoth: A seedling from Giant, stalks sometimes four feet long; highly esteemed about Philadelphia, where it originated.

Downing's Collosial: A large and very excellent variety; stalks often the size of a man's wrist.

Myatt's Linnæus: The least acid of all, and that not an unimportant matter, considering the present price of sugar.

Cahoon's Seedling: One of the newest varieties, and on some accounts the best.

In conclusion, it may be proper to add that the leaf of the rhubarb contains oxalic acid, and is therefore poisonous. The root is an active purgative. The leaf stalk only should be eaten.

Evidence of good Farming.

The requisites and evidences of good farming have thus been enumerated by good authority:—'A good soil, well tilled, and kept from various weeds; lots well fenced, and suited in number to the size of the farm, substantial and convenient barns and stalls of sufficient dimensions to contain the produce of the farm, and to comfortably house the cattle kept on it; a jud iously arranged dwelling, in a neat condition, with a well, and filtering cistern; convenient buildings to facilitate the economical management of the farm—such as a wood house, a waggon and tool house, a workshop, granary and corn house, a convenient piggery, an ice house, ash and smoke house—all secured against decay by being well raised from the gr und and neatly painted or whitewashed; convenient yards attached to the barns and stables, so arranged as to prevent waste of the liquid manure, well sheltered from the blast of winter, and provided with water for the cattle; door yards laid with grass and flower beds and shaded by ornamental trees, in leading to the dwelling of taste, health and comfort; a kitchen garden highly cultivated, and containing the various species of vegetables raised in our climate, with straw berry and asparagus beds; a fruit garden or orchard, with choice apples, cherries, plums, raspberries, gooseberries, blackberries, currants, &c.

Chinese Sugar-Cane.

BY CHARLES MASON.

The Chinese sugar cane, cultivated on ordinary land in the United States, somewhat after the manner of broom corn, grows to a height of from eight to sixteen feet, while in Europe it do es not attain much more than half of this altitude. Its stems are straight and smooth, often covered with a white bloom, or down, having leaves somewhat flexuous, falling over and gently resembling in appearance those of Indian corn, but more elegant in form. When cultivated in hills, containing eight or ten stalks each, it puts forth at its top a conical panicle of dense flowers, green at first, but changing into violet shades, and finally into dark purple, at maturity. In France and throughout the northern sections of the United States it has thus far proved an annual; but from observations made by M. Vilmorin, as well as some experiments in our southern states, it is conjectured that, from the vigor and fullness of the lower parts of the stalks, in autumn, by protecting them during the winter, they would produce new plants the following spring. It stands drought far better than Indian corn, and will resist the effects of considerable frost without injury, after the panicles ripen, but not in its younger and more tender state. If suffered to remain in the field after the seeds have ripened, and have been removed, where the season is sufficiently warm and long, new panicles will shoot out at the topmost joints, one or more to each stalk, and mature a second crop of seeds. The average yield of seed to each panicle is at least a gill. Since its introduction into this country, the Chinese sugar cane has proved itself well adapted to our geographical range of Indian corn. It is of easy cultivation, being similar to that of maize or broom corn, but will prosper in a much poorer soil. It does not succeed so well, however, when sown broadcast with the view of producing fodder, as it will not grow to much more than one-half of its usual height. If the seeds are planted in May, in the middle states, or still earlier at the south, two crops of fodder can be grown in a season from the same roots, the first one in June or July, to be cut before the panicles appear, which would be green and succulent, like young Indian corn, and the other a month or two later, at the time or before the seed is fully matured.

In the extreme northern states, where the season is too short and cool for it to ripen in the open air, the cultivator will necessarily have to obtain his seed from regions further south. If it were important for him to raise his own seed, he could start the plants under glass, in the spring, and remove them to the field or garden at about the period of planting Indian corn, after which they would fully mature. One quart of seeds are found to be sufficient for an acre. If the soil be indifferent or poor, they may be sown in rows two feet apart, and when up, thin the plants from ten to twelve inches asunder, but if the soil be rich, they may be planted in hills, four or more seeds to each, four or five feet apart in one direction, and three or four in the other. The plants may be worked or hoed twice in the course of the season, in a similar manner to Indian corn. Any suckers or superfluous shoots which may spring up may be removed. The seed should not be harvested before it acquires a dark or black hue. Should the plants lodge or fall to the ground by the excessive weight of the seed heads, during the storms of wind or rain, before the seed mature, they may remain for weeks without injury. In collecting the seed, a convenient method is to cut off the stalks about a foot below the panicles, tie them up in bunches of twenty-five, and suspend them in any secure, airy place, sheltered from rain.

If intended solely for fodder, the first crop should be cut just before the panicles would appear, and the second as soon as the seed arrives at the milky stage. It may be tied up in bundles, shocked, and cured, like tops or stalks of Indian corn. If not needed to be employed for any other economical use, after the seed has been removed, and the weather be cool, and the average temperature of the day does not exceed 45 or 50° Fahrenheit, the stocks may be cut up close to the ground, tied in bundles, collected in shocks, or stowed in a mass in a convenient state, for fodder, in sheds or barns, where they will keep without injury, if desired, till spring. In this condition, however, the lower parts of the stalks will be found to be quite hard and woody, and will require to be chopped into small pieces for feeding.

PRECAUTION.—Particular care should be observed not to cultivate this plant in the vicinity of Dourah corn, Guinea corn, nor broom corn, as it hybridges or mixes freely with those plants, which would render the seeds of the product unfit for sowing.—Ohio Cultivator.

REMEDY FOR SORES ON HORSES AND CATTLE.—Lime and lard, says a correspondent of the Maine Farmer, are the best application to old, bad sores, of any kind, that I know, especially if the bone is affected. Take good stone lime, slake dry, and sift through a fine sieve. Put the flour in a bottle, cork tight, and keep it in a dark place, from light and air, and it will keep good for years. Take one part of lime to three parts of lard, in bulk, and mix them well, cold, and apply a proper quantity to the sore twice a day, and cleanse well each time with soap suds. If the sore descends below the outward opening, it must be opened to the bottom, or it will not heal sound. Should bone be affected, the sore probably will not heal, and ought not to till the bone shall be healed. Sores healed under this treatment always heal sound.—If fungus be in the sore, this ointment will clear it all out and keep it out.

Select Poetry.

I Wish he would make up His Mind.

I wish he would make up his mind, ma!
For I don't care much longer to wait;
I'm sure I have limited quite strongly
That I thought about changing my state;
For a sweetheart he's really so backward,
I can't bring him on, though I try;
I own that he's very good tempered,
But then he's so dreadfully shy!

When I speak about love and a cottage,
He gives me a glance of surprise;
And if I but hint about marriage,
He blushes quite up to his eyes!
I can't make him jealous—I've tried it—
And 'tis no use my being unkind,
For that's not the way, I am certain,
To get him to make up his mind.

I've sung him love sonnets by dozens,
I've worked him both slippers and hose,
And we've waltzed out by moonlight together
Yet he never attempts to propose!
You really must ask his intentions,
Or some other beau I must find;
For, indeed, I won't tarry much longer,
For one who can't make up his mind!

The Investment.

'Can you loan me two thousand dollars to establish myself in a small retail business?' inquired a young man not yet out of his teens of a middle-aged gentleman who was poring over a pile of ledgers in the counting-room of one of the largest establishments in Boston.

The person addressed turned towards the speaker, and regarding him for a moment with a look of surprise, inquired:

'What security can you give me, Mr. Strosser?'

'Nothing but my note,' replied the young man promptly.

'Which I fear would be below par in the market,' replied the merchant, smiling.

'Perhaps so,' the young man replied; 'but, Mr. Barton, remember that the boy is not the man; the time may come when Hiram Strosser's note will be as readily accepted as that of any other.'

'True, very true,' replied Mr. Barton, mildly, 'but you know business men seldom loan money without adequate security,—otherwise they might soon be reduced to penury.'

At this moment the young man's countenance became deadly pale, and having observed a silence of several moments, he inquired in a voice indicating keen disappointment:

'Then you cannot accommodate me, can you?'

'Call upon me to-morrow, and I will give you a reply,' said Mr. Barton; and the young man retired.

Mr. Barton resumed his labors at the desk, but his mind was so much on the boy and his singular errand that he could not pursue his task with any correctness, and having made several sad blunders, he closed the ledger and took his hat, and went upon the street. Arriving opposite the door of a wealthy merchant in Milk street, he entered the door.

'Good morning, Mr. Hawley,' said he, approaching the proprietor of the establishment, who was seated at his desk, counting over the profits of the week.

'Good morning,' replied the merchant, bluntly, 'Happy to see you; have a seat. Any news?' and he resumed.

Without noticing these interrogations, Mr. Barton said:

'Young Strosser is desirous of establishing himself in a small retail business in Washington street, and called this morning to procure of me a loan of two thousand dollars for that purpose.'

'Indeed!' exclaimed Mr. Hawley, evidently surprised at the announcement; 'but you do not think of loaning him that sum do you?'

'I do not know,' replied Mr. Barton. 'Mr. Strosser is a young man of business talent, and strict integrity, and will be likely to succeed in whatever he undertakes.'

'Perhaps so,' said Mr. Hawley, doubtfully; 'but I am heartily tired of helping to establish those young aspirants for commercial honors.'

'Have you ever suffered any from such a course?' inquired Mr. Barton, at the same time casting a roguish glance at Mr. Hawley.

'No,' replied Mr. Hawley, 'for I never felt inclined to make an investment of that kind.'

'Then there's a fine opportunity to do so. It may prove better than the stock in the bank. As for myself, I have concluded that if you will advance one thousand dollars, I will contribute an equal sum.'

'Not a single farthing would I advance for such a purpose; and if you make an investment of that kind, I shall consider you very foolish.'

Mr. Barton observed a silence for several moments, and then rose to depart.

'If you do not feel disposed to share with me in the enterprize, I shall advance the whole sum myself.' Saying which, he left the store.

Ten years have passed since the occurrence of the conversation recorded in the preceding dialogue, and Mr. Barton, pale and agitated, is standing at the same desk as when first introduced to the reader's attention. As page after page of his ponderous ledger was examined, his despair became deeper and deeper till at last he exclaimed:

'I am ruined—utterly ruined!'

'How so?' inquired Hiram Strosser, who entered the counting room in season to hear Mr. Barton's remark.

'The last European steamer brought news of the failure of Perich, Jackson & Co., London, who are indebted to me in the sum of nearly two hundred thousand dollars. News of the failure has become general, and my creditors, panic-stricken, are pressing in my paper to be cashed. The banks refuse credit, and I have not the means to meet my liabilities. If I could pass this crisis, perhaps I could rally again, but it is impossible; my creditors are importunate, and I cannot much longer keep above the tide,' replied Mr. Barton.

'What is the extent of your liabilities?' inquired Mr. Strosser.

'Seventy-five thousand dollars,' replied Mr. Barton.

'Would that sum be sufficient to relieve you?'

'It would.'

'Then, sir, you shall have it,' said Strosser, as he stepped up to the desk and drew a check for seventy-five thousand. 'Here, take this, and when you need more, do not hesitate to call on me. Remember that it was from you I received money to establish myself in business.'

'But that debt was cancelled several years ago,' replied Mr. Barton, as a ray of hope shot across his troubled mind.

'True,' replied Strosser, 'but the debt of gratitude I owe has never been cancelled, and now that the scale is turned, I deem it my duty to come to the rescue.'

At this singular turn in the tide of fortune, Mr. Barton fairly wept for joy. His pen was taken up as fast as it went in, and in less than a month he had passed the crisis, and stood perfectly safe and secure; his credit increased and his business improved, while several other firms sunk under the blow and could not rally, among whom was Mr. Hawley, alluded to at the commencement of this article.

'How did you manage to keep above the tide?' inquired Mr. Hawley of Mr. Barton one morning, several months after the event last recorded, as he met the latter upon the street, on his way to his place of business.

'Very easily, indeed, I assure you,' replied Mr. Barton.

'Well do tell how,' continued Mr. Hawley. 'I lay claim to a good degree of shrewdness, but the strongest exercise of my wits did not save me, and yet you, whose liabilities are twice as heavy as my own, have stood the shock, and have come off even better by the storm.'

'The truth is,' replied Mr. Barton, 'I cashed my paper as soon as it was sent in.'

'I suppose so,' said Mr. Hawley regarding Mr. B. with a look of surprise, 'but how did you obtain the funds? As for my part I could not obtain a dollar credit; the banks refused to take my paper, and my best friends even deserted me.'

'A little investment that I made some ten years ago,' replied Mr. Barton, smiling, 'has recently proved exceedingly profitable.'

'Investment?' echoed Mr. Hawley, 'what investment?'

'Why, do you not remember how I established young Strosser in business some ten years ago?'

'Ah, yes, yes,' replied Mr. Hawley as a ray of suspicion lit up his countenance, 'but what of that?'

'He is one of the heaviest dry goods dealers in the city; and when this calamity came on, he came forward and very generously advanced me seventy-five thousand dollars. You know I told you, on the morning I called to offer you an equal share in the stock, that it might prove better than an investment in the bank.'

During this announcement, Mr. Hawley's eyes were bent intently on the ground, and, drawing a deep sigh, he moved on, dejected and sad, while Mr. Barton returned to his place of business with his mind cleared and animated by thoughts of the singular investment.

Interesting from Utah.

From the New Orleans Courier.

We had the gratification yesterday morning of a call from Judge W. W. Drummond, of Chicago, late Chief Justice of Utah Territory. He was in that condition of fine health and spirits in which we always rejoice to see good, manly, mindy democrats. He entertained us for a considerable time with an account of his personal and judicial experience among the saints, and of their manners, habits, history, notions and purposes. Although we were disgusted with this set of miserable fanatics, from accounts which had already reached us, some relations given by Judge Drummond, in addition to those contained in his letter to Attorney General Black, added many revolting shades to the picture.

The Judges position, as administrator of civil law and equity in the Territory, has been such as to give him a better and probably more intimate knowledge of the workings of the whole Mormon system than is possessed now by any one out of Utah or in it. His duties as the representative of federal judicial authority have shown him where the supreme rule of that superstition fettered host re-tes; whose is the will that sways the destines of a considerable nation, what the motive that binds a hundred thousand inhabitants to the girdle of Brigham Young, and what the use made of their power by that astute, capable and bold hypocrite and his subordinates.

A leading characteristic of the followers of the modern Mahomet seems to be a settled and abiding hatred of all "Gentiles," as they are pleased to style all who do not subscribe to their dogmas and conform to their unique and revolting creed. Although they come mainly from the northern portion of this republic, they look upon the United States with no other feeling than hatred. Patriotic love of the country which gave them birth, and which they disgrace, has no place in their bosoms. They have been taught to look on the U. S. government as an oppressive one, whose authority they have a right to resist. All who are without the pale of the church of Latter Day Saints, whether in or out of the territory which they have usurped, they regard as their enemies. They either set at open defiance the decrees of our courts, or dictate to grand or petit juries the indictments they shall report or the verdict they shall render. In notable cases, where the guilt of criminals has been as apparent as the noon day sun, Young and his fellow prophets have forbidden Mormon juries to render a verdict of conviction. In one instance, where a poor helpless dumb boy was tortured in many ways for months, barbarously beaten, and then, while in the agony of his mortal wounds, was fettered and drowned in a brook, when his brutal murderer was sentenced to the penitentiary, Brigham Young took him from the hands of the officers, led him into the tabernacle, proclaimed his absolute pardon, forbade any one to arrest him, and gave him a seat at his right hand.

If Indians commit depredations upon Mormons they are punished without delay or scruple, but if they rob or murder "Gentiles," the prophet extends his protection, and forbids juries to pronounce them guilty. No law, except what emanates from the supreme hierarchy, receives the slightest regard.

The right of private property among the Mormons is almost unknown. Whatever the rulers need they always find means to obtain. "The Lord needs it," is a warrant sufficient to enable Young and his Council to seize upon any property in Utah, and remonstrance or resistance is not only useless but dangerous. If a wealthy disciple arrives from the States, the Church [Young] immediately lays hold of just such a share of his goods as he pleases. The portion, of which the former owner is suffered to retain nominal possession, he is compelled to manage according to the dictation of some prophet or priest. If the prophet says to his neighbor, 'plant that field with potatoes,' the former would lose his lands, and perhaps his life, were he to refuse. The counsel he is thus obliged to obey he is also obliged to ask. The result is, that the actual possession of the great mass of all the real and personal property in Utah is in the four oligarchy of Young and his immediate subordinates.

But if the control over the property of Mormons is tyrannical, that exercised over their most sacred private and family affairs is still more so. If a father has a child, fair and innocent, whom he loves and cherishes, and she captivates the fancy of some leading Mormon, she will be taken from her home by the decree of the elders, and given up by the ceremony of 'sealing' to become the fortieth or fiftieth wife to an old villan, while her predecessors, who have grown old in the same guilty and abominable connection, become his household or cornfield servants. If often happens that a man is sealed to two women at the same ceremony, and cases are not rare where one of the wives so acquired is lost by a divorce before breakfast next morning.

The account given by Judge Drummond of many of these connections, where sometimes a mother and two or three of her daughters were all sealed to the same man, presents a picture of beastly barbarity.—Could a correct idea of these horrible transactions be made known throughout the country, a crusade would be preached against this foul horde, that would soon put an end to their sway.

We were not a little gratified to learn that none or but very few of these Mormons are natives of Southern States. Such a fact speaks volumes in refutation of the mean slanders of abolitionists against Southern society. We would congratulate our fellow citizens of the Northern States upon being rid of so many of their fanatics by emigration to Utah, did we not know that for every one that has left there are hundreds more whose superstition and bigotry are equal in degree if different in form. Mormonism, communism, Maine liquor lawism, aggrarianism, Millerism, spiritualism, woman's rightism, and abolitionism, are all obinenae volucres of the same plumage, none of which are made less odious by any mutual hatred that may exist among them.

Drones.

The habits and traits of animals, through all the orders which Zoology has made in its classifications, from the mastodon down to the most diminutive insect, are full of instruction to man, and they have furnished not a few of the most striking and expressive analogies of our language—often the simple name of the individual animal expressing our thoughts more clearly than a dozen of less emblematic or figurative words, as when we speak of mammoth size, small paces, &c. How striking the analogy between a hive of bees and a community of men. In every community we find people who answer to the two classes of bees—the workers and the drones.

There is nothing more creditable to be said of a business man, than that he is "as busy as a bee." But what is more discreditable, in the whole vocabulary of language, than the epithet of "drone." Who, with the least and feeblest spark of manhood left in his bosom, would run the risk of such an epithet applied to him with the slightest ground of applicability? Surely, no one!

Young men! have you the doubtful advantage of wealthy parentage? Have you been wont to persuade yourself that there is no necessity for your having a profession, or trade, or business of any kind? You are lamentably mistaken, if you have. Correct the mistake at once, let it prove to have been the "mistake of a lifetime," when too late to correct it.

Don't be a "drone." Do something for the sake of your own physical health, and mental contentment, to say nothing of higher motives. Do something that shall make yourself, while living, feel conscious that you live for some useful purpose, and justify your neighbors in saying, when dead, that you were a "useful man."

Shame on all the "drones."

Miscellany.

THE RACES OF MAN.—Dr. Charles Pickering, an English author of a book entitled as above, describes eleven distinct races of men, founded on what he deems essential differences. He thus enumerates them, and the population of each race:—White 350,000,000; Mongolian, 300,000,000; Malavan, 120,000,000; Teligan, 60,000,000; Negro, 55,000,000; Ethiopian, 5,000,000; Abyssynian, 3,000,000; Papuan, 3,000,000; Australian, 500,000. Total, 900,000,000. Dr. Pickering argues that the human race radiated from four centres; one from Thibet, in Asia; two from Abyssinia, in Africa; three and four from North and South America.—Newark Advertiser.

THE capital of the Corinthian order in architecture had its origin in a simple incident:—On the death of a young maid of Corinth, her lover gathered the ornaments she had most valued when living, and placed them in a wicker basket, covered by a tile, upon her tomb. Close to her grave an acanthus had taken root, and the flower shooting forth in the spring, its leaves twined around the basket, and convolved beneath the tile in the form of volutes. Attracted by this display, Callimachus, the founder of the Corinthian order, made it the model for his capital, the tile being the abacus, the foliage of the acanthus the volutes, and the whole forming the capital which adorns his column, about 540 B. C.—Perault.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS ARE THE ONLY RELIABLE REMEDY for the sexual disabilities and disorders of females. In cases where the function peculiar to the organization of the sex have been supressed, suspended, or in any way disordered, the mild and consolatory action of the Pills will speedily restore their regularity. The terrible diseases which result from a neglect of these derangements, are well known to all physicians; and it is of the utmost importance that the means of their prevention should be within the reach of the whole sex. The subject is one upon which it is impossible to enlarge in the columns of a newspaper, but it would argue little care for the suffering of the human race to pass it over in silence.

THE BODY AVENGED.—By too much sitting still the body becomes unhealthy, and soon the mind. This is nature's law. She will never see her children wronged. If the mind, which rules the body, ever forget itself so far as to trample on its slave, it is never generous enough to forgive the injury, but will rise and smite its oppressor. Thus has many a monarch mind been dethroned.

METEOROLOGICAL.—Winds produce cold in several ways. The act of blowing implies the descent upon and over the earth of colder air to occupy the room of that which it displaces. It also increases the evaporation of moisture from the earth, and thus conveys away considerable heat. This increased evaporation and the mixture of warm and cold air usually produce a condensation of vapors in the atmosphere; hence the formation of clouds and the consequent attention of the heat brought by the rays of the sun. And whenever the air in motion is colder than the earth, or any bodies with which it comes in contact, portions of their heat is imparted to the air.

THE VALLEY OF DEATH.—The following is a probable explanation of the origin of the upas-tree story:—"A real valley of death exists in Java; it is termed the Valley of Poison, and is filled to a considerable height with carbonic acid gas, which is exhaled from crevices in the ground. If a man or any animal enter it, he cannot return; and he is not sensible of his danger until he feels himself sinking under the poisonous influence of the atmosphere which surround him; the carbonic acid, of which it chiefly consists, rising to the height of eighteen feet from the bottom of the valley. Birds which fly into this atmosphere drop down dead; and a living fowl thrown into it dies before it reaches the bottom, which is strewed with carcasses of various animals that have perished in the deleterious gas."

CRIME AND CRIMINALS IN LONDON.—London, at present, is labouring under a plague of criminals so accurately known to the police, that the commissioners have actually reported their number to amount to one hundred and seven burglars, one hundred and ten housebreakers (the distinction is the Commissioners," not ours), thirty-eight highway robbers, 783 pickpockets, 3657 sneaksmen or common thiever, eleven horse-stealers, and 141 dog-stealers, besides a whole host of other offenders, but not habitually using violence, which swell the number of criminals in London to 16,000 known to the police.

Provincial Parliament,

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

VOTE BY BALLOT.

TORONTO, April 21st 1857.

Mr. MACKENZIE moved the appointment of a Special Committee of seven members, with instructions to prepare and report a Bill for the introduction of the principle of Voting by Ballot into all elections of members of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly in Upper and Lower Canada. He said that if he voted by ballot, it was in the power of no one to dictate to him how he should vote. The secret vote was the best, leaving no occasion for difficulty or riot. In Australia, the recent introduction of the ballot had wrought well in the doing away with riots. At the recent election in Manchester, all the four candidates had to declare themselves supporters of the ballot. The member for Lambton propose l to bring in a Bill for the registration of voters. That measure ought to accompany the ballot.—Both were good. All the Bank Corporations voted by ballot—so did the Clubs; and why? Because it promoted good feeling and friendship.

Hon. Mr. CARTIER opposed the motion. He had always held that every man was responsible to the whole community for the vote he gave, and it should be known to all who thought proper to enquire. In the United States the ballot was no protection against riots, and the respectable part of society desired to get quit of it. The fatherland of Washington, Virginia, had never adopted vote by ballot. Corruption was more easily practised under the ballot, than by viva voce voting.

Mr. DEWITT said that there were fewer riots in Massachusetts, where there was the ballot, than in this country, under a different system. He was not disposed to copy from Virginia, a State of slaveholders. If the people of the United States wished to get rid of the ballot, why did they not do it. Under their system, what the people wished, they did.

Mr. A. A. DORIN and Mr. EVANTURAL supported the motion. Mr. Evanturel alleging as his reason, the scenes which had occurred at the recent elections in Quebec. It was of importance that an improved system should be adopted immediately, as a general election might perhaps take place sooner than was generally thought. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. SIMARD also stated that the Quebec electors had convinced him that vote by ballot and registration of votes were necessary.

Mr. BROWN said that on this occasion he should give a vote different from that of many of his friends with whom he had been in the habit of acting. He had never heard any strong argument advanced in favour of the introduction of the ballot into this country. In Great Britain perhaps, where many strong cases of coercion had been brought forward, the necessity for such a system might be greater. And if he believed that in Upper Canada any number of the electors went to the polling booth under coercion, he should vote for the ballot. But, as he knew of no such grievance, he considered the bold, straightforward, manly way of voting was the right one.

Mr. DORION—If you are knocked down, as you are going up to vote, what then?

Mr. BROWN—People have been knocked down under both systems. He thought they should rather foster the principle of moral courage in election matters than the opposite. (Hear, hear.)

On a division, the motion was negative by 40 to 27.

YEAS.—Messrs, Bourassa, Chaffers, Christie, Charles, Daoust, Darche, Desaulniers, Dewitt, Jean B. E. Dorion, Antoine A. Dorion, Dostaler, Evanturel, Fraser, Gould, Hartman, Holton, Huot, Jobin, Mackenzie Marchildon, Munro, Papin, Prevost, Roblin, Simard, Thibaudeau, Valois and Wright—27.

NAYS.—Messrs, Baby, Bell, Benjamin, Brodeur, Brown, Cameron, Attorney General Cartier, Cauchon, Cayley, Chapais, Chisholm, Clarke, Conger, Cryslr, Daly, Felton, Fergusson, Ferres, Ferrie, Fortier, Octave C., Fournier, Laporte, Larwill, Lemieux, Lumsden, Macbeth, Attorney, General, Macdonald, McDonald, Roderick, McCann, Masson, Matheson, Meagher, Joseph. Affairs of the South-Western Railway.

From the London Free Press.

Just at the moment when the affairs of the Southern Railway were on the point of being settled, and the various interests harmonised by concessions of one kind or another, Mr. Zimmerman was suddenly removed from amongst us. All the measures of pacification which had been proposed and agreed to—but, unfortunately, not ratified—were completely scattered to the winds and new combinations had to be effected. The old Zimmerman Board, about which such a clamor was made at St. Thomas, and which our contemporary of the Leader endeavoured to uphold, is no more—and the Buchanan influence, which was decried as being of the basest kind, obtained an undoubted mastery long before Mr. Zimmerman's decease, and he wisely gave up the Chancery suit, which he had commenced, and which according to the prophetic gaze of our Toronto Contemporary was to result in the utter discomfiture of the "swindlers," "rogues," "beggars," &c., who had falsified the stock books, and who were to have been shown to the world as little better than a company of blacklegs. But time falsified all the conjectures and effectually dispelled any fault which the credulous portion of the public may have placed in the effect of the wordy tornadoes of the Zimmerman organs. The new Board under the auspices of which the Southern Railway will now be urged forward, consists of the following gentlemen:

James Buchanan, Hamilton.
Thos. G. Ridout, Cashier Bank U. C.
Colin Munroe, Sheriff, St. Thomas.
Adam Hope, Merchant, London.
Charles J. Hope, " "

The names above given are of such a class as to inspire the greatest confidence, and if their plans are not interfered with by local jealousies, or by the members of the old defunct Board, who we understand, set up a claim to a partnership with Mr. Zimmerman, the Southern Railroad scheme will soon be placed upon the London market with every prospect of quickly raising the necessary funds to construct a first class road, in all respects equal to the Grand Trunk, if not better. But, we observe that already a notice of motion has been placed on the books of the Legislative Assembly, by Mr. Rankin, which runs as follows:

Bill to ratify and confirm the proceedings of the Provincial Directors of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company in certain instances and for other purposes.

That is as much as to say that a Bill will be introduced to make all the illegal votes and proceedings of the old Zimmerman Board legal, with the view of destroying the present arrangements, throwing matters into complete confusion once more, and delaying the construction of the road to an indefinite period. All those who really desire that the road should be built should set their faces most resolutely against the recomplication of matters as proposed by Mr. Rankin. No one who sincerely wishes to see the road built can view with any other feelings but those of distrust, the new attempt to throw disorganization into the affairs of the Company. But private interests seem to obliterate, in some men's minds, all sense of their duty to the public, and hence we are not unprepared to see a desperate attempt made by the means of bogus motions and abortive bills, to force the directors to compromise claims which have very little honest ground upon which to rest. But we trust that the Directors will have the fortitude to resist any such attempt, and to put an end with an iron hand to a system of "thimblerigging" which has scarcely had its equal in railway chicanery. Judging from the facts which have been elucidated from time to time, and taking into account the probable motives of men, no doubt can remain on the mind of an impartial observer that Mr. Buchanan has had the public good at heart from the beginning of his participation in the transactions, and we are glad to find that he has at length been able to consolidate the interests in such a way, as not only to place the scheme in a favourable light on the money market in England but to save himself from a gigantic pecuniary loss which, through improper machinations, seemed at one time imminent. Meanwhile, the Amherstburg men have behaved most loyally to the community to which they belong, and have earned for themselves the lasting gratitude of the entire public of that district.

SANDWICH, APRIL 23, 1857.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY QUESTION.

On Wednesday, the 15th Inst., the speaker of the Legislative Assembly, read a despatch from Mr. Labouchere, the Colonial Secretary, in which it was stated that the Home Government had no intention whatever of giving effect to the treaty with France without the assent of the people of Newfoundland, first had; and since the Legislature of that colony had positively refused to ratify the fishery convention, it would therefore fall to the ground. This is, as it should be, and we could readily suppose that Great Britain, would, after so many acts of generosity, have attempted to force upon that colony a convention, in which their interests were so vitally affected, without first consulting them—and more particularly in this case, when they were dealing with a subject where the Home Government, could not be, in a position to judge of the extent of the injury which might be entailed upon the Colonists.

This was shown upon the face of the Treaty, for it distinctly stated, that it would not go into effect until it had received the sanction of the Newfoundland Legislature, and all that was therefore necessary for the rejection of the convention was a firm resolution on the part of that body not to ratify it. This having been done, the Home Government in the most graceful manner yielded to the wishes of the people; and gave the further assurance that it is now the declared intention of the Imperial Government not to give effect to any convention or treaty specially affecting the interests of any of the British American Colonies without first obtaining the assent of the Legislature thereof. This decision is of the utmost importance, as it lays down as a rule, that our freedom is now all that could be desired and required by these Provinces, and we have another opportunity of being grateful for the determination which is shown again on the part of the parent state to recognise the freedom of the Colonies, even in opposition to their own apparent interests.

The Governor General transmits for the information of the Legislative Assembly a copy of a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies on matters relating to Newfoundland.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
Toronto, April 15, 1857.

[COPY]

No. 33.] DOWNING STREET,
March 20th, 1857.

SIR,—I transmit for your information a copy of a despatch which I have this day addressed to the Governor of Newfoundland on the subject of the recent Convention with France which the Legislature of that Colony has refused to adopt.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient humble servant,
Signed] H. LABOUCHERE.
Governor Sir Edmund Head,
Bart., &c.

(COPY.)

No, 10.] DOWNING STREET,
March 20th, 1857.

SIR,—I have the honor to acknowledge despatches of the numbers and dates specified in the margin.

It is Her Majesty's Government entered into the Convention with that of France, which has formed the occasion of that correspondence, they did so in the hope of bringing to a satisfactory arrangement the many difficult and complicated questions which have arisen between the two countries, on the subject of the Newfoundland Fisheries, But they had no with the full intention of adhering to two principles, which have guided them; namely, that the rights at present enjoyed by the community of Newfoundland are not to be ceded or exchanged without their assent; and that the constitutional mode of submitting measures for that assent, is by laying them before the Colonial Legislature. For this reason they pursued the same form of proceeding which had before been pursued in the case of the Reciprocity Convention with the United States, and which was in that case adopted and acted upon by the the Newfoundland Legislature. It was in perfect uniformity with the same principle that it appeared necessary in the present instance to add a condition respecting Parliamentary enactments in order that, if necessary, any existing obstacles to the arrangement in the terms of Imperial Statutes might be subsequently removed.

The proposals contained in the Convention having been now unequivocally refused by the Colony, they will of course fall to the ground, And you are authorized to give such assurance as you may think proper that the consent of the community of Newfoundland is regarded by Her Majesty's Government as an essential preliminary to any modification of their territorial or maritime rights.

I have, &c.,
(Signed,) H. LABOUCHERE.
Governor Darling, Newfoundland.

After the reading of the Message, which was received with applause, it was moved that the House do adjourn; and the House adjourned accordingly, at half past four o'clock.

Below is the petition presented by Mr. Rankin for the purpose of securing a new charter for a Railway between the Detroit and Niagara Rivers, which is intended to supersede the "Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway." Had the application in the first instance been for a charter like this, all the excitement caused by the conflicting interests of two companies and the influence of local prejudice would have been saved. But now that the strife has been ended, and the prospect of a speedy completion of the Southern Railway being effected, we doubt whether it is a consistent or wise move to attempt by the obtaining of another charter to injure the existing one, after having lived through the storm which had surrounded it.

If we are to believe that satisfactory arrangements have been made for the early completion of the Southern Railway, and which appear, to us as being satisfactory, we cannot see the necessity for another competing line at present. Let one be built first, then if there is a necessity for a third line let it be built by all means—but then let us not have further difficulties thrown in the way of our Railway—we have had difficulties enough in all conscience already, without attempting to complicate them further.

Below is the Petition referred to, and upon it a Bill was introduced into the House and read a first time, for the incorporation of a Company to be called the "Great Southern Railway Company."

TO THE HONOURABLE THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF CANADA IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

The Petition of the undersigned, respectfully represents.

That the construction of a line of Railway direct, and by the shortest route from the Niagara to the Detroit River has been long and earnestly desired by the people inhabiting the region of country through which it is proposed to build such Railway.

That although the projects for different portions of such line have been granted to distinct companies, years have elapsed without even a commencement of the work having been undertaken, nor is there the least prospect of a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties growing out of the conflicting pretension of parties whose interests are of a purely local or private character.

That suits in chancery are still pending and undecided, between the opposite parties claiming to exercise control over the affairs of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, and that years may elapse before such suits are brought to a close.

Wherefore your petitioners respectfully pray your honorable House to pass an Act to incorporate the Great Southern Railway Company, and as in duty bound they will ever pray, &c.

THOS. KEATING and others

ST. CLAIR AND TWO CREEKS CANAL.

We perceive that the Lake Shore Townships are astir upon the subject of a Canal to connect Lake Erie and St. Clair River. The intention at present is to procure a survey of this line, that it may be judged whether it will be a more favorable route than the Rondeau one. If we may judge from the reports made upon this route, it possesses many advantages over the other.

Meetings have been held in the Townships of Romney and Tilbury East, in the County of Kent, and Mersea, in the County of Essex, favorable to the project, and the Councils were respectively required to furnish the means for a preliminary survey.

We learn that Messrs. Salter and Pinney have been engaged to survey and report upon the route.

In our next issue we propose to publish the proceedings of the several meetings, and enter into the subject more fully.

EARLY ARRIVAL.—The telegraph yesterday announced the arrival of the ship City of Toronto at Quebec—the first vessel at sea.

We learn from the Colonist that the temporary vacancy in the judicary caused by the absence of Mr. Draper has been filled by the appointment on his circuit business of Mr. Gowan, judge of the County of Simcoe.

We learn from Mr. Gunn, of Hamilton, that he has sold three of his powerful and substantial locomotives to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and that two of them have left his Works, and the other was to follow on Saturday. This is a step in the right way. By encouraging home manufacturers, railroads encourage their own business and the interests of the country, from which they derive their profits, We hope this delivery of three will at once be followed by an order for more from the same establishment.—Globe.

THE STEAMER CLIFTON.—This favorite steamer commenced making daily trips to Detroit on Monday last, leaving this place every morning at 7 o'clock, and Detroit, on her return, every afternoon at 2 o'clock. By this arrangement, passengers dine on board, and arrive in Windsor in time for the 12.20 Way, or 3.30 Through Trains going East on the Great Western Railway; or they can step ashore at Detroit, do business for two hours, and return home the same day. We are pleased to learn that the Clifton and her obliging Commander, Captain Robertson, are as popular as ever on the route, and continue to receive the largest paying share of the business on both sides of the river, notwithstanding the monopoly spirit evinced by Capt. Ward to drive her off by cutting down fares. If the public know their own interest, they will continue to give the Ward boat the cold shoulder until that self-important personage is convinced that he can only secure the public patronage by fair and honourable dealing.

We are authorized to state that all goods which arrive by the Clifton in the evening, consigned to Mr. Clark, will be stored until next day at noon, free of charge for storage! This arrangement cannot fail to meet the approbation of the mercantile community, and secure to the boat and her Agent a liberal share of business.—Sarnia Observer.

We were shown yesterday a counterfeit ten dollars bill of the Zimmerman Bank well calculated to deceive the general public. It was originally a genuine One dollar bill of the Bank named; but by some chemical preparation the red print on the one dollar bill was erased. The One dollar figures were also artfully changed to "tens," and the letter s added to the word "dollar," all being admirably well done. But in other respects it could be seen on examination that the bill bore no resemblance to the genuine Ten. At the left hand corner of the spurious bill there is the numeral letter X; on the opposite corner there is the figure "10," with the bridge between them; whereas in the genuine ten dollar Zimmerman bill the bridge is at the top left hand corner, where the numeral X is in the spurious one. We also understand that there are well executed photograph ten dollar bills of the Commercial Bank in circulation.

ARRIVAL OF BRITISH CAPITAL.—On Friday morning nearly 150 persons from the Oil country reached and passed through Toronto to their various destination, at Galt, Guelph and Goderich. This may be looked upon as the first fruits of the through-ticket system, so wisely inaugurated by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, through whose agency Canada is daily and hourly increasing in wealth and importance—Toronto Times.

BRITISH RAILWAYS.—Great Britain has 8,054 miles of railway completed, making a line of single rails more than sufficient in length to complete a belt of Iron around the globe. The cost of these lines has been £286,000,000. The earthworks of these lines measures 550,000,000 cubic yards. Eighty millions of train miles are run annually on the railways; 5,000 engines and 150,000 vehicles compose the working stock. The companies employ over 90,000 officers and servants, and the engines consume annually 2,000,000 tons of coal; equal to the whole amount exported to the foreign countries and to one half of the annual consumption of London.

At the opening of the New York Court of General Session on Thursday, the Recorder made use of the following language in charging the Grand Jury:—"I regret to say that crime in the city and county of New York is fearfully on the increase. Murders, robberies, larcenies, burglaries, and assault and batteries are of such common occurrence that we regard them as the ordinary incidents of the day. With a public prosecutor as vigilant, efficient and able as any that has held that position for many years in this city, crime increases; neither the public prosecutor nor the courts have the power to check it. The fault lies in inefficiency of the police. A partizan police can never be an efficient one; and least of all, men should never be selected for that position whose only merit is partizan services unscrupulously performed."

A WIDOW IN A BAD FIX.—The New York Mirror says there is a "young," healthy, and handsome "widow" in that city, who has an income of $15,000 a year, and who wants to marry a man who has not the slightest objection to the union. She has recently left a will, giving all his property to a collateral relative, if his widow should wed a second husband. The widow has offered $10,000 a year out of her income of $15,000 to have the condition cancelled, but the party to whom the property would revert is inexorable.

TRANSATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.—The New York Herald of the 16th instant states that the Niagara will probably be ready for sea on Saturday next, by which time the damage to her machinery will be repaired. It is now intended to make her voyage to England her trial trip, so that she will not return to this port until the object of the expedition in which she is to take part—the laying of the great submarine cable between the Old World and the New—shall have been accomplished. The Mississippi will not accompany the Niagara to England, as she has received orders to sail for China; and the Merrimac, which it was supposed would take her place, is not and will not be ready for sea in time for the expedition.—Orders however, have been sent to the U. S steamship Susquehanna, now in the Mediterranean, to repair to England, and assist the Niagara in laying the cable. Professor Morse goes out in the latter vessel.

ANOTHER INDIAN WAR IN PROSPECT.—Information has been received at the Department of the Interior confirmatory of the painful rumors that have been circulated respecting the fate of Henry L. Dodge, United States agent for the Navajo Indians in Mexico, who has been missing for some time past. Major Kendrick commanding at Fort Defiance, sent out a command to search for Mr. Dodge, and his corpse was discovered at a point about thirty miles south of the Zuna, toward the head waters of the Gila river. It is stated that so soon as grass is sufficiently advanced to sustain horses, 1,000 troops will take the field against these Indians, and chastise them so that they will bear the marks of retribution upon treachery and murder. The victim of that cruel act is the son of the Hon. Henry Dodge, the venerable ex-Senator of Wisconsin. — Washington Intelligencer, April 11.

WASHINGTON, April 16.

The Cabinet met at an early hour this morning, to consider the question in regard to New Grenada and orders will be sent in the next Aspiwall steamer for our naval forces in the West Indies and the Pacific to concentrate on the Isthmus of Panama.—Should it be necessary, men will be landed on both sides, that the neutrality of the transit guaranteed to the world.

The British and French Ministers have been advised of this determination.

Orders have been sent to Mr. Bowlin to return at once, if the new administration at Bogota have not offered to open favourable negotiations.

The administration have decided that the fights of our citizens shall be protected.

An agent of the Panama Railroad Company arrived here to-day, who urged the Government to energetic action.

Correspondence of the Daily Times, Washington, 16th, says:—

The administration have been engaged for two days on Mexican affairs, which have assumed a serious aspect in consequence of the immediate danger of the loss of the right of way across the Isthmus of Tehauntepec. There is some trouble concerning this.

Attorney General Black is engaged in drawing up a report on the history of the Tehauntepec transit, and the Gary and Slocum claims to it, and the legal effect of the 88th article of the Godedel treaty, which warrants our interference for the protection of the contract rights of our citizens in respect to that transit.

RUSSIA AND THE GREAT REPUBLIC.—The New York Democrat, a German Republican paper says:—

"It is the custom in Russia, which with the exception of the slave states here, is the only country in the world enjoying (according to the Richmond Enquirer) a reasonably good constitution, that if a member of the Imperial house be whipped by the police, or a serf by his master, the individual so punished must express his gratitude by saying "Nimkrewitschko Patron," translated, "I thank you Milord," Certain Newspaper writers in the United States are made to perform a similar ceremony. Whenever the freedom of the country, or the interests of the free white people, to whom they themselves belong, are kicked and outraged by the aristocracy of the south, they exhibit signs of pleasure, and express enthusiastic gratitude for the infliction.

THE COALITION FLAG.—We understand that a splendid banner is being worked at Manchester, by order of the Peace Society, that Mr. Cobden and his party may go to the country under it. Its material is superior calico, printed with the device of a willow pattern and the motto of "Cant On."—Punch

SIR ASTLEY COOPER'S PILLS.

These celebrated Pills are well known in Europe where an experience of upwards of fifty years has proved them a safe and valuable remedy, and although only a few years have elapsed since they were first made known in America, an immense number of cures have been effected, more than one half of which were considered incurable, and what is more remarkable, cases which possess the very opposite as regards outward symptoms; the balsamic and invigorating effects on the blood, produced by this fine medicine is perfectly miraculous; many who have kept their beds for years, have been so speedily reinvigorated with an infusion of new, rich, and pure blood, and consequently of new life and strength, that their reappearance among their fellow beings who had long given them up as incurable, is looked upon as the greatest of the many great wonders of this miraculous age.

Thousands who have been afflicted in every possible way, are daily hearing their grateful testimony to the great benefit they have received from their use, and who are now rejoicing in a renewed state of health, after having long despaired of ever possessing it again.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—To prevent imposition, be sure to ask for the Genuine Sir Astley Cooper's Pill, prepared in London, and New-York; if you ask for Sir Astley Cooper's Pills only, you will get a spurious compound, which will not have a beneficial effect. The Genuine Pills have an excellent likness of Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box; also the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, MacPhail & Co. London and New-York, on each box, and on the directions.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; "John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

Townsend the Murderer Arrested.

On Tuesday last we were shown a telegraphic despatch from Cleveland, Ohio, to the police authorities here, announcing the capture of that notorious murderer and robber Townsend — who committed such diabolical outrages in this portion of country some two years since. Fearing that the making public of such important and gratifying intelligence might interfere with the designs of the authorities here, we refrained from doing so at their request. That Townshend has really been arrested, scarcely admits of a doubt; for the Cleveland Herald, which, at first, was rather dubious as to the prisoner being the veritable Townsend, in a postcript says:

"We are told that a man in this city, who knew Townshend well, has to-day been to the jail and recognizes in this man the veritable Townshend, and says there is no doubt of that fact, for he knew him like a book. Of course the prisoner when addressed, denied that as his name."

A man named Ayles, keeper of the New London House," had Townsend arrested, and will, we suppose, be entitled to the $5,000 reward offered for his apprehension. The prisoner gives his name as Robert McHenry, and says he has been with Walker in Nicaragua, and just returned. He had on his person when taken, a long revolver.

The foregoing is from the Hamilton Banner, and the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser has the following on the same subject:

Our readers will recollect that three years since the people of Canada West were kept in terror by the bold and remorseless murders of the highwayman Townshend, and though he was twice arrested he escaped as often, and finally disappeared without leaving a trace of his whereabouts.

On Saturday evening about seven o'clock, says the Cleveland Plaindealer, Mr. John Iles, who keeps the New London Porter House, below St. Clair, and who had been an officer in Canada, and engaged in the pursuit, recognized in one of his guests the notorious Townshend who had given so much trouble. He was sure of the identity of the visitor with Townshend, and he gave information to officer Gallagher who called upon officers McKinistry and McArthur, who arrested him during the evening. He was told that he was arrested for stealing a trunk at Buffalo, at which he said that they must be mistaken. A Colt's revolver was found among his effects. He is a smart, well formed man of 28 or 30 years, and seems not to be easily scared. He claims to have been a sailor in 1852 on the brig Powhattan with Capt. Turnbull, and calls himself Robert McHenry. He has a scar on the face, and answers to the description in the Canadian circulars. Several persons who knew Townshend give their opinion that this is the same man, yet the identity is not fully established. He has just returned from Walker's army to which he belonged. If the prisoner proves to be the murderer, there will be great credit due to Mr. Iles and the officers, and a reward of $5,000 to be divided.

Election of Bishop.

A deputation of the clergy and laity of the proposed Western Diocese waited yesterday upon the Lord Bishop Elect of Toronto, at his residence in this city, and laid before him documents showing that upwards of ten thousand pounds had been provided for the endowment of the future Bishop. His Lordship, being fully satisfied therewith, proceeded to the Government House, where His Excellency the Governor General received them most courteously, and declared his readiness to comply with their wishes, by designating as Bishop whatever gentleman should receive the sufferages of the delegates representing the clergy and laity of the new diocese. The Bishop of Toronto has named the 13th of May next, as the day on which the Convention or Synod shall assemble to choose their Bishop.—Colonist.

The Comet and the Earth.

Some excitement has been produced by the announcement that a comet would come in contact with the earth, some time soon, and occasion its partial destruction. The unlikelihood of such an occurrence may be shown in a few words.

1st. The earth and the comet should have to arrive at the same part of the earth's orbit exactly at the same time—if either were a little too soon, or a little too late, there would be no concussion. Now the probability of their keeping such time is very small. In the year 1836, a comet crossed the path of the earth's orbit about a month before the earth arrived at the place where it had crossed, and was some million of miles distant at the time of the crossing.

2d. Even if the collision should happen, it would not injure the earth. A comet may be said to be almost all tail; now the quantity of matter proved to be contained in any comet is small, and diffused over a large space; indeed, some say that the tail is due to mechanical action, and its density cannot exceed that of air. The nucleus has been seen, by means of a telescope, when the tail of a comet was directly between them and the observer. It is a fact known to all astronomers, that about the year 1700, a comet passed so near the planet Jupiter, as to be mechanically affected by his attraction than it was by that of the sun, and therefore it was turned out of its orbit; but the planet and his satellites moved on, taking no notice of the intruder, or being at all disturbed by it. The only effect a comet might produce, if it came in contact with the earth, is this: it might leave behind some of its matter, and thus poison our atmosphere. However, the probability that a comet will ever come in contact with the earth, is about one chance that it will, and two million that it will not happen. The above ideas are due to a distinguished astronomer of this State, who is justly regarded as the highest authority.—Newark Advertiser.

A Rich Man Convicted of Robbery.

The Court of Queen's Bench has been the scene of a criminal examination, which is represented by the Montreal Pays as absorbing the public interest in that city among all classes. The facts are briefly these: Jean B. Theophile Dorion, of St. Eustache, is one of several sons of a wealthy man formerly M. P. P. for Two Mountains. At his death the brothers became disunited, and Theophile became the object of suspicion and jealousy to the rest. He had purchased mills at St. Polycarp, and gave the management of it to his brother, Dr. Severe Dorion, who received for his services in that capacity £200 a year. In 1849 the mills were destroyed by fire. At this time Theophile owed to his manager £1,500 for which he had given him several promissory notes Severe being without employment, emigrated to Syracuse, and there meeting with a charming and rich American lady, married her. After two years, Severe fell sick, and returned for the benefit of his native air to St. Eustache, leaving his wife at Alexander Bay, where they were stopping for a few days. Theophile was living in the same house with his mother, and after a while Madame Severe joined them, and in a short time Severe died there of Consumption. The Doctors, Theophile Dorion and Hall were unceasing in their care and attendance On leaving the States, Severe brought with him the promissory notes signed by his brother, which his mother, and after a while valuable jewellery besides. Part of these were placed in his wife's chest, and the rest in a cabinet of which she kept the key. The chest and cabinet were found in Madame Dorion's private chamber. One night after her husband's illness was pronounced fatal, she was awakened by a person who demanded of her proper clothes to enwrap the body of her husband, who was at the last gasp. The young wife furnished them, and passed into the chamber of the dying man. She however retired, on the intimation of Theophile that his brother's repose, and next morning felt herself sick. She complained to the prisoner, (Theophile, his physician) who administered something to her, which threw her into profound sleep, during which her husband died. On returning to her chamber she perceived that her papers and effects were stolen. The widow, a stranger in this country, did not wish to enter a suit against Theophile, but begged of the members of the family to obtain from her brother-in-law the restoration of the property. He, however, denied that he had, or had taken anything. Madame Dorion then turned after the funeral to Syracuse, gave birth there to a infant; and in process of time married. A new claim was made, in this relation, to the stolen property. The trial occupying several days, has taken place before Judge Aylwin, and Theodore Dorion pronounced guilty. Le Pays, from which journal we have taken this, does not state explicitly the nature of the charge. It must, of course, embrace the robbery of the jewels and notes, if not also the drugging of the lady to facilitate the attempt.

Will of the late Dr. Dunlop.

We give below a copy of the will of the late William Dunlop, M. D., for many years M.P. for Huron, and well known personally to many of our readers, having been stationed here, on duty during the late war.

In the name of God, Amen.

I, William Dunlop, of Guerbread, in the Township of Colborne, County of Huron, Western Canada, Esq., being in sound health of body and mind, just as usual, which my friends who do not flatter me, say is no great shakes at the best of times—do make my last will and testament as follows: revoking of courses, all former wills.

I, the said William Dunlop, of Guerbread, and all other landed property I may be possessed of, to my sisters, H. R. S. and E. R. D.; the former because she is married to a Minister, who, may God keep him, she henpecks; the latter because she is not married, nor is she likely to be, for she is an old fool and has refused more than I have fingers to them and their heirs, my share of the stock and implements on the farm; provided always, that the inclosure round my brother's grave, be reserved, and if either of them shall die without issue, that the other shall inherit the whole. I leave my sister in law D. D. all my household furniture, and such trifles, with the exceptions hereinafter mentioned:—

I leave my silver tankard to the eldest son of old John, as the representative of the family. I would have left it to old John himself, but he would have melted it down, to make Temperance Medals, and that would have been sacrilege. However, I leave him my big horn snuff box: he can only make Temperance horn spoons of it.

I leave my sister J. my bible, the property formerly of my great great grandmother, B. H. of Woodhill; when she knows as much of the spirit as she does of the letter, she will be and she should be a much better Christian than she is.

I also leave my late brother's watch to my brother S. exhorting him a thousand and the last time to stop slugging and ratiocalism, and all other isms, that do most easily beset him.

I leave my brother A. my big silver snuff-box, as I am informed, he is rather a decent christian, with a snug belly and jolly face.

I leave parson C. Maggy's husband, the snuff-box I got from the Simcoe Militia, as a small token of my gratitude; he taking a sister that no man of taste would have taken.

I leave John C. a silver teapot to the end that he may drink tea therefrom to comfort him under the affliction of a slatternly wife.

I leave my books to my brother A., because he has been a "Ping'y walla" that he may yet learn to read with them.

I give my silver cup with——— in it—to my sister J. G. D. because she is an old maid and pious, and therefore given to horning, and also my great grandmother's snuff box, as it looks decent to see an old woman snuff.

I do hereby appoint John Dunlop, Esq., Alexander Dunlop, Esq., William Chalk, and Wm. Stewart, to be my Curators, to my last Will and Testament.

Alliance Between England and France on the China Question.

The following article from the Pays, the government paper, corroborates what has been said relative to the arrangements concluded in Paris between the British and French governments to act together in the Chinese seas.

"The Chinese affair, examined in a proper point of view, presents two phases perfectly distinct—the past and the future. The first belongs to history; the second involves the interests of various powers, whose commerce at present is seriously damaged, and who perceive the necessity for putting an end to the present state of things. It is to do so that an honorable understanding has lately been come to between France and England. The latter power sends numerous reinforcements to Admiral Seymour, who will have an important maritime force under his command. France, on her part, has maintained the squadron of Admiral Gourin, in the Chinese seas, with a view to future operations; and this squadron is to unite with the naval division commanded by Rear Admiral Bigault de Genouilly. Thus our marine will be on a respectable footing. The ships of war will have, for their disposal steam frigates, corvettes and gun boats, so valuable for an attack on the coast, and for ascending the rivers. The maritime force of the two nations thus employed will necessarily bring the Chinese authorities to terms which will put an end to the war, and impose the former state of affairs. At the same time that the British government is sending reinforcements to China, it sends special commissioners charged with opening fresh negotiations, which will have the greater chance of success, as the Chinese will see that from the united forces brought against them, it will not be to their advantage to continue the war.

M. de Bourboion, French charge de affairs to the court of China, left by the Indian mail, which sailed from Marseilles on the 12 inst. He carried with him instructions to Admiral Rigault de Genouilly, who commanded the French fleet in the Chinese seas, to combine in future their operations with those of the British forces, conformably to the arrangements concluded in Paris between Lord Cowley and the French government.

THE REGIMENTS FOR CHINA.—The Regiments detached for service in China have been reviewed by the Duke of Cambridge, Major-General Ashburnham, who has been appointed to the command, is a son of the late Earl Ashburnham. He is said to bear a singular resemblance to Louis Napoleon, which he increases by aping the manners and coiffure of the Emperor. The Times, however, intimates that the greatest portion of the army now employed in Persia will be transferred to the service in China, and says that it is stated that orders have been received to discontinue the surveys about to be made of the two or three vessels engaged to convey troops from England. In Persia a three months' armistice had been agreed upon, before the arrival of Asheran of the news of the definite conclusion of peace by Ferouk Khan. This armistice commenced on the 1st of March.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST AMERICAN CAPTAINS.—Sir A. Banneman, Governor of the Bahamas, in his recent message to the Legislature, made some serious charges against American shipmasters trading to the islands. He asserts that some of them —there are honorable exceptions—are so utterly unworthy the confidence placed in them that they secretly agree with the wreckers for a share of the salvage, and then run the vessel and cargo to wreck. The Governor recommends some effectual check for this crime, which is very horrible if practised.

Dates from the City of Mexico are to the 2d, and from Vera Cruz to the 4th instant. The Mexican republic has solemnly adopted a new constitution. It declares in its second article that all persons born in the republic of the Mexican United States are born free, and that all slaves touching the Mexican territory regain by that act their liberty, and have a right to the protection of the laws. The clergy had openly declared against and denounced the new constitution in all the churches. The Government had taken notice of this, and were about to call the Archbishop and other prominent ecclesiastics to account. It was feared that during Holy Week disturbances so fomented might occur. The army had sworn to the new constitution. Still anarchy and discord prevailed throughout the States generally. Isolated cases had occurred where the Government officials, including three magistrates of the Supreme Court, had refused to swear to it. They were to be, or had been, removed.

ON THE TOP OF CHIMBORAZO.—The summit of the Chimborazo has ately been found to be quite ascendable. When baron Humboldt, with his friend Bumpland, on the 23rd of June, 1802, meant to ascend the Chimborazo which at that time was considered to be the highest mountain on earth of the globe, they got back at the height of 5996 metres, an insurmountable wall of rock barring his advance. Boussingault the second who attempted the ascent, arrived on 16th Dec., 1831 only up 6004 metres—95 metres higher than Humboldt. Now, a late number of the "Journal des Debats," publishes from the "Echo du Pacifique," of 31st of Jan., a letter from the French traveller, M. Jules Remy, who, in company with the English traveller, Mr. Brenchly, ascended the mountain from a different side on the 3rd of November, 1856; and although blood entirely by thick veils of cloud, and felt it can be accomplished. The column of air in that height was still quite sufficient for breathing. The shortness of breath and other symptoms usually noticed on reaching such heights have been perceived neither by Mr. Remy nor by his English companion, as the former expressly states.

No less than five Earls and one Countess have died within the month of Febuary, viz: the Earls of Ellesmere, the Earl of Harewood, the Earl of Castle Stuart the Earl of Fife, Earl Amherst, and the Countess of Huntingdon.

REPRESSING MODESTY.—Our brother of the Leader winded in a notation to a Commitee of "Hon. House," after the following fashion:—

"Let the Committee see to it that they do their duty in these several particulars, and they shall be rewarded by the thanks of The Leader and the approbation of the public."

If the Legislators in question do not snap at this offer, they must be something less than human.

Only think, lads, of being "rewarded by the thanks of the Leader!" As the illustrious Mr. Squeers observed, in reference to the skim-milk and water with which his disciples were regaling themselves: "Here is richness!"—Streetsville Review.

An editor in the far West has bought a race-horse, for which he paid two thousand dollars. On being asked what an editor had to do with a race-horse, he replied that the was to be used in catching runaway subscribers."

North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury equal to any boats on the lake, and all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo, on the Railroads, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Seymour, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of John Hosmer, agent, Detroit.

GREEN'S
GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,
Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighboring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supportedhim since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!
THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!

The virtues of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the counties, tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry Eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and then the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Unfailible Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, shells, and gunshot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throat,
Lumbago,	Sores of all kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Sprains
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,
Ringworm,	Ulcers,
Salt Rheum,	Venereal Sores,
Scalds,	Wounds of all kinds.

N. B.—Sold at the Manufactories of Professor Holloway, 80, Maiden Lane, New York, & 244 Strand, London, by all respectable Druggists and dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in pots, at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each pot.

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one returning such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

The Wild Witch-Hazle Brake.

Song.

BY WM. W. FOSDICK.

In the wild witch-hazle brake,
By the silver-sanded lake,
Where the white-leaved aspens shake,
I with Carrie roved.
Zephyrs kissed the green-wood bough,
Branches wooed the lakelet's brow,
And I kissed, I know not how,
Her I dearly loved.

Upon the ground her eyes were set,
Plucking at a violet,
Which her dewy tears had wet,
While her cheek was flush.
With a kind that fear I chased,
And around her slender waist
Tenderly my arm I laced—
She did nought but blush.

The wild witch hazle-brake was green,
No eye could pierce our leafy screen,
And not another soul hath seen
The nameless joy we bless.
"Carrie," said I then, "be mine—
Let us thus forever twine?"
And she smiled—oh! bliss divine!
Smiled, and whispered, "Yes!"

A DANDY GOOSE.—"Ahem! So here I am, between two tailors," said a dandy at a public table, where a couple of young tailors were seated, who had begun business. "Very true," said one of them, "we are now but beginners, and can only afford to keep one goose between us!" Exit dandy in a hurry, pretending that he had forgot something in his room. He forgot his way back, too.

MORNING REFLECTIONS.—Magistrate: What has brought you here sir? Prisoner: Two policeman, please your honor. Magistrate: Then I suppose liquor had nothing to do with it? Prisoner: Yes, sir; they were both drunk.

Gentleman—"Is Mrs. M. in?" Servant—"No sir, she's not at home." Gentleman—"Ah, I am sorry, as I owe her some money and have called to pay it." When—Voice from over the balustrade—"O, I am in. To be sure I am. Why, Sally, didn't you know that? Ask the gentleman to walk up."

SOME years ago, the late Emperor Nicholas was visiting Naples, when King Bomba ordered a grand review of his little army.—After the ceremony, the King rubbed his hands, saying to the Czar, "Well Sire, is it not a very fine troop? Could I not march against France with such an army?" "Yes certainly," replied the Czar, "but the French Custom-house officers might not let you pass."

PRINTER'S JOKES.—During the Mexican war, one of the newspapers hurriedly announced an important item of news from Mexico:—that Gen. Pillow and thirty-seven of his men had been lost in a bottle.

Some other paper informed the public not long ago, "That a man in a brown surtout was yesterday brought before the police court on a charge of having stolen a small ear from a lady's workbag." The stolen property was found in his waistcoat pocket."

"A rat," says another paper, "descending the river, came in contact with a steamboat—and so serious was the injury to the boat that great exertions were necessary to save it."

An English paper once stated, "That the Russian General Rackinoffhowsky, was found dead with a long word in his mouth."

Again: A gentleman was yesterday brought up to answer a charge of having eaten a stagedriver for demanding more than his fare."

At the late Fourth of July dinner in the town of Charleston, none of the poultry was eatable except the owls."

WANTED.—An Albany paper has the following advertisement:—Wanted, an able bodied Irishman to hold my wife's tongue—she and I being unable to keep it quiet. We learn there were no applicants.

WISE men are instructed by reason; men of less understanding by experience; the most ignorant by necessity; and beasts by nature.

"Oh, yes, Joe; my father's an old mariner—regular salt." "Why, I never knew that.—What sort was he in?" "the working service. He goes cruising around all nights, and in the morning, when he comes home, he goes a whaling the whole family, from the old woman down, and boxes the compass about the hired girl's ear."

NOT BAD.—That was a pretty fair joke we heard the other day of one of our darkies evading a late ordinance of the Town Council in regard to dogs following negroes. The patrol "met up" with him on Sunday and required his pass, which he promptly delivered over for inspection. He was then about to leave, when one of the patrol casually enquired "what budget that was he had upon his back." With a cunning leer of triumph Collins good humoredly replied: "He, he, massa; its dis niggers's dog. Ye while folks will boss Feb. Nicholas as 'tend int, make de law, 'bout nigger letter dog foller 'im; but you never say nuthin' 'bout nigger totin dog." And he went on his way rejoicing.—Edgefield Advertiser.

MISUNDERSTANDING.—The other day, the conductor of a train on a New York railroad discovered an Irishman in the car soon after starting from Rome, and demanded his fare. Pat declared he had no money. The conductor, after lecturing him, told him to leave at the first stopping place, not far distant. Accordingly, Pat was one of the first to get off at the next station. But judge of the conductor's surprise and wrath to find him aboard when fairly under way. "Did I not tell you to get off?" "And sure I did." "Why, then, are you here again?" "And sure, did you not say, "All aboard!"

A theological student examination was asked whether there was any schism in the Church that could be justifiable under any circumstances. After pondering for a little while, he said he thought there was a schism that might be justifiable; and that was—a witticism.

AT a recent examination of a bankrupt, it was observed that he kept a great number of banking accounts. "I see," said the learned judge, "that you had six or seven bankers; what could you want so many for?" "To overdraw them, to be sure," was the frank and candid reply.

Renovating Grass Lands.

The very best way, undoubtedly, to improve meadows or pastures that have become impoverished, is to plow them up, manure heavily, and seed them down again. If infested with daisies and other weeds, they should be broken up in the fall, and planted with potatoes or other root crops for several years, and then laid down to grass. If, however, the land is low and wet, and weeds not very troublesome, they may be plowed in mid summer, manured and harrowed thoroughly, and in September sowed with grass seed. In most cases, a fair crop of hay will be realized the next season.

But when it is not convenient to pursue this thorough treatment, a good effect may be produced by top-dressing. Spread a good layer of compost or well rotted manure on the sward, scarify it with a heavy harrow, and sow with a mixture of six quarts Timothy and one-half bushel each red-top and rye-grass seed to the acre, and follow with a light harrow to cover the seed. The manure should be applied quite early in the Spring, so as to be washed in by the April rains. Where barn-yard manure is not abundant, various other fertilizers may be used to good advantage. Guano may be applied at the rate of two hundred to three hundred pounds an acre. It should be mixed, a week before it is wanted for use, with dry vegetable loam, take four parts of loam to one of guano, and applied broadcast, very early in spring. Lime (air slacked, is very useful to cold, clayey soils; it is death on mosses and sorrel. Muck and lime, mixed at the rate of five cords of the former to seven bushels of the latter, often produce surprising effects on worn out grass-fields. Muck mixed with unleached ashes, at the rate of a cord of the first, to ten bushels of the last, is nearly as good as barn-yard manure. Where the land has long been devoted to pasturage, it is recommended to give a dressing of bone-dust, ten bushels to the acre. A mixture of plaster, ground bones and powdered charcoal has also been used with very gratifying results.

We hope our readers, in this matter, will try some of these plans, and send us reports of their success.—American Agriculturist.

Corn Meal for Milch Cows.

In the fall of 1852, I began to feed three farrow cows for the purpose of supplying a milkman in this vicinity with milk for market. I had a few beets and turnips with which I began, and, as I designed the farrow cows for the butcher in the spring, I commenced giving them meal from corn and barley, some ten bushels all grain; then corn meal alone increasing till they ate one peck each per day. I tried it cooked and raw, wet and dry, mixed with cut fodder, composed of hay, straw and corn stalks cut up together, varying the amount of each as convenience might suggest, as I think all animals require a variety.

Now for the result. The cows increased in milk, giving more on the above feed than they had done on grass during the summer. Contrary to my expectation, they did not improve very fast on the food given, and I was obliged to dry them up early in March, to get them fit for the shambles. My cows that were coming in in the spring had two quarts of corn meal each per day, and they also gave liberally. The milk sold daily, gave an excellent opportunity for testing the amount given at the time. I made up my mind that corn meal was the best for milk of any food for the milch cow, and still think so, if good, rich milk is wanted. It has been tried considerably in this vicinity, with the same results as here given. I fed cut feed, but I do not think that would vary the result with me, if the cows got their daily allowance, I get the returns.

RELIEVING CHOKED CATTLE.—The following method of relieving neat cattle, when choked by a turnip, potatoe, &c., has been tried, it is said, and never known to fail:—Pour into the throat of the animal, from a junk bottle, a pint or so of lamp or sweet oil, at the same time rubbing the throat briskly with the hand. Immediate relief will follow. This is easily tried, and may be the means of saving many valuable animals.

CURRANT BUSHES.—Some years ago we saw it highly recommended to trim currant bushes as shade trees, and, as we had a good fruit garden, we adopted the suggestion; but in the second season after we met this difficulty, the shrubs would split open at the forks, and we made up our mind that nature had not designed this plant to be grown in that way. We have closely observed this matter ever since, and if we have any grown in clusters of canes, like raspberries. The fruit seems more abundant in shade, as we find the largest and best bunches in the dense foliage and low down upon the canes.

Cooking Dried Apples.

To the Editor of American Agriculturist.

You were kind enough to compliment my apple sauce and apple pies, and request me to send a note of the process of making them. The sauce was made by simply boiling the dried fruit quite soft, and rubbing them through a common colender, which gives a nice pulpy mass, and separates all remnants of cores, skins, and "hard spots." The sauce is then seasoned to suit the taste. A little cider boiled down half or more in Autumn when new and sweet, adds to the flavor of any kind of dried apple sauce.

The pies were made of the same sifted sauce, seasoned and put into raised crust.—A very good crust, and one which is far more digestible and nutritious than that literally full of fat (shortening,) is made as follows: Lisco've half a tea-spoonful of soda in a tea-cup full of sweet milk. Take enough flour to thicken the milk to a stiff dough, mix well with it a tesspoonful of cream of tartar, and a table-spoonful of butter or lard. If you think the above particulars will be new to any of your lady readers, you are of course at liberty to print them. HARRIET.

HARDY PEARS FOR THE NORTH.—Seckel Flemish Beauty, Gilliard, Virgalieu, Sheldon Lawrence, Winter Nelis; on pear stocks, Louise Bonna Jersey, Tyson, Angouleme Wickfield, Gisband's Summer, Clout Morceau, on quince.

As equivocation is worse than a lie, for it is a lie guarded.

Select Poetry.

The Voice of Spring.

I come, I come! ye have call'd me long,
I come o'er the mountains with light and song,
Ye may trace my step o'er the wakening earth,
By the winds which tell of the violet's birth,
By the primrose-stars in the shadowy grass,
By the green leaves opening as I pass.

I have breathed on the South, and the chestnut flowers,
By thousands, have burst from the forest-bowers,
And the ancient graves, and the fallen fanes,
Are vail'd with wreaths, on Italian plains—
But it is not for me, in my hour of bloom,
To speak of the ruin or the tomb!

I have passed o'er the hills of the stormy North,
And the rivers hath hung all his tassels forth,
The fisher is out on the stormy sea,
And the reindeer bounds through the pasture free,
And the pine has a fringe of softer green,
And the moss looks bright where my step has been.

I have sent through the wood-paths a gentle sigh,
And call'd out each voice of the deep-blue sky,
From the night-bird's lay through the starry time,
In the groves of the soft Hesperian clime,
To the swan's wild notes by the Iceland lakes,
When the dark fir-bough into verdure breaks

From the streams and founts I have loosed the chain;
They are sweeping on to the silvery main,
They are flashing down from the mountain brows,
They are flinging spray on the forest boughs,
They are bursting fresh from their sparry caves
And the earth resounds with the joy of waves.

Come forth, O ye children of gladness, come!
Where the violets lie may be now your home.
Ye of the rose-cheek and dew-bright eye,
And the bounding footstep to meet me fly,
With the lyre, and the wreath, and the joyous lay,
Come forth to the sunshine, I may not stay!

The summer is hastening, on soft winds borne,
Ye may press the grape, ye may bind the corn,
For me I depart to a brighter shore,—
Ye are marked by care, ye are mine no more.
I go where the loved who have left you dwell
And the flowers has not Death's,—fare ye well! farewell!

MRS. HEMANS.

The Play in China.

BY A FRENCH NAVAL OFFICER.

At the end of the street or alley we now entered, we observed a vast court surrounded with scaffoldings crowded with people, and at the further end, on a stage, the actors were to perform their parts—the river, forming the harbor of Canton, and its countless vessels, being the background of the picture.

To think of forcing our way through the crowd which encumbered the pit (the court,) was perfectly useless; but thanks to the eloquence of M——, we entered a house, through which we were allowed to pass on payment of half a gourde each; and in this manner succeeded in gaining one of the scaffoldings which was on a level with the first story of the house.—Here we found several rows of benches, ranged one above another, and selecting one of the highest, for the purpose of commanding a better view, we quietly took took our seats.

An oblong enclosure was shut in on both sides by the boxes—covered galleries erected on wooden stakes—and here were assembled all those who paid for their admission. The stage, likewise supported on pillars, covered, not with matting, like the gallery, but with painted cloth, formed one of the small corners of the right angle, and extended to the edge of the water; finally, a wall which joined the house through which we had entered, to another house opposite, completed the enclosure of the vast space, leaving only one door open for the crowd, who occupied the pit gratis.

At the moment of our arrival, a clever mountebank belonging to the troupe was filling up the pause between the acts by passing his body through the rounds of a ladder, jumping backwards over chairs, &c. As this was not a very exciting spectacle, I bestowed all my attention on the assembly among whom we now found ourselves, and wherein we were the only Europeans. I remarked, first of all, that among all those grave Chinese heads surmounted by black lead pan cups or conical hats, were some really pretty women, whose coiffures were ornamented with flowers and gold pins. Their costume, though simple, was, nevertheless, scrupulously neat; but although they possessed the most diminutive feet in the world, these beauties, with their oblique eyes, must have belonged to an inferior class of society, as the higher orders of women never show themselves in public. On one side, but at the extreme end, there were also three or four girls, whose friends seemed apprehensive lest we should approach them. At our feet, on the neighboring benches, the good burghers who had, probably, been sitting in the same place since the morning, were eating fruit and sweetmeats, which were supplied by ambulatory merchants; while others calmly smoked their metal pipes, whose narrow bowls will admit of only one pinch of tobacco at a time. A servant attended on each pipe, lighting it with a sort of phosphoric match and the operation has constantly to be renewed, as a longer puff than usual is sufficient to exhaust the bowl.

All these people interested me very much; but the really exciting feature of the place, and of which we never grew tired, was the pit. Picture to yourself some thousands of Chinese stripped down to their waists in order to save their clothes—their long queues rolled round their heads, lest these ornamental appendages should be laid hold of by the crowd—squeezing and pushing each other until they form a compact mass —a single block of human beings.—There lies before us a sea of shaved heads, all of the same form and color, as if it was the head of a single man repeated a thousand times in a multiplying mirror. Now calm, now agitated by an imperceptible movement, the surface of this sea presents the appearance of a brown cloth, dotted with flat noses, and eyes that wink with desperate excitement. Suddenly the waves lulled for a time, became agitated by some unknown cause, dash forwards, then backwards, with irresistible force, and a deafening sound—a confused murmur of voices laughing, shouting, crying and menacing. The heavy stakes which support the stage are scarcely strong enough to resist the repeated shocks of those rolling masses. In vain those who are nearest endeavor, by catching at the stakes, to make buttresses of themselves, to stay the impetuous flood—their arms at length drop, and they are speedily carried away under the scaffolding down to the river.

If every thing in this strange theatre appeared to us curious and new, our presence produced assuredly the same effect on the assembly, for besides the investigations of which we were continually the subject, every burst of applause, as the play went on, was accompanied by the pretty Chinese girls, the beatified smokers, and even the unfortunate wretches forming the troubled sea of bald heads, all turning their eyes upon us, and seemingly endeavoring to discover the degree of interest we took in the spectacle. After the mountebank had finished his tricks, the actors, whose dessing-room is a tent at the back of the stage, appeared, much to the satisfaction of the public, ranged on each side of a high table, they wait until the manager has explained to the audience the nature of the piece they are about to witness. As soon as this formality—very rigorously observed in China—is completed, three or four personages, covered with magnificent robes, whose cost is said to be enormous, come forth majestically upon the stage. One of these individuals, in order to mark his supreme dignity, wears in his hat, in the manner of horns, the two long and beautiful feathers of the tail of a Barbary pheasant. He seats himself at a table, while the grandees of his court, the ministers of state, the literati, and the populace at large, remain respectfully standing in two rows before him I was surprised to find in these costumes the exact reproduction of those I had been accustomed to see in Chinese designs—the rich dresses studded with gold and silver, the heavy wings attached to the head-dress, the flags issuing from all parts of the persons, and, above all, the grotesque painting, the lines of black, white, red and yellow, which render the human face a diabolical mask. I was informed that this was a representation of the earliest Chinese courts; that the costumes were scrupulously correct; and that the fashion of the period was for the nobles, according to their several ranks, to besmear their faces so as to render them unrecognisable.

The Emperor or Chief who sat at the table, in the course of conversation, appeared to accuse one of the great personages of his court of some crime. This man, who was dressed in black, and apparently belonged rather to the literary than the warlike class, immediately left his place on hearing this accusation, and fell, as I was informed, acquiescence in the will of the prince. All at once, a woman in tears—a man plays the part—rushes on the stage: she is the wife of the prisoner, and throwing herself on her knees before the judges, implores their mercy. But her tears and supplications are all in vain

So terminated one act of the piece, which appeared to interest the spectators very much; whose applause quite stifled the sound of the tam-tams, gongs, and other discordant instruments—instruments, however, far less discordant and piercing than the voices of the actors. Indeed, the efforts of these unhappy beings were distressing to witness; their eyes seemed starting out of their heads, and the veins of their necks were swollen to such a degree as to induce serious fears for their safety. Fatigued at length with the tumult, new and interesting as the scene was, I found that I had been quite long enough at the play; and as night was coming on, we soon afterwards retired on board our ship.

A Victim of Unrequited Love—A Strange Fancy.

George B. Smith, a man about 23 years of age, and a native of Massachusetts, died yesterday at the New York hospital from epilepsy, brought about by intemperance.—Coroner Gamble held an inquest upon the body, when facts were revealed which gave the case a tone of the most marked romance, and made the listeners to the tale involuntarily exclaim, "truth is stranger than fiction." The history of deceased's life was found to be full of interesting and exciting events. Springing from a highly respectable family in New England, Smith was highly educated and fitted for the bar. When he had attained his majority, he became enamoured with a lovely young lady, (whose name perhaps it would not be proper to mention,) and after an ardent suit his love was returned, and the young man was full of bright hopes for the future. But his dream of bliss and happiness did not last long. The lady was coquettish, and loved dearly to flirt with other gentlemen. Her conduct made Smith desperate. Jealousy took possession of his soul, and the "green eyed monster" prompted him to pursue a revengeful course toward the most favored rival. He challenged him to mortal combat, but the request was coldly declined.—Soon after the rivals met; an altercation sprung up, when Smith drew a pistol, and fired at his antagonist, but happily without any serious effect.

Well knowing that he had set the law of his State at defiance, Smith fled from Massachusetts, and escaped to New York. While here the fugitive pursued a most intemperate course of life. He drank incessantly, and finally became a confirmed inebriate. Intemperance brought on epileptic fits, and while suffering under the dreadful malady, he died, neglected and unknown.

The sequel to the story is far more melancholy than the story itself. Upon an examination of the body of the deceased, a sickening sight met the view of the observer. The arms were tatooed in red and black ink. On his right arm was his name in full, the initials N. H., and also two hearts pierced with an arrow. On the left arm was the strange and fearful inscription "I LOVE RUM" in large Roman capitals.—That the deceased did "love rum" his melancholy death fully attested. The observer had not much difficulty in coming to a conclusion as to the cause of death. The emaciated and careworn features, together with those fearful words "I love rum," inscribed upon the left arm, told the fearful tale too truly. In the prime of youth and manhood he had been cut off and sent to an untimely grave a victim to intemperance.—N. Y. Herald.

Certainly a Predicament.

A few nights since a tall eccentric personage was observed by the tenants of the cabin of one of the Albany boats, to perform sundry of hops, skips, and jumps, which betokened anything but a sane mind in the performer. The movement of this personage betrayed trouble and pain, and they were at last so perfectly distressing to the beholders that a consultation was held and a committee of three appointed to inquire into the case of the stranger's unaccountable movements.

With due caution the deputies approached their man, while the others gathered around within ear shot to witness whatever "tail" might be unfolded." The committee stated that their reasons for troubling him with what might be deemed impertinent interrogations and concluded their remarks by requesting to know the reason of his apparent perplexity, and whether or not they could render him any aid.

"Wall!" said the stranger, who was a Yankee, and who spoke in the most solemn accents, while his face evinced a deal or pent up sorrow. "Wall, I don't know but you might help a fellow a little—I'm in a heap of pain—bothered like sixty! I'm in a predicament!"

The eyes of the entire party were distended and mouths perceptible to wonder width.

"In a predicament," said one of the trio, "pray what is it? We feel desirous of alleviating any misfortune that may have befallen you."

"That's clever, said the Yankee."

"Wall, maybe none of you was kicked by a hoss?"

All admitted that they had escaped such a calamity.

"Nor bit by a spider?"

No one pleaded guilty.

"Nor chased by a rattlesnake?"

"No," unanimously.

"Nor been caught in a thunder shower with a gal and left meaner than thunder?"

Not a man in the assembly had experienced that mishap.

"Wall my predicamean. is worse, I calculate than any of them."

"Do tell us what it is," was the earnest request of a very respectable clergyman.

"Well gents, I rather guess I will. The sole of my right foot itches like sin, and I can't get off my boot to scratch it."

The cabin was cleared in the space of about a minute.

Smoking in St. Petersburg.

A Frenchman just arrived in St. Petersburgh, taking a walk, with a burning cigar in his mouth, noticed that he was stared at curiously, and avoided by all who passed, but knew not the cause of their strange behavior. At last he met a tall and distinguished looking gentleman, who joined him in his walk.

"You are a stranger here?" said the gentleman.

"I arrived yesterday, from Paris."

"I see you are not acquainted with our customs. It is forbidden to smoke in our streets."

"I thank you, sir, for the information. My principles are reverence and obedience to the laws," said the Frenchman, taking the cigar from his mouth.

"That cannot be said of all your countrymen," observed the stranger.

"To prove my sincerity, I will throw away my cigar."

"No, sir, you need not. You may smoke it out. No one will molest you while you are walking with me. When I leave you, you must be cautious."

The Frenchman accordingly smoked out his cigar, walking beside the stranger. They then separated, and he went home delighted with the civility of the Russian.

The next day he related the adventure to a friend, and described the stranger. His friend asked, "Do you know who it was?"

"No."

"Shall I tell you?"

"Certainly, if you know him."

"This polite Russian, as you call him, was no other than the Emperor Nicholas."

The Parisian would not believe it; but his doubts were scattered the same day, when an officer wearing the imperial uniform handed him a package, saying—

"By command of His Majesty the Emperor."

The package contained a parcel of the best cigars. The paper in which they were wrapped had these words written on it:

"To smoke in the streets of Paris."

Miscellany.

SMOTHERING SMOKE.—At Pendleton the small fires of a bleach work, as well as its large boiler furnace, are said to be now rid of black smoke by simply throwing over the replenishment of fuel a spadeful of cheap mineral compound, which is to absorb the carbon or black of the smoke, and to increase the heat and flame to a brilliant white. There is a saving of cost, it appears, but the ashes are expected to have some value. The process reminds one of the practice amongst cooks of sprinkling salt over a smokey fire to give it a clear flame, and also of the intensification of heat in fires by means of fireclay balls, or lumps of chalk. Doubtless the substance used acts mainly, in its pulverulent state, by entangling the blacks and accumulating the heat in a way quite practicable with various earthy substances, not impregnated with poisonous volatiles easily attainable in all parts of the country, and not restricted to mineral alone.

A HORSE WITH A CORK LEG.—The Adelaide (Australia) Register has the following: "We have recently seen Mr. Collins' mare Jewess. It will be remembered that she broke her near fore leg on the race course in April last, while running for the town plate. Amputation was performed by Mr. Grabb, under whose care she has completely recovered. Her condition is excellent, and the cork foot seems to answer the purpose admirably."

DEATH FROM SNUFF.—The Intelligencer, published at Austin, Texes, notices the death of a little girl, some 5 or 6 years old, from the effect of taking snuff. She was so addicted to its use, child as she was, that she literally ate it and lived on it. Has this circumstance be a warning to all snuff dippers.

STANDING ROOM.—In the course of some experiment in ventilation made in Perth, Scotland, it was found that seventy persons could stand on seventy two square feet, and ninety-two square feet. Such was the press at the funeral of the Duke of Wellington at Chelsea hospital, that many were killed by the pressure of the crowd, and their bodies after death, were the appearance of being washed out in water and wrung like laundry linen.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Every head of a family should keep a supply of these great specifics at hand. No household can safely dispense with them. External injuries, which would result in the loss of a limb, or the crippling of a joint, if treated in the ordinary modes may be cured with dispatch, and without pain or hazard, by the use of the Ointment. Erysipelas, salt rheum, boils, sores, and all external ailments are removed with equal facility and certainly, by the application of this great curative; and the manifold diseases of the stomach, liver, and intestines, so often fatal in this country, yield invariably to the sanative operation of the Pills.

HEALTH OF PAINTERS.—It has been stated that the spirits of turpentine employed as a vehicle in lead paints was the cause of "painter's cholic," and that if it were not used for this purpose painters would be greatly benefited in health. In regard to these views John A. Dennis, of Haverhill, Mass., writes, us that with the experience of thirty years as a painter, he knows that the greatest enemy to the health of painters is not spirits of turpentine, but spirits of alcohol! The use of them, and the want of cleanliness among painters, have caused all the evils complained of as belonging to their occupation, He says, "let painters eat good substantial food, their meat somewhat fat, drink no beer or alcoholic drinks, wash their hands often, especially after mixing paints, and always before eating anything, and use no tobacco, they will enjoy good health, if free from hereditary disease." He speaks accordingly to his own experience, and he has brought up two sons to manhood as painters, who will confirm his views.—Scientific American.

A stranger in a printing office asked the youngest apprentice what was his rule of punctuation? "I set up as long as I can hold my breath, and then put in a comma; when I gape, I insert a semicolon; and when I want a chow of tobacco, I make a paragraph."

Arrival of the America.

The steamship America arrived here last evening, but in consequence of the prostration of the wires we were unable to transmit her news.

The America left Liverpool Saturday morning April 11th.

The political news present no features of special importance.

The final contests in the British General Election had taken place and as usual resulted in a majority of two in favor of the Palmerston administration. Estimates of the strength of the Ministry in the new Parliament, varied so widely that nothing short of an actual division on a test question could settle the point.

The Austria-Sardinian difficulty remains in statu quo.

The cotton market had a drooping tendency and an actual decline has been submitted to on some of the higher grades, while for lower descriptions quotations were barely maintained.

In breadstuffs a general dullness pervaded the market.

Flour and wheat nominally unchanged, although the tendency was decidedly downward.

Corn is quoted a trifle lower, but closed steady at the decline.

Provisions generally showed no change of moment.

The London money market continued stringent but although the Bank of England was still losing bullion, the rise in the rate of interest which was predicted at the departure of the Edinburg, had not taken place.

Sydney Herbert is spoken of as Minister of War, in place of Lord Panmure.

Evelyn Dennison is the ministerial candidate for Speaker.

The English government furnishes three steamships to assist in laying the Atlantic Telegraph Cable. The cable will be completed in June, and laid in July.

France.—The rumored attempt to assassinate the Emperor was unfounded, but several arrests were made of persons connected with secret societies.

Spain.—A Madrid letter says active communications are taking place between Spain, England and France, on the subject of the Spanish-Mexican difficulty. The Spanish government hopes to obtain the moral support of those powers, and in case the question goes beyond war between Mexico and Spain, their material support also.

Denmark.—The cabinet have tendered their resignation. Cause, local politics.

The Danish Diet unanamously approved of the abolition of the Sound Dues, and a treaty is concluded with foreign powers.

Austria.—An Austrian circular states, respecting the Austria-Sardinian rupture, that should the meditation of England and France prove unsuccessful, Austria will seek measures for her own protection. The authority of the circular is doubted.

Italy.—The Austrian ambassador at Naples repeats the statement that Naples is more and more unwilling to make advances towards the re-establishment of diplomatic relations with the Western powers.

Russia.—A letter from St. Petersburg says operations for raising the sunken vessels at Sebastopol have commenced. Sixteen already have been recovered.

Persia.—The Ottoman ambassador at Teheran had required the execution of the treaty, and the restitution of seven towns to Turkey.

Latest Teleg advices are to hand from Bombay, to the 20th, Calcutta 18th March and Bushire to the 26th of February.

General Outram had planned an expedition for the capture of Amehenemersh on the Karoon. The embarkation of the troops had commenced, and the attack was expected to take places on the 20th of March.

The Persian army was collected at Burajor.

In an analysis of the Houses of Parliament, which is going the rounds of the papers, we find that in the House of Lords, there are 11 Admirals, 2 Naval Captains, 2 Field Marshals, 8 Generals, 1 Lieutenant-General, 8 Major Generals, 33 Colonels, 5 Lieut.-Colonels, 1 Cornet; and of the quasi military as they have the command of the Militia, 77 Lord-Lieutenants of Counties, 87 deputy and vice Lieutenants; and, in the House of Commons, 6 Admirals, 2 Commanders, 8 Naval Captains, 3 Generals, 1 Lieutenant General, 5 Major Generals, 23 Colonels, 33 Lieutenant Colonels, 23 Majors, 54 Military Captains, 13 Lieutenants, 6 Cornets; and again taking the Militia appendage, 8 Lord Lieutenants of Counties, and 273 Deputy Vice-Lieutenants.—"These are independent of a great number of military officers who have sold out or resigned their commissions."

The 1st and 2nd companies of the 14th battalion Royal Artillery are under orders to proceed to Canada; a company of the 3rd battalion to the Mauritius, and a company of the 9th battalion to the Cape. The four companies of the same corps under orders for China are two of the 12th battalion, one of the 9th, and one of the 10th battalions.

BARBADOES.—The government and people of Barbadoes are considering the project of a submarine telegraph to connect the islands with this continent. A public meeting was held at Bridgetown, to hear Captain Rassloff's exposition of the project for laying down a line of submarine telegraph to connect the North and South American continents, through the islands of the Lesser Antilles; the line to be placed in North America, in connection with the transatlantic line connecting the British Islands with that continent through Newfoundland. Resolutions endorsing the project were passed, and the Assembly at once entertained the matter, resolutions being passed to aid the undertaking with an annual appropriation of £7000.

CHINESE IN AUSTRALIA.—It will scarcely be believed there are at present no less than 40,000 Chinese located in different parts of the colony of Victoria, and chiefly employed in seeking gold fields. They are generally under chiefs or "head men," until they can repay their advances, for, being mostly of the poorer classes, they are supplied with a passage and necessaries by their richer countrymen. When the advance is paid up they are free to do as they please, and as they are generally successful they are very soon able to realize independence. As they and the other diggers do not agree very well they generally get located in a spot by themselves, and work in companies. To obtain gold is the only object the Chinese have in coming to Australia. They do not intend to settle in the country, but as soon as they have made their pile they return to China to enjoy the fruits of their industry. The large and increasing amount they contrive to pick up, as evinced by the entries at the custom house, which, however, do not represent the whole of their gains—the ingenuity of the Chinaman enabling him to carry off considerable quantities unrecorded and untaxed.—Australian.

Provincial Parliament,

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY, April 22nd, 1857.

The Speaker took the Chair at 3o'clock. Many petitions were presented.

OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH.

Hon. Mr. FERGUSSON, seconded by Hon. Mr. DeBlaquiere, moved for the appointment of a select Committee to report upon Petitions praying for a better observance of the Sabbath, with power to such Committee to send for persons and papers. The said committee to be composed of Hon. Messrs. Moore, Ferrier, Mills, and the mover. Carried.

HUDSON'S BAY TERRITORY.

Hon Colonel PRINCE moved that the Petition of the Toronto Board of Trade, relative to the Hudson's Bay Company, be printed and distributed among the members. Carried.

EXPRESS COMPANIES.

Hon. MR. MOORE brought up the report of the committee to whom was committed the consideration of the act to amend the act incorporating Joint Stock and Mining Companies. But one amendment was made to the bill, and that was to exclude Express Companies from organising under the pres ent act. The hon. gentleman stated that the sense of the Committee was against Express Companies being allowed to organize, therefore the clause relative to such companies had been struck out.

The report was received, and the bill ordered to be read a third time tomorrow.

The report on several unimportant bills was brought in and received.

COURT OF ERROR AND APPEAL.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET had considered all that had been advanced against this bill by his hon. friend, Mr. Patton, and was sorry that he saw no means by which he could overcome his objection. He could not adopt his hon. friend's amendment, against which he set off the opinion of all the law officers of the Crown in this country. He thought that his hon. friend ought to be content with the instalment that the Bill gave him. The amendment to the Bill that he (Mr V.) had introduced, provided that in cases of appeal not more than six months should elapse before the appeal was made to the Privy Council: once the matter was in the hands of the Privy Council, it would of course be impossible to hope or retard it.

Hon. Mr. PATTON would urge his amendment which, he said, simply provided that if the Privy Council did not take action in the matter, and then the Courts here could take the matter up.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET still maintained that his Bill provided for all that is necessary or possible in connection with appeals.

The House then divided on Mr. Patton's amendment, when it was found that only the seconder and mover voted for it.

The report of committee was then received.

Hon. Colonel PRINCE understood that the second clause provided for the appointment of another judge to the court of Error and Appeal. The gentleman whom it was proposed to raise to the bench of the court in question, was alluded to in the House, as a man whose talents were a great requisition; now, he (Colonel P.) had practised under that gentleman, and could say that he was deaf, and that it was owing to his infirmities that he retired from the bench. He objected to the clause because it gave the Government patronage, of which it had too much already: also because it saddled the country with unnecessary expense; and lastly, because there was no necessity for it. He should like the hon. mover to explain the clause of the Bill.

Hon. Mr. VANKOUGHNET protested against being called upon to explain the same thing over and over again. He had explained the provisions of the bill last night, when the hon. gentleman had left his place, and if he (Mr. V.) was to make speeches at the request of every hon. gentleman who chose to leave his place when business was going on a great deal of time would be lost. The hon. gentleman proceeded to explain the clause, when

Hon. Col. PRINCE begged to relieve him from the trouble of doing so.

The subject then dropped, and the bill was ordered to be read a third time tomorrow.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

WEDNESDAY, April 22,

The Speaker took the chair at 3 o'clock.

A petition from certain rate payers of the city of Toronto, praying that the amendment sought to their charter by the Metropolitan Gas and Water Company, be grant ed, was received and referred.

GREAT SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

Mr RANKIN introduced a Bill to incorporate the Great Southern Railway Company.

Bill read a first time and ordered for a second reading to-morrow.

The following Bills were also read a first time:—

ROAD ALLOWANCE.

Mr. CHISHOLM'S Bill to vest the road allowance between lots number eighteen and nineteen, in the fourth Concession of the Township of Winchester in the County of Dundas, in John Pliny Crysler and George Hummel.

DE SALABERRY NAVIGATION COMPANY.

Mr. LORANGER'S Bill to incorporate the DeSalaberry Navigation Company of Montreal.

ADMISSION TO PRACTICE.

Mr. LORANGER'S Bill to admit David Riddle Sodart to the Bar of Lower Canada upon undergoing an examination before the Council of the Bar.

COLLEGE OF L'ASSOMPTION.

Mr. LORANGER moved to suspend the 62nd Rule of this House in so far as it relates to the Bill to amend the Act of incorporation of the College of L'Assomption.

LOAN AND INVESTMENT COMPANY.

Mr. SIDNEY SMITH moved to suspend the 62nd Rule of this House in so far as it relates to the Petition of the Canadian Loan and Investment Company.

SANDWICH, APRIL 30, 1857.

St. Clair River and Two Creeks Canal.

Below will be found the proceedings of the several meetings, held for the purpose of encouraging the construction of the Canal, having Two Creeks harbor as one outlet. In the first place, it was proposed to build a canal to connect Lake Erie with the St. Clair, having the Rond Eau as the Lake Erie outlet. From this point it would appear that the nature of the country through which it would run, would involve the expenditure of a much larger sum of money in its construction, than would be required if other points were adopted more favorable; but from the scarcity of proper harbors, only one other starting point can be chosen, which will afford a harbor sufficient to protect vessels in boisterous weather, and that other is the Two Creeks. The harbor at this point, with a trifling outlay, can be made one of the best upon Lake Erie, and is sufficiently large to hold a great many vessels, and is in every respect, we are informed, equal to, if not better adapted for that purpose, than the Rond Eau. And when we take into consideration the great difference in the cost between the two routes there can be little doubt but that the Two Creeks will be chosen as the Erie terminus. Engineers are upon the two routes, and will in a short time report upon their respective merits, and we will then be in a better position to speak of the advantages which the one possesses over the other.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of the Township of Romney, held on the 4th of April inst, for the purpose of raising funds and making other provisions for the preliminary survey of a Ship Canal from the Two Creeks to the River St. Clair, the following action was taken:

Moved by C. Coatsworth, Esq., and seconded by Col. Prince, that the Reeve, Jonas Robinson, take the chair. Carried.

Moved by John Smith, Esq., and seconded by John Lowes, Esq., that Thomas J. Elliott act as Secretary. Carried.

The meeting was then addressed by the Reeve, Caleb Coatsworth, Esq., John Smith, Esq., Thomas Renwick, Esq., and the Secretary, urging upon the inhabitants to take immediate steps to procure the Survey of the route, in order to be able to show the Government and parties interested in the building of a canal through this peninsula, what we believe to be the facts of the case, viz., that a Canal may be constructed upon this route that will answer any purpose of the one proposed from the Rond Eau, at one half the cost of the other; after which the following resolutions were carried unanimously—

Moved by C. Coatsworth, Esq., and seconded by George Robinson, Esq., that this meeting of the freeholders and householders of the Township of Romney do authorize the municipality of this Township to advance the such a portion of the Clergy Reserve Fund, now in the hands of the Township Treasurer, as may be sufficient to defray our share of the expenses of a preliminary Survey of a Ship Canal from the Two Creeks to the River St. Clair, and other expenses incidental thereto.

Moved by Caleb Coatsworth, Esq., and seconded by Thomas Hogins, Esqr., that Thomas J. Elliott be appointed to accompany the person who may be appointed in person to wait on the Hon. John Prince, Arthur Rankin, Esq., M.P.P., and any others whose influence may be considered of weight in the carrying out of the object of this meeting, and enlisting them in favor of this project.

Moved by Thomas Renwick, Esq., and seconded by John Lowes, Esq., that Caleb Coatsworth, Esq., and the Reeve, Jonas Robinson, Esq., be a Committee with power to act in conjunction with the Committees appointed by other Townships, for the procuring the preliminary Survey of the Ship Canal from the Two Creeks to the River St. Clair, and procuring a Charter for the construction of the same.

After the usual votes of thanks to the Chairman and Secretary, the meeting dismissed.

JONAS ROBINSON, Chairman,
THOMAS J. ELLIOTT, Secretary.

Since receiving the above, we have been informed that arrangements have been made with Messrs. Salter and Pinney of Windsor, for the immediate Survey of the above route.

The Municipality of Tilbury East met in the Town-hall on the 4th inst., for the purpose of taking into consideration the advantages of a ship canal from the River St. Clair to the Lake Erie. Present, James Smith, Esq., Reeve Mersea. Kerr, Coutts, Russell and Funston.

Moved by Mr. Russell, seconded by Mr. Funston, and

Resolved, That this Municipality concur with the Municipalities of Romney, Tilbury West and Mersea, in endeavoring to show a preference in the route for a ship canal from the St. Clair to Lake Erie, at the Two Creeks, over that to the Rondeau in the expense without increasing the distance.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Coutts, seconded by Mr. Kerr, and

Resolved, That the facilities both in making the canal over a level country, with only one cut, and that for a short distance, at the English not exceeding forty feet; and the public lands where the right of way can be had for a trifle, renders the expense at least half less than to the Rondeau, with the same service to be rendered.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Funston, seconded by Mr. Coutts, and

Resolved, That Messrs. Russell and Kerr be appointed delegates to meet with those from Tilbury West, Mersea and Romney, at Mr. John Smith's, in Romney, on Tuesday next, to take into consideration the best means for furthering the publishing of the advantages of the said route, &c.—Carried.

Minutes of a public meeting held at Mr. Leonard Wigle's, in the township of Mersea, on the sixth day of April, 1857, for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of making a Survey of a Ship Canal from the River St Clair to the Two Creeks on Lake Erie, and providing the means for defraying the expenses of the same.

Theodore Mallett, Esq., was appointed Chairman, and J. Wigfield, Secretary.

The meeting having been addressed by several gentlemen from Romney, and R. Foster, Esq., of Malden, the following resolutions were passed unanimously, viz.

Moved by R. Foster, Esq., seconded by Mr. Dresser, and

Resolved, That this meeting being clearly convinced of the advantages to be realized by this Township in the construction of a Ship Canal from the River St. Clair to the Two Creeks on Lake Erie, a sum of £75 be appropriated by the Municipal Council of this municipality out of the Clergy Reserve appointment to be received by this municipality for the purpose of going towards defraying the expenses of a Survey of the proposed Canal from some part of the River St. Clair to the Two Creeks in the Township of Romney.

Moved by John Lamash, Esq, seconded by Mr. Wilson, and

Resolved, That Mr. Gaines and Mr. Middleton be a committee to co-operate with the committees appointed by other municipalities to make the necessary arrangements for a preliminary Survey of the proposed Canal, and the ascertainment of its advantages.

Moved by Mr. Dresser, seconded by Mr. Middleton, and

Resolved, That Theodore Mallett, Esq., be appointed to accompany Thomas Elliott, Esq., of Romney, to wait upon the Hon. J. Prince, A. Rankin, Esq., M.P.P., and John McLeod, Esq., for the purpose of soliciting their support and influence in the proposed project.

J. WIGFIELD, Secretary.

MERSEA, 6th April, 1857.

Minutes of a meeting of the committee appointed by the Municipalities of the Townships of Mersea, Romney, and Tilbury East, on Tuesday, the 7th inst., at Romney, the 7th day of April, 1857. For the purpose of taking immediate action towards getting a preliminary survey of a ship canal from Two Creeks on Lake Erie at some point on the St. Clair river, or branch called the Sny carty river, the following members being present, viz., Mr. Middleton, Mr. Gaines, Mr. Costworth, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Russell and Mr. Kerr.

C. Coatsworth was appointed chairman and J. Robinson secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the chairman, the following resolutions were passed unanimously.

Resolved, That as one our united efforts to aid the granting of a Bill authorising the construction of a ship canal from the Rondeau to Lake Erie to River St. Clair, on condition that we are fully convinced that by the plans of the two canal surveys, namely, that of the above and that of Two Creeks to River Thames, the latter of which could be built for one half the cost; and, That we petition the Government of this Province to place them a new survey and estimates of the probable cost of construction of said canal from Two Creeks to St. Clair.

Resolved, That the following notice be forwarded to the Press for publication in the counties of Essex and Kent:—Notice is hereby given, that application will be made to the Legislature of this Province for an Act authorising the construction of a ship canal from some point on the St. Clair river and other expenses connected with the same.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this Committee and action of the different Municipalities be forwarded by the Secretary to the Editor of the Windsor Herald, and that the Editor publish them and request other papers to copy the same, both in Canada and the United States.

JONAS ROBINSON, Sec.

The Bill introduced by Mr. Rankin, to incorporate a company, to be styled "The Great Southern Railway Company," has brought down upon him the censure of the whole press that have taken any part in the railway discussions that have been so fruitful of so large an amount of scribbling; and even the Times of Woodstock, is not behind his brethren, in bringing him to task, for not regarding the compromise which had been accomplished, and which, it is hoped, will secure the early completion of the line.

The following are the chief provisions of the act introduced by him:

"Whereas the persons hereinafter named and divers others have petitioned that an act be passed to authorise the construction of a Railway from some point on the Niagara River, within the limits of the Town of Clifton, via the Towns of Simcoe and St. Thomas, to some point within the boundaries of the Township of Colchester; and thence, to such points on the Detroit River at or near the Towns of Amherstburg or Windsor, as may be found most suitable and convenient; and whereas the construction of such Railway will conduce materially to the welfare of the inhabitants residing along the line, as well as to the prosperity of the surrounding country, therefore, Her Majesty, &c., enacts as follows:

"A, B, C, D, &c., together with such other person or persons, corporations and municipalities as shall, under the provisions of this Act, become shareholders in the Company hereby incorporated, shall be, and are hereby ordained, constituted and declared to be a body corporate and politic, by and under the name of "The Great (Southern Railway Company."

"The said Company and their servants and agents shall have full power under this Act to lay out and construct, make and finish, a double or single Iron Railway or road at their own cost and charges, on and over any part of the country lying between the Niagara River at or near the Suspension Bridge in the Town of Clifton, via the Towns of Simcoe and St. Thomas and the Township of Colchester, to such points on the Detroit River, at or near the Towns of Amherstburg or Windsor, as may be found most convenient; And the said Company and their servants and agents shall have full power under this act to purchase and hold River frontage on the Rivers Niagara and Detroit at the points above indicated, and to build wharves or docks thereon; also to construct, build or purchase and hold, such Steam Ferry Boats as they may require to enable them to convey freight and passengers across the said rivers to such points in the United States as may be necessary to enable them to connect with the various Railways either running eastwardly through the state of New York, or westwardly thro' the State of Michigan, and they shall have power to dispose of the same if so inclined, or to charter any other Steam Vessel not being their own property, to perform this service.

"It shall and may be lawful for the Provisional Directors for the time being of the said Company or a majority of them, to supply the place or places of any of their number from time to time dying, or declining to act as such Provisional Director or Directors, out of the several owners of stock in their said Railway to the amount of at least two hundred and fifty pounds, Provincial currency, each, during the period of their continuance in office; and such Provisional Directors shall be chosen as hereinafter expected, shall be and they are hereby invested with all the powers, rights, privileges and indemnities, and they shall be and they are hereby made subject unto the like restrictions, as the elected Directors of the said Company upon their being elected by the shareholders of the said Company as hereinafter provided, would, under the provisions of the Railway clauses consolidation Act and of this Act, become invested with or subject unto respectively.

"When and so soon as shares to an amount equivalent to four hundred thousand pounds, Provincial currency, in the Capital Stock of the said Company be taken, and ten pounds per centum thereon shall and have been paid into some one of the Chartered Banks of this Province, it shall and may be lawful for the Provisional Directors of the said Company, for the time being, to call a Meeting at the Town of St. Thomas, of the subscribers for stock in the said Company, and who have paid ten per centum thereon, as aforesaid, for the purpose of electing Directors of the said Company; Provided always, that if the said Provisional Directors shall neglect or omit to call such meeting, then the same may be called by any ten of the holders of shares in the said Company holding among them not less than an amount equivalent to five thousand pounds Provincial currency. And provided always, that in either case public notice of the time and place of holding such meeting shall be given during one month in some one newspaper published in the City of Toronto, and also in some one newspaper published in the County of Lincoln through which said Railway shall pass, or in such of the said Counties as shall have a newspaper published therein respectively; and at such general meeting the shareholders assembled, with such proxies as shall be present, shall elect nine persons to be Directors of the said Company, being each a proprietor of shares in the said Company, to an amount of not less than two hundred and fifty pounds Provincial currency, and shall also proceed to pass such Rules Regulations and By-laws as shall seem to them fit, provided they be not inconsistent with the Laws; Provided always, that such per centum shall not be withdrawn from such Bank or otherwise applied except for the purposes of such Railway, or upon the dissolution of the Company from any cause whatever.

"And for the purpose of making, constructing and maintaining the Railway and other works necessary for the proper use and enjoyment of the Railway by this Act authorized to be constructed, it shall and may be lawful for the Directors of the said Company for the time being, to raise in such manner and by such means as they may think fit, by loan, mortgage, sale of stock, issuing of shares or otherwise as to the Directors of the said Company for the time being shall from time to time seem fit, the sum of Two Millions of Pounds Provincial currency, such shares to be issued for sums of Twenty-five Pounds Provincial currency each; Provided always, that the said capital sum may from time to time, if necessary, be increased in the manner provided for by those clauses of the Railway clauses consolidation Act, which in and by the second section of this Act are incorporated with this Act.

"Every proprietor of shares in the said Company shall be entitled on every occasion when the votes of the Members of the Great Southern Railway Company are to be given, to one vote for every share of Twenty-five pounds, currency, held by him.

"And whereas it may be for the interest of said Company, hereafter to unite with the Erie and Ontario Railway Company: Be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said Great Southern Railway Company, to unite or amalgamate with the Erie and Ontario Railway Company, or with any other Company whose Railway intersects that of the said Company or touches any place which their Railway also touches, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon between the Companies; and to any such union and the proceedings preliminary thereto and the effects thereof, all the provisions of the Acts passed in the sixteenth year of Her Majesty's Reign, and chaptered, respectively, thirty-nine and seventy six (providing for the union of Railway Companies) shall extend and apply.

"The Act passed in the eighteenth year of Her Majesty's Reign, chaptered one hundred and eighty-two, and the Act passed in the nineteenth and twentieth year of Her Majesty's Reign, chaptered one hundred and thirteen, are hereby repealed.

☞ The sale of Crown Lands, advertised to come off on the 23th, was largely attended by both farmers and parties from a distance. There was a brisk competition, and the lots were sold at prices ranging from 25s. to 40s. cy. per acre. These prices were high, when we take into consideration the fact that all of them are back lots, and will not be in market for some time to come.

We learn that the whole of the prisoners in the St. Thomas jail made their escape on Wednesday last. One of the number broke open a door with the hammer with which he was working, and there being then nothing to impede their search after liberty, the rest of the prisoners followed his example. They ran so well that in a few minutes not a trace of them could be discovered.

☞ A prisoner made his escape from the Sandwich Gaol, yesterday, and has not yet been retaken.

Victoria College will remain at Cobourg. At a full meeting of the College Board, held the other day, it was resolved to accept the offer of land made by the town of Cobourg. There were only two dissentients from this resolution—the Revds. S. D. Rice and G. R. Sanderson.—Globe.

Dennis Sullivan, who had been sentenced to be hanged in the Hamilton Assizes, has had his sentence commuted by the Governor General. No reason has been yet assigned for the interference of the Executive in the matter.

The New York Herald of Friday says:—

There were three or four failures in Wall street yesterday among stockjobbers. The victims this time were the bulls, and some of the large profits which the bears have been figuring up so confidently have vanished into thin air, or what is about as bad, are represented by very thin promises to pay. The bears have now the bulls on the hip, and we must expect to see the hair fly. It is a contest in which the public at large take very little interest, and cares not which whips.

Embezzlement of the Railroad Employes.

At the Hamilton Police office on Friday, a conductor named William F Fairman, and a Brakesman named Alfred Hayes, were further examined on a charge preferred by the Great Western Railroad Company, on the testimony of a person named Burnett, who resides at Detroit. The former was fully committed for trial, while the latter was admitted to bail, in a small amount.

It seems that Fairman, instead of punching or tearing off a piece of the ticket, according to custom, when taking them up, kept a number of tickets the price of which was 86 each, and sold them to an accomplice in Detroit, who issued them, and thus defrauded the Company, the tickets being good to the holder for fifteen thirty days according as was specified on them. Hayes assisted in the business, which seem to have been rather extensive and altogether profitable, but his exact complicity is somewhat doubtful as yet.

The only defence in our hearing was, that the offence was not committed in this province, but the magistrates overruled this objection.

DETROIT, April 28

Demand for flour good, and considerable activity. Prices firm. A fair demand for corn, but holders have again advanced their views considerably, and buyers were unwilling to meet them. The tendency in the corn market is strongly upward.

FLOUR—Sales reach 900 bbls, warranted to inspect extra, at $5 75, and 150 bbls in two or three lots to the home trade, at the same price.

WHEAT—No sales. Nominal at $1 25.

CORN—A lot of 400 bu sold on private terms, and 1000 in bags at 60c. We believe holders were generally asking a higher figure.

OATS—More inquiry. Sales reach 3000 bu in bags at 50c.

POTATOES—In good demand, and selling from waggons at 35c a $1. The tendency is upward.

PORK—About 45 bbls mess sold at $22@23 50.

A PUZZLER.—The Milwaukie Sentinel having placed upon his bulletin board an announcement of the Pacific's arrival, on which was written, "War in statuquo," two men from the country walked up to the board, and after reading very demurely—"War in Statu Quo!" said one of them "where in thunder is that?" "I don't know," said the other; "still spread it over the wool yet." "Shouldn't wonder if it did," said the first.

SIR ASTLEY COOPER'S PILLS.

These celebrated Pills are well known in Europe where an experience of upwards of fifty years has proved them a safe and valuable remedy, and although only a few years have elapsed since they were first made known in America, an immense number of cures have been effected, more than one half of which were considered incurable, and what is more remarkable, cases which were the very opposite as regards outward symptoms; the balsamic and invigorating effects on the blood, produced by this fine medicine is perfectly miraculous; many who have kept their beds for years, have been so speedily reinvigorated with an infusion of new, rich, and pure blood, and consequently of new life and health, that their astonishment among their fellow beings who had long given them up as incurable, is looked upon as the greatest of the many great wonders of this miraculous age.

Thousands who have been afflicted in every possible way, are daily bearing their grateful testimony to the great benefit they have received from their use, and who are now rejoicing in a renewed state of health, after having long despaired of ever possessing it again.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—To prevent imposition, be sure to ask for the Genuine Sir Astley Cooper's Pill, prepared in London, and New-York; if you ask for Sir Astley Cooper's Pills only, you will get a spurious compound, which will not have a beneficial effect. The Genuine Pills have an excellent likeness of Sir Asley Cooper on the top of each box; also the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, MacPhail & Co. London and New-York, on each box, and on the directions,

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Hamilton; Cook & Co. Gait; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

Death of Signor Martinez.

Last evening a terrible accident befel Signor Martinez, the well known guitarist of this city resulting in his death. He left home about three o'clock in the afternoon to visit Robert Stockdale who lives on a farm west of the R. R. track in Springwells, just beyond the foot of Porter street. After remaining there till dusk he started to return home, being accompanied from the house to the Railroad, a distance of about 100 yards, by a young man named Welton. The two parted on the track and Welton started to return to the house.

In about three minutes he heard the cars come down the track, whistle down the brakes and stop. Seeing the cars back up and people hurriedly getting off the train. Welton returned to the track where he found poor Martinez lying, having been run over, in vain endeavoring to make the men about him understand who he was. He instantly recognised Welton and said "you know who I am." In answer to an inquiry as to how the accident happened he said he heard the cars coming and endeavored to step off the track when his foot caught in the cattle guard and he fell. Before he could get up, the cars went over him. One leg was taken off just above the knee, and the other one at the ancle and again about half way between the foot and knee. He was immediately taken up and brought back to the city, but strangely enough we should think, no physician was summoned. He lived about two hours and a half after the accident, and it would seem that he bled to death. He could not have lived in any human probability, but the absence of thought in the matter was singular, though attributable without doubt to the excitement of the occasion.

For about an hour he retained his senses and called for his wife and child repeatedly; after that he grew insensible, till he died:

Signor A. Martinez was about 47 years of age. He was born in Saragossa, Spain, and came to this country about twenty years since. He has been a resident of this city for the past 18 years or more. In 1841 he married in this city the wife whom he now leaves a deeply sorrowing woman. He leaves also one child, a lad of about 12 years of age.

He was one of the most accomplished Guitarists in the United States. He had a perfect passion for his favorite instrument, and when playing seemed to work himself into an ecstacy of delight, becoming absorbed completely in the music which he produced. He was a superb player; we certainly have never heard any one who could approach him in excellence of performance on the guitar. He was well known to the musicians of all the cities in the surrounding States, by whom his death will be sincerely regretted.—Detroit Tribune.

Treatment of the Chinese in California.—The New York Herald of April 7, in an article on the China question says:

"We have had fifty thousand Chinamen at a time working on our soil, enjoying the benefit of our laws, speaking our tongue, and going back to China to commemorate our greatness. These returned Californians are not likely to have spoken disparagingly of the United States. On the contrary, it is natural to suppose that they have met with many a specimen of the Yankee Babodil, who assured them that this country could whip the world, and especially England. They will moreover have had opportunities of studying the usages of the United States, and observing with respect the extent of their territory, to which their own Flowery Kingdom is the only parallel. Their experience is not likely to have increased their regard or respect for Great Britain."

REMARKS.

The Chinese who have returned from California to China have had to relate tales of the grossest wrong and oppression perpetrated upon them by the Americans. In fact thousands of Chinese after having been invited and encouraged to emigrate to California have been forced to abandon the country. They have, doubtless, learned how different has been the treatment of their fellow-countrymen who had the good fortune to emigrate to the British Colonies instead of going to California.—European.

Chicago without a Bank.—We copy from the Chicago Ledger the following somewhat ridiculous description of the state of the Banking business in that city:—

The extreme hard times and scarcity of currency on which to transact the limited business of the country, affords a good opportunity to show up the folly of our people in regard to banks. We have but one bank of issue in the city, and that is the Marine Bank, the bills of which are scarcer than "hen's teeth" or "Angel's visits."—They do not pretend to loan a dollar of its bills unless a man is going to Halifax or St. Paul, Lake Winnepeg or Council Bluffs, there, by special contracts, to be paid out in sums not exceeding one to five dollars in a place, with the express understanding that the borrower shall whisper into the ear of every man to whom he pays a dollar, "don't send this home for redemption."

It is true that there is one or two other banks of less pretension, who perhaps have not called in and given up all their circulation, but, so far as the business of the community is concerned, they don't amount to "shucks" Our business is wholly done upon the circulation of country banks located at some remote, out of the way place, where to get redemption, costs one or two per cent, and drives the people to submit to a shave of that amount on every dollar they use.

This is the magnificent result attained by years of legislative tinkering, during which we have so disgusted all men of capital and financial talent, that they dare not and will not invest their money here in banking.—Here we are a city of one hundred thousand people, in great commercial emporium of the North West, the termini of fourteen railroads, whose aggregate lengths are nearly four thousand miles, and whose yearly earnings are almost twenty millions of dollars! yet without a bank!

To Buy the Slave Interests in Kentucky.—A proposition is in contemplation to buy the land and negroes owned by slaveholders in Kentucky, at their present valuation; and if three fourths of the slaveholders in the State will agree to sell, the proposed company will advance the sum of money, equal to one-half the estimated value of both, and one year after pay the whole balance. The slaves will be set free and the land sold at an advanced price, in view of the State becoming free in one year after the first payment to the masters and the State becomes settled with real industrious enterprising free people.

Will three-fourths of the slaveholders agree to sell at present valuation? If so the State will soon be free.—Newport (Ky.) News.

Sale of the Effects of Redpath the Swindler.

from the London Chronicle. April 2.

On Thuesday Messrs, Christie & Manson put up to auction the leasehold residence, No. 27 Chester terrace, Regent's park, of Leopold Redpath, the bankrupt, who was the principal in the Great Northern Railway robberies, and another leasehold residence, No. 31 Chester terrace, which he leased together with his plate, wines and library. The sale took place at the house No. 27 Chester terrace. This was held for a term of fifty-eight years, at a ground rent of £52 10s. a year. It was described as being fitted up and decorated in the most elegant taste and perfect order, containing two handsome drawing rooms, a dining room, a library and bedrooms, with coach house and three stall stable. It was knocked down for £2,100. The house No. 31 went for £1,750. This was held on the same terms as No. 27.—The wines included one hundred and ten dozen, of Block and Grey's sherry of 1851 and other vintages 21 ditto of Block and Grey's sherry. 30 ditto of claret, with small quantities of Maderia hock champagne, sparkling Mosselle, &c. These were divided into seventy lots, and realized from 40s. upward per dozen. The library was extensive and select, and comprised many volumes. These went off at the usual prices realized at book sales. The plate consisted of salvers and waiters and large services of forks and spoons "designed in the best taste." There was not a very numerous attendance of competitors, and the sale passed off rather languidly.—On Thursday the furniture will be disposed of by auction, and in the course of the next month the pictures will be sold. These comprise a collection of mediæval and modern art and vertu, including enamels, carved ivory, the celebrated "Leda," fine crystal, agates, bronzes, snuff-boxes, Dresden and Sevres porcelain, &c. Redpath estimated the result of the sale of the apove property at upwards of £30,000.

A Great Place for Whiskey.—The Cincinnati Gazette says the whiskey trade is rapidly increasing and concentrated in that city. The receipts of raw whiskey the last month were larger than were known for a single month, and still range from two to three thousand barrels per day. The daily receipts of two railroads are about one thousand barrels. The Richmond, Madison and Portsmouth and Maysville packets bring about as much more from the distilleries at Portsmouth, Richmond Carrolton, Milton, Warsaw, Patriot, Rising Sun, Aurora, Petersburg, Lawrence, &c.; the White water Canal, say 150—and there are fully 500 barrels made daily by some distilleries within the city limits. Of this large amount, probably less than half is rectified, the balance being made into alcohol, or shipped in a raw state to manufacturers in other cities. The manufacture of alcohol consumes 1,000 barrels of raw whiskey per day in Cincinnati. Besides this 300 to 500 barrels are shipped weekly to alcohol manufacturers at Pittsburg, Louisville, and other points. To show the magnitude of the alcohol trade we will state the fact that a few days since 10,000 bbls. were sold in Cincinnati to one house in New Orleans—probably for transhipment to France.

A gentleman in Ohio has invented a paper-counting machine, to register papers as fast as they are thrown off by a power press. It has three index fingers that move around the dial face, like those of a clock; one makes a revolution every quire that is printed, one every token, and the third one every 2000 papers. It is unerring each impression is shown—and when the edition is off, the exact number of sheets printed is known by inspection of the "hands" on the dial as readily as the time of a clock. It costs only $12, and can be attached at a very trifling expense.

At the Rothschilds wedding, covers were laid for 140; and among the bridal gifts cast at the bride's feet were six breakfast services of massive silver, and one of chased gold, besides a parasol of lace, with every rib tipped with oval shaped emeralds and pearls, so that Baroness Alphonse, if she pleases, may ride in future in the chariot of Queen of Sheba. The candlesticks were fit for Solomon's temple; and the fans were each sumptuous enough for a Sultana; but the lydian gift of the great promoter was most marvelous of all—a cheque for a million! Ah! it must have been a sight—that eye delight saloon, trellised with flowers, roofed with crystal, multiplied by mirrors, and suffused with a rosy glow from flutings of pink silk.—And the "tulla illusion" draping the bride, revealed a Persian luxury of pearls.

COURT OF REVISION.

TOWNSHIP OF SANDWICH.

TAKE NOTICE, that the Court of Revision for the Township of Sandwich, County of Essex, will hold its First Sitting for the year 1857, at the Council Chamber in the old Court House, Town of Sandwich, on Monday the 27th April inst, at the hour of Ten o'clock in the forenoon.

D. MOYNAHAN,
Township Clerk.

Sandwich, April 21, 1857.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the first sitting of the Court of Revision for the township of West Tilbury in the county of Essex for A. D. 1857, will be held on the 5th day of May next, A. D. 1857, at the School House on lot No. 6 in broken front in said Township.

WM. NICHOLSON.
Town Clerk.

West Tilbury, th April 1857.

WINDSOR NURSERIES.

JUST PUBLISHED, a Descriptive Catalogue of the Fruit Trees for sale at the Windsor Nurseries, containing a more accurate description of a greater variety of Fruits, than can be found in any other Catalogue issued on this continent, the whole having been compiled by the undersigned, with great care, from personal inspection of the Fruits grown on his own ground, Directions for Planting, Cultivation, Pruning, &c., will be found in the Catalogue.

Also, in Press, and will be published in a few days, a Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Tulips, Peonias, &c., &c.

Catalogues will be sent gratis, on application, (if by letter post-paid), to the undersigned, at Windsor, C. W.

The stock of Fruit Trees, more especially Apples and Pears—both Standard and Dwarf—is extremely thrifty and well grown, and such as can be procured in no other Nursery. A large portion of them are just commencing to bear, and having been twice transplanted, can be removed with perfect success.

All orders promptly attended to, the Trees carefully packed so as to carry any distance with safety, and forwarded with despatch.

As the undersigned intends discontinuing the Nursery Business, those wishing considerable lots of Trees will find it for their interest to apply early.

JAMES DOUGALL.

For Sale!!!

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION

AND

DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,

IN THE BEAUTIFUL

TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POT ASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25. which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locatity, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Seymour, Buffalo: merchandize from the West should be to the care of John Hosmer, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

NORTH-WESTERN TRANSPORTATION LINE.

1857.

Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago

THIS LINE consists of the following First Class Propellers:

MONTGOMERY,	Capt. T. Nicholson
GLOBE,	" Amos Pratt,
ONTONAGON,	" A. Wilkins,
ADRIATIC,	" M. S. Lathrop
OGONTZ,	" W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY, (New Propeller,)

Which will, during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week; and having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the cheapest and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandise, via

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over Five Thousand Tons Burthen, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandise for the transport of Property.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,
Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry Eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds, Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds. Rheumatism Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,
Lumbago,	Sores of all kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Sprains
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,
Ringworm,	Ulcers,
Salt Rheum,	Venereal Sores,
Scalds,	Wounds of all kinds,

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor Holloway, 80, Maiden Lane, New York, & 244 Strand, London, by all respectable Druggists and dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in pots, at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each pot.

☞CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

The Mountain Torrent.

BY CHARLES MACKAY.

Fair streamlet running
Where violets grow
Under the elm trees,
Murmuring low;
Rippling gently
Amid the grass;
I have a fancy,
As I pass;
I have a fancy as I see
The trailing willows kissing thee;
As I behold the daisies pied,
The harebells nodding at thy side;
The sheep that feed upon thy brink,
The birds that stoop thy wave to drink;
Thy blooms that tempt the bees to stray,
And all the life that tracks thy way.
I deem thou flowest
Through grassy meads
To show the beauty
Of gentle deeds;
To show how happy
The world might be,
If man observant,
Copied thee;
To show how small a stream may pour
Verdure and beauty on either shore;
To teach what humble men might do,
If their lives were pure, and their hearts were true;
And what a wealth they might dispense,
In modest, calm beneficence;
Marking their course, as thou dost thine,
By wayside flowers of love divine.

CHEAP ORNAMENTS.—When Dr. Franklin was in Paris, his daughter, Mr. Bache, wrote to him for a supply of feathers and thread lace. The doctor declined in the following characteristic note:—"If you wear your cambric ruffles as I do, and take care not to mend the holes, they will come in time to be lace; and feathers, my dear girl, may be had in America from every turkey's tail."

A worthy clergyman, upon being asked why he did not venture to an election, at which the proceedings were very riotously conducted, and give his vote, replied. "I do not see why I should endanger my own poll, to benefit another man's."

SAM'S LAST.—Sam Slick laughs at the alleged power of some people to weep on all occasions, and defies any man to do so "with a pretty girl beside him a pocket full of cash, no corns on his toes, and a copy of the LEDGER in reach."

In a speech Lucy Stone said:—"We know there is cotton in the ears of men. Let us look for hope in the bosom of woman."

Would you not find cotton there, also Miss Lucy? We pause to answer.

A would-be prophet down south, lately said in one of his sermons, that he was sent to redeem the world and all thing therein. Upon hearing this, a native pulled out two five dollar bills on broken banks and requested him to fork over the specie for them.

An Irishman, who lived in an attic, being asked what part of the house he occupied, answered:—"If the house were turned topsy-turvy, I'd be livin' on the first flure."

The Sacramento Times says in the course of a report of the proceedings at a public dinner. The mayor of the city, and the ladies, etc., were appropriately and elegantly drunk and the party separated in fine cheer."

"Won't you take half of this poor apple?"—said a pretty damsel to a witty swain. "No, I would prefer a better half," Elisa blushed, and referred him to her papa.

Why are the ladies of the present day like the lilies spoken of in the Bible?

"They toil not, neither do they spin but I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

A bill was brought into the House of Assembly, in Jamaica, to regulate the harbor-masters. Mr. Paul Phillips a distinguished member said:

"Mr. Speaker, I very much approve the Bill. The harbor-masters are a set of knaves. I was one myself over ten years."

IS SMOKING INJURIOUS?—Youthful Swell! "Haw! look here! Is that chest of cigars you imported for me ripe yet? Cigar Dealer: "Well, Sir, I fear not—but if, not for your taste, Sir, for at least three weeks; but we can spare you a couple of thousand of these Giant Regalias to go on with, till the weather is milder, when your cigars will mellow rapidly. [Youth accepts the generous offer, and lounges out with a Giant Regalia as big as his leg, in his mouth.]

A POSER FOR TEACHERS.—"Sally Jones, have you done that sum I set you?" "No thir, I can't do it." "Can't do it, I am ashamed of you. Why at your age I could do any sum you could set me." "I think, thir, I know a sum you can't thifter out." "What Sally, let's hear, and we will see." "It is thith, if one apple cauth'd the ruin of the whole human family, how many thuch will it take to make a barrel of thider.

A WISE DISTINCTION.—When the Earl B——was brought before Lord Loughborough to be examined upon application for a statute of lunacy against him, "How many legs has a sheep?" "Does your lordship mean," answered B——, "a live sheep or a dead one?" "Is it not the same thing?" said the chancellor. "No my Lord," said Lord B——, "there is much difference; a live sheep has four, a dead one but two—there are but two legs of mutton, the others are shoulders."

We notice the marriage of Mr. Day to Miss Field, which presents this singular anomaly, although he won the Field she gained the Day.

There is no rule without exception, my dear. "Oh, isn't there, pa? A man must always be present when he shaves?" "My dear send this child to bed. He's too clever."

INDUBITABLE PROOF.—The keeper of a cheap boarding house has come to the conclusion that the modern sausage is generally made of dog meat, and grounds his belief upon actual experiment. He fed his boarders upon sausages, exclusively for a week, and before the end of that time every one of them began to growl.

This is a world of business and bustle, said a minister in a sermon. "Yes, but more bustle than business," whispered a little girl.

How to make Good Butter.

1. Milk should never be set for butter in a dark, damp cellar—as is the case with butter-makers in this section—as the cream is thereby moulded before it has had time to rise, which gives the butter a mouldy taste.

2. The milk is allowed to set too long before being skimmed, which gives it a cheesy taste.

3. The cream is kept too long before it is churned, after it is skimmed, which gives it the taste of the other two, and also a sour taste.

4. The butter should never be washed in water, because it takes away that beautiful aroma so essential to good butter.

5. It should never be taken in a person's warm hands, as the heat melts a certain portion of the globules, which gives it an oily taste, and makes it become rancid very soon.

6. The milk should be set in good, clear, tin or earthen pans, in a dry, open, airy and shady place, above ground, if possible, although a cellar may be so built and ventilated as to answer the purpose. It should never set over 24 hours in warm weather; and for a dairy of three cows or over, the cream should be churned every morning, and never be kept over forty-eight hours in warm weather; in cold weather it may be kept longer.

It should always be kept the same heat that milk is when drawn from the cow, and churned steadily, and I have never known it to fail of coming readily, [we use a cylinder churn;] it is then taken from the churn with a wooden butter ladle into a wooden tray, which has been well scalded and cooled in pure cold water; the salt is then worked in, to suit the taste, with the ladle, which is easily done, with a little practice, and the butter-milk well worked out. Butter made in this way, and put down in stone pots, and kept from the air will keep good for a long time.

Alum in Candle Making.

The proportion used is about one pound of alum to eighteen of tallow. If the tallow is very hard, a less quantity is used: if soft tallow, the quantity of alum may be greater. The mode of operation is, to put the alum in water which is raised to boiling heat, by doing which the alum is thoroughly dissolved. In dipping the candles, this water, in a boiling state, is added to the tallow as the quantity is diminished by the growth of the candle. This fairly mixes the alum with the tallow, while the water settles in the vessel under the tallow. We have seen very fine candles made from old lard, with a portion of tallow, by this operation.

We have spoken, as is seen, of the manufacture of dipped candles. The water could not be well used in making mould candles; but the proportion of alum and tallow would probably be about the same as in the former case, and the mixture can be effected, for aught we can see, by putting the alum into the tallow when cold, and dissolving them together.—Country Gentleman.

WHITE PINE TREES.—In our view there is not a handsomer evergreen in America, than the common white pine. None are so valuable for building. Our carpenters would hardly know how to finish a house without white pine. As an ornamental tree it is not so properly estimated as it would be were it less common. When it has a fair chance to expand, in open ground, its limbs shoots out regularly from the trunk near the ground, and no tree protects us so effectually from the cold wind as "the evergreen pine"

THE BEST SWEET POTATOES.—The variety among sweet potatoes, is perhaps, as great as among Irish potatoes; and one sweet potato is not as good as another. Those who are about to procure seed for sprouting sets, or those intending to purchase sets should therefore be careful to know what kind of a sweet potato or plant they are purchasing. Our own experience is, that the variety having a vine or top, with dark green, not reddish foliage, and producing an oblong chovate or ovate pyriform tuber, that is of a rich pale yellow, both outside and in, is the best variety. Some say the vine and tuber of the red sweet potato, will endure more frost. But this we think a mistake. We should like to hear from some of our Southern growers of the sweet potato, on this subject.—Ohio Farmer.

WHERE PEPPERMINT COMES FROM.—Two towns in St. Joseph county, Mich., produce large quantities of peppermint, from which the oil is extracted by manufacturers there. In 1855, 25,000 pounds of the oil was produced, which brought in the New York markets three dollars per pound. From eight to twelve pounds is produced from an acre of plants.

The first crop requires a good deal of care, but the next two years it yields without attention. After the third year the crop must rotate, in order to rest the land. The mint is cut in August, and the oil extracted by distillation, filtered though flannel and put up in tin cans for market.

TO CLEAN GUN BARRELS.—We have somewhere heard of spirits of turpentine as being good to use on the swab instead of water, in cleaning out gun barrels. We think, however, that a mixture of one part of spirits of turpentine and two or three parts of strong alcohol, (spirits of wine) well shaken together, would be preferable. Clean ed in this way, they will dry and be ready to use immediately.

CARE OF COLTS THE FIRST WINTER.—There is danger of feeding too many oats. One quart a day, fed regularly, with a scoonful of ashes or hemlock leaves, or both occasionally, is sufficient with plenty of good hay and water enough, with room for exercise, and a good shelter to run under, when they please. Treated in this way, they will be hardy as an ox, and nimble as a fox.—A. T., Andover, Ohio.

CARROT PIES.—Take 2 good sized carrots, clean and grate them; scald a quart of milk and pour on the carrots, and set it to cool. Take 3 eggs and 1 cup of sugar, beat well together and stir into the carrot; season with nutmeg or cinnamon.

Select Poetry.

A Romance of High & Low Life.

TUNE—"Lord Lovel."

Lord Perkins he wooed Lady Mary Brande,
John Thomas her maid, Mary Anne,
Lord Perkins he was the master, and John Thomas he was the man.

"Now tell me, John Thomas," Lord Perkins, he said,
"Dost thou think thou would'st marry my lady's maid,
An thou could'st have my ladye?"

"Now marry, good master," John Thomas replied,
"I would rather this lady were my bride,
Than marry the lady's maid."

"And what is thy reason," Lord Perkins, he said,
"And what is thy reason," said he;
"My lady is fair; but my lady's maid
Is fairer than my ladye?"

"But she hasn't the grace," said John Thomas, "poor wench,
And she hasn't got the manner;
And her ladyship speaks Italian and French,
And plays on the grand pehanner."

"What good, John Thomas," Lord Perkins, he said,
"Will French and Italian do man?
"If a wife has got one tongue in her head,
'Tis enough for any woman.

"And singing and playing are pretty things,
But who, except a gaby,
But knows that no wife ever plays or sings
After bringing her lord one baby?

"Now tell me, John Thomas, now tell me, I pray,
Can Mary Anne sew and cook?
For those things, I own, are more in my way,
When I for a wife would look."

"My Lord, she can cook; my Lord, she can sew;
"My Lord, she can stitch and hem;
But Town that, for my part, I doesn't go into marriage for things like them."

"Enough, John Thomas," Lord Perkins, he said,
"I forgive and thank my lady's maid,
And you may have my lady."

At St. George's Church, in Hanover Square,
They were married all in one day:
Lord Perkins he wedded the maiden fair,
And John Thomas the lady gay.

The marriage service a Bishop read,
In a most impressive manner;
Lord Perkins went home to his quiet homestead,
John Thomas to his pehanner.

And so they were suited and so content,
And rejoiced in both their wives,
And, which I wish to every gent,
Lived happy the rest of their lives.

My First Temptation.

At an early age I lost my father, and as he left us but little of this world's goods, it soon became necessary that I should find some employment. I was then thirteen years of age, and very stout or strong but yet with a will to do anything that could be found for me to do. At length my brother made an arrangement with a carpenter by the name of Morris, and I was taken into his shop as an apprentice. With him I remained two years, but at the end of that time I became so worn down by the hard work imposed upon me, that my mother resolved I should remain there no longer. My sister Lucy, who was two years older than myself, had long detected my failing strength—and it was mainly through her efforts that I was removed from the place, for I should never have complained.

I was now fifteen—tall, slim, pale, and I knew that I could not stand any sort of work which taxed my physical strength to great extent. But fortune favored me. A Mr. Joseph Evered, who kept a dry goods store near by, was in want of a salesman, and through my sister's influence I obtained the place. Mr. Evered had a daughter, Julia, about my own age, who was very intimate with Lucy, and it was by her intercessions with her father that Lucy gained her point.

I was duly installed in my place, and I was soon happy and contented, for my employer was kind, and some intimacy sprang up between myself and Julia, which afforded me a purer bliss than I had ever before experienced. Thus matters passed on for a year, and at the end of that time my health was restored, and I had so far gained upon the confidence of Mr. Evered that he now trusted me with some of his most particular business. Only one thing troubled me. I was not receiving such wages as I fancied my services entitled me to. In fact, I was in debt. I had purchased a suit of clothes of a tailor in the neighbourhood, and was owing for them. The tailor wanted his money, and I had promised he should have it at a certain time; but that time came and passed and I could not pay him, he threatened, and I promised anew. O, how many times I wished that I had never bought those clothes. I could have got along without them, and I resolved that never again would I buy anything which I could not pay for on the spot. But that did not help the case.

One evening I sat alone in the store. It was Saturday evening, and the day had been a busy one. We had sold a great quantity of goods, and the money drawer was well filled. Slowly a demon arose before me, and began to advise me. He pointed to the money drawer and whispered: 'There are the means for paying your debt.' I knew that Mr. Evered had no knowledge of the amount of money there, for he knew not how much I had sold. I could take even fifty dollars, and he would never miss it, for I had sold a great quantity of stuff which he had no account of, I had promised the tailor that he should have the money that very night, and I had planned to get Mr. Evered to advance the necessary sum. I had not been spending money foolishly, but from my poor pittance I supported my mother and that ate it all up.

For a long while I sat and looked upon that drawer, and all the while the tempter was persuading me, I knew that young clerks often did such things, and that some times necessity compelled them to do it—at least so I thought. How could I meet my creditor again without the money? I could not; at length I resolved and re-resolved that I would not. I arose and went to the drawer. I opened it, and saw the bank notes which had been jammed in there—I counted out twenty dollars! My hand trembled and my heart beat quickly. I thrust the notes into my pocket, and then hastened back to my seat, and not long afterwards my employer entered.

"Well, Charles," said he, "I guess we'll shut up now."

I arose, went out and put up the shutters, and when I came back I found Evered engaged in counting the money. As I approached him he eyed me with a sharp, searching look, and I trembled like an aspen.

"What ails you?" he asked,

"Nothing, sir," I answered, trying to compose myself.

"But there must be something the matter," he resumed, "for you look as pale as a ghost."

"I am tired," I said.

"Well, well, you have worked hard to day, and you may go, I'll attend to the rest."

With a desperate endeavor to compose myself, I thanked him for his kindness, and then seized my hat and left the store. The fresh air revived me somewhat and I hurried on to the tailor's. I paid my bill, and for a moment my heart was lighter; but it was only for the moment. When I reached home I professed to be sick, and retired at once. But my mother, sick and weak herself, came to my bed, wanted to give me medicine. She gave me a simple preparation, drew up the clothes snugly about me, and having kissed me she said:

"Be careful, Charles, for 'twould be painful indeed to have you sick. God keep and bless you. Good night.

O, how these last words rang in my ears. What would my mother say—how would she feel, if she knew that her son was a thief! It was a long time before I could give the word sharp or form, but it came at last. I could not keep it back. Thief! Thief! rang in my soul till an agony was upon me so intense that all other conceptions of pain were as nothing. The night passed away in sleepless phantom-making restlessness; and when the morning came, I arose and walked out before my mother or sister was up. I did not return until breakfast was ready, and then I had so overcome all outward signs, that little remark was made upon it. But the worm was gnawing at my heart.

That afternoon I went with my sister to meeting. As I entered the little church, I met the gaze of Mr. Evered. He watched me sharply, and I saw marks of pain on his face. After the services were over, I saw him in conversation with the tailor. I noticed how earnestly they spoke—and once I saw the tailor point his finger towards me. I felt sure, then, that all was discovered.

"For mercy's sake, Charles what is the matter?" cried Lucy, as she caught hold of my arm.

"He's faint! he's faint!" I heard a low tremulous voice; and on turning, I saw Julia Evered. She was frightened—and at that moment came the conviction that she loved me. But that other thought came with it; and then I knew ere long she would despise me.

Sick and faint I hurried away, and to all the anxious inquires of Lucy, I only replied that I was not well. O, how miserable I felt, for I knew my employer had detected the theft. His gaze at me in church was proof enough; but his conversation with the tailor made it sure. That afternoon I dared not go to church, and my mother worried over me. If she would have only let me alone, I might have been less miserable; but she clung close to me, and I had to lie to her—all the falsehood I ever spoke to that noble woman.

Another night of restless agony, and then I came to the severest part of all. I must meet my employer! It was late when I decended to the kitchen, and I found my mother as pale and as deathly as death itself. At the moment I forgot my own pain, and hastened to her side. She gazed up into my face with such a look as I hope I may never see again.

"Don't ask me any questions, Charles," she said, "but go at once to the store. Mr. Evered wants you immediately."

I could not ask a question—I could not speak. Without breakfast—without waiting to see Lucy, I started from the house. People whom I met gazed at me sharply, and once I heard the word thief pronounced! O, Evered had not told the story of my crime! How could he? No, no, 'twas the tailor who told it, for my employer would never have done it. Yet it was known. I stopped, and suddenly the thought of flight occurred to me. Why had I not thought of it before? Why should I stay longer where shame only could be mine? I turned to flee, and just then my sister came rushing after me, with her hair floating wildly on the morning air, and her face as pale as death.

'O, Charles,' she uttered come with me at once! Come, come, our mother is dying!'

My sister seized my hand, and by force dragged me away. I reached my home, I knew not how for my reason had almost left me. Into the little bed room Lucy dragged me, and there lay my mother, stark and cold.

"O, Charles you have killed her! sobbed my sister, as she threw herself upon the bed. She could not stand your disgrace!"

One moment I gazed upon that pale, cold form, and then a wild unearthly cry broke from my lips. I plunged madly forward upon the bed.

"Charles! Charles!"

I started up. I felt a heavy hand upon my shoulders: again my name was called.

"What is the matter! Come rouse up. For mercy's sake, what is the matter."

It was Evered who spoke. I was still sitting upon the stool behind the counter but my head had fallen forward upon a pile of goods that lay heaped up before me. Instinctively I cast my eyes upon the money drawer and slowly the truth worked its way into my mind. A cold clammy sweat was upon my brow, a pain in my limbs, and I trembled like an aspen.

"What ails you, Charles?" Mr. Evered kindly asked.

"Mary—such a dream!" I involuntarily gasped.

"Well, well—if it's nothing worse than that, I am glad. But come, I want to have a few words with you before you go."

I was fully aroused now, I looked at the money drawer, though, many times ere I could fully realize that I was safe. The doors and shutters were closed and then my employer sat down by my side.

"Well, Charles," he commenced, "Julia has been telling me this afternoon that you wholly supported your mother."

"Yes, sir," I tremblingly answered.—"My sister thus far has only been able to support herself, and the rest comes on me."

"But how do you get along? Surely, your salary here is not sufficient."

"It was most miserable, sir, to find us in food and fuel. For—for clothing—I have—

"Run in debt, eh?"

"Yes, sir; but will never do it again.—I will go ragged if need be, but I will not run in debt."

"Right, right," my boy!" But we will fix that all right now. I have been thinking for some time of increasing your pay, and I will do so now—not only so, but I must put it back to where I first thought of it, and that was three months ago. Let's see."

"Three dollars a week for thirteen weeks would be thirty-nine dollars," he said.—

"Will that square you up."

"O, yes, sir, and more, more too!"

"Then you shall have that, and hereafter you shall have that amount over each quarter."

He said something more about making me his head clerk at some time, but I did not fully understand him. I received the money, paid the tailor, and when I had reached my home, I was calm and happy. I told my mother and Lucy of my good fortune, and they wept for joy.

Yet I could not help shuddering fearfully, whenever I thought of that terrible vision which came upon me while the tempter was with me. But—let me say it again—'twas an angel's visit.

Years have passed away since that time. Mr. Evered is an old man; my children are his grandchildren; and the store that was once his his, is now half mine. He has retired, and the other half of the extensive business belongs to Lucy's husband. My mother still lives, and thank God, can bless her son that he has never yet called one drop of sorrow to her life cup.

The Sun Forever in the Meridian.

Professor Sontag, Astronomer to the "Grinell Expedition," in his narrative says: "As the land adjacent to the pole is all terra incognita, it is impossible to say what additions to the stores of natural science a visitor to those regions might be able to make. Certain it is, however, that a new and wide field would be opened for his investigation. Everything there would be novel; and that circumstance alone would be well calculated to stimulate his attentive faculties. The difficulties which would present themselves to the investigator may be appreciated at home; but they would be greater or less according to circumstances of which we know nothing. We do not, for example, whether the Pole is covered with open water, ice sea, or dry land; nor do we know which of these conditions would be most favorable for investigation. It may be presumed, however, that an open sea would, in several respects, be the most disadvantageous. In the first place, it would in all probability be so deep that the ship would be unable to anchor; and the current might be too strong to permit her to remain stationary long enough to make accurate observations. In the second place, if she could not maintain her position steadily at one point, the commander would experience a new embarrassment, viz., as every meridian must extend southwardly, he would be apt to lose that on which he approached the Pole—and consequently he would be at a loss how to shape his course homeward.

This occurrence of this strange difficulty will naturally present itself as one among many novel phenomena which will arrest the adventurer's attention, and the following observations would probably occur to him on the spot. The time of day (to use the phraseology, for want of any other that would be more appropriate) would no longer be marked by any apparent change in the altitude of the sun above the horizon; because to a spectator at the Pole no such change would appear, except to the small amount of the daily change of declination. Thus, not only to the eye, but also for the practical purpose of obtaining the time by astronomical observations, the sun would appear throughout the twenty-four hours neither to rise nor fall, but to describe a circle round the heavens parallel with the horizon. Therefore the usual mode of ascertaining the time would utterly fail; and, indeed, however startling may be the assertion, it is nevertheless true that time or the natural distinction of time would be no more. This will appear from the consideration that the idea of apparent time refers only to the particular meridian on which an observer happens to be placed; and is marked or determined only by the distance of the sun, or some other heavenly body, from that meridian. Now, as an observer at the Pole is on no one meridian, but is stationed at a point where all meridians meet, it is evident that "apparent time" for him had no existence.

Miscellany.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.—The subscriber, who is evidently acquainted with the subject, says that the true cause of most railway accidents is as follows:—The work is let to contractor No. 1, at a fair price. He sublets it to contractor No. 2 at considerable less, and they again sublet it to contractor No. 3 at a further reduction, so that the person who actually does the work cannot afford to put in good material and workmanship, and the result is accidents with great loss of life and property, as well as frequent failures of sub-contractors, and great loss to the lawyers, and persons who have furnished them with materials. The remedy which he suggests for all this is, by act of Parliment, to forbid subletting, and so compel contractor No. 1 to get the work done himself; and also to take satisfactory measures for assuring the payment of his laborers. This from a practical man is worthy of careful consideration.—Witness.

GUNPOWDER AND TURPENTINE.—If spirits of turpentine be poured on gunpowder, the latter will not explode. An incendiary was once defeated in his purpose by this very means. Wishing to secure an explosion of gunpowder, he covered it with a quantity of spirits of turpentine, it burnt, while the powder remained as before. The gunpowder acts as wick to the turpentine, and it will not itself ignite so long as any of the turpentine remains to burn.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Persons of bilious habit, or who are liable to attacks of dyspepsia, should fortify their systems against the relaxing heats of Summer by a course of this mild aperient and alterative in Spring. It not only regulates the secretions, and removes obstructions from the bowels, but braces and revitalizes the digestive powers, when weakened by indulgence, or rendered torpid by a sedentary life. The testimony of invalids of both sexes and all ages in every part of the globe, demonstrates beyond question that all internal diseases not resulting from malformation, are capable of being cured by this great remedy.

DREAMS.—The author of the "Old House by the River" thus discourseth of dreaming: "I tell you, Phil, God never gave to human intellect a gift so blessed as the power of dreaming. It is a magic surpassing that of the woman of Endor, for it not only brings the dead to life again, and clothes them with familiar looks and smiles, but it has power over that most difficult object of resurrection, a dead affection! and will bring it from the dead, without the grave clothes, in its original beauty and ravishing glory. I dare not let my dreams go there too often lest the magic with the fabled power of the olden time destroy the magician! I dare not weave a spell around the things to come, lest the servants of my magic should destroy or maiden me!"

HIGH MIXED.—A widower at Camden, who was not very young, became smitten with a young and beautiful girl and married her. A short time after, the son of this man by a former wife, became also in love with the mother, of his father's new wife, a widow lady still in the bloom of life. Soon the young man and the widow were united, so that in consequence of these two connections, a father became the son-in-law of his son, and the wife not only the daughter-in law of her own son-in-law, but still more the mother-in law of her own daughter; while the husband of the latter is the father in law of his own father, singular confusion may also if children should spring from these peculiar marriages.

NEVER GIVE UP.—Who are our rich men?—our distinguished men?—our most useful men? Those who have been cast down, but not destroyed—who, when the breeze of adversity swept away their props, sought new standards—pushed on, looked up, and became what you behold them now. A glorious sentence and worthy to be inspired—Never give up! Men are not made—they make themselves. A steady perseverence, a determination never to sink though millstones were hanged about their neck—is the true doctrine. It is this that has made the wilderness to blossom, that has given wings to the ocean, filled valleys, levelled mountains, and built up the great cities of the world.

Late News from the Indian Outbreak.

TWELVE INDIANS KILLED.

Our (Chicago Democrat) latest intelligence from the scene of the Indian troubles in Minnesota is to the effect that on the 13th inst., a battle was fought near the Watonwan river, about thirty miles above Mankato, between the St. Peter volunteers, under Gen. Dodd, and the Indians. Twelve Indians were killed, besides a number wounded. The volunteers did not lose a man. The St. Peter boys behaved nobly.

In the St. Paul papers of the 17th, is another letter from Mr. Hezley, of St. Peter, dated 13th. It contains the following:

The utmost consternation has taken possession of the minds of our people. The whole community is awakened to danger, and the people continue to flock into town. Every house is full, and still they come.

Every effort has been and is made to quiet them.—Swift's house, Gorman's house, the hotel, and every place is filled up. Seeing the mail from Mankato, I have only time to say that the last and most reliable news from the seat of war is that a battle had taken place yesterday (Sunday) morning, on the Blue Earth, and some six or eight Indians were killed—no whites.

Our boys passed through Mankato at four o'clock yesterday. Another company leaves Traverse this morning. Red Iron is in this vicinity with part of his bands. A committee of three—Stone, Catlin, and Andrews, with Huggins for interpreter, has gone to hold council with him, and see what he is doing. It is said that the Indians who are out against the whites are part of Sleepy Eyes' and part of Red Iron's band. Now if the Government has made no move to send up help, we must help ourselves and "Extermination" is the watchword. The most I fear now is for provisions. The people are crowding in from the north and country, and we have a very short supply. We sent the greatest proportion of what we had out yesterday with the volunteers to help Mankato. Send up ammunition, arms and provisions, and see that such are sent without delay. We shall look anxiously for a boat. Urge the matter, for God's sake—I feel perfectly safe here, but others do not and have not felt as I do. Send up a boat.

From the London Times

The Seat of Government of Canada.

The Queen has been invited to discharge one of the most interesting and poetical duties of empire, and one of very rare occurrence. She is asked to decide between the rival claims of as many as four or five cities to be the seat of the Canadian government. At present we can scarcely estimate the importance of the question. Before long it is probable that all British America will be under one government, and at the present rate of increase and improvement, by the end of another century the population will be as numerous, as wealthy, and as advanced in all the arts of life as that of the mother country. It is, then, the metropolis of an empire such as ours that has to be selected. The question sends one back to the earliest origins and to the grandest epochs of history—to the towers of Rome and the walls of Ecbatana, to Virgil's picture of infant Carthage, and Livy's legend of young Rome; to Alexander laying out with a line the city which still bears his name and justifies his sagacity; to Constantine founding, unwittingly, the seat of an anti-Christian empire, and Peter the Great driving piles into the mud of the Neva. The origin of cities, indeed is generally wrapped in mystery, and it is by the merest accident that they have become what they are. Even in our own times we have seen the seed of cities sown broadcast over new continents, some to wither or languish, some to shoot up into colossal proportions. In the memory of old men there was not an Englishman on the Australian continent, and within the lifetime of schoolboys there was no such place as Melbourne—now a magnificent city with more than a hundred thousand inhabitants. In the heart of the North American continent the oldest inhabitant of Chicago—a man of about fifty—finds himself surrounded by a vast city, and at the centre of a vast commerce. But probably there never was an occasion when deliberate choice had to be made between several claimants, with all the cities in view, save that of the full knowledge that posterity would canvass the decision. Why should Rome, or Paris, or Madrid, or Vienna, or London be the capitals of great empires? Had we now to choose our metropolis, how would Lancashire fight for the Mersey! how loudly would Edinburgh proclaim the grandeur of modern Athens, and Ireland her Atlantic site, her mild climate, her picturesque shores, and her vast harbors! In almost every other instance the question is settled for us; and as each man pursues the path of his own advancement or ease, he unconsciously contributes to solve the grandest political and geographical problems. But this large responsibility—this creation of history to come—which we are thus usually spared, is, in the present instance, thrown upon the Queen and her ministers. They have to identify or have found a metropolis for British America.

Birth of a Princess.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE, April 14.

At seven minutes before two o'clock this afternoon the Queen was safely delivered of a Princess. There were present on the occasion her Majesty's mother, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, Dr. Locock, Dr. Snow, and Mrs. Lilly the monthly nurse. In the adjoining apartment, besides the medical men, Sir J. Clark and Dr. Fergus on, were the Mistress of the Robes and the Lady-in-waiting on the Queen, and the following officers of State and Lords of the Privy Council, viz, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Chancellor, Viscount Palmerston, Sir George Gray, the Earl of Clarendon, Mr. Secretary Labouchere, Sir Charles Wood, the Bishop of London and the Marquis of Breadalbane.

The Duchess of Kent, accompanied by the Princess of Hohenlohe Landenburg, arrived at the palace shortly before two o'clock.

The Turkish Ambassador and Madame Musurus, the French Ambassador, and Countess Persigny, the Bavarian Minister and Baroness de Cetto, the Prussian Minister, the Saxon Minister, the Austrian Minister and Countess Apponyi, the Russian Minister, and other members of the diplomatic corps, called at Buckingham Palace. Many of the nobility and gentry also called to pay their respects during the afternoon.

The news was made known to the town by the firing of the Park and Tower guns; and the Privy Council being assembled as soon as possible thereupon, at the Council Chamber, Whitehall, it was ordered that a form of thanksgiving for the Queen's safe delivery of a Princess be prepared by his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, to be used in all Churches and chapels throughout England and Wales, and the town of Berwick upon Tweed, on Sunday, the 19th day of April, or the Sunday after the respective ministers shall receive the same.

Intelligence of the event was immediately telegraphed from the French Embassy to the Emperor Napoleon who replied by the same medium, and desired that inquiries should be made twice daily at Buckingham Palace in the name of his Imperial Majesty, the result to be telegraphed to Paris.

In the evening the places of public resort in the metropolis were crowded with holiday visitors. Where there was an orchestra the National Anthem was given, and the assembly signified their respect by standing during the performance, and cheering when it was over. At Her Majesty's Theatre the following verse was added to the National Anthem, to celebrate the auspicious event of the day.

"May the sweet babe just born,
Like her this land adorn,

SANDWICH, MAY 7, 1857.

RESIGNATION OF Mr. CAUCHON.

The Hon. Commissioner of Crown Lands, it will be seen by the following correspondence, has resigned his seat. It is certain that the Government were unwilling to go to the full extent of his demand, in relation to the North Shore Railway; and taking advantage of the opportunity, when he thought that the Government would give anything for a little support, wrote to Col. Tache threatening that he would vote against the Government, unless one and a half million acres were granted to the North Shore Road, when the vote upon the Grand Trunk measure then before the House should be taken. So sudden was the demand upon the Ministry, that he no doubt thought, that the necessary guarantee would at once be made, as there was no time to be lost, and that there would, at that time be no desire to lose supporters. But in this, his calculations were found wanting, and he was summarily informed that the Government could not comply with his demand, and taking his note as a tender of his resignation on their refusal; they had therefore laid it before His Excellency, and that he had been pleased to accept it. This is no doubt the very last thing the Commissioner of Crown Lands thought his threat would come to.

As much as we may admire Mr. Cauchon for his energy and the perseverance with which he appeared determined to remodel and improve the Crown Lands department, yet we cannot approve of the manner in which he acted in this case. The Leader states that no steps have as yet been taken to fill up the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of the Crown Land Commissioner, and in the meantime it is understood that Mr. VANKOUGHNET will discharge the Departmental duties which devolved upon Mr. Cauchon. The resignation in this view of the case does not assume the character of a crisis. Mr. Cauchon's explanation delayed for a period of two hours, the Railway debate this evening. And although this may not be the sum of the difficulty, we do not think the trouble extends much further. It is true, trouble always remains, of satisfying different localities when questions of subsidizing public enterprises comes before Parliament. But we think the Government will not suffer in the judgment of the majority of the House, from having set a limit to the extent to which they are prepared to accommodate localities. And they have assumed strong ground, in deciding that neither the North Shore Railway or any other public works shall be tacked to the Grand Trunk scheme of Relief. The time to deal with other enterprises will come soon. And the Government we predict, will deal with them promptly and liberally at the proper time.

The correspondence referred to above, was read in the House on Wednesday last and was fully discussed, and from the vote that was afterwards taken upon the Grand Trunk question, the Ministry was fully sustained in the course that they had adopted.

The following is the correspondence:

HON. MR. CAUCHON rose and read a correspondence which had taken place between himself and hon. Col. Tache—the result of which was that the Commissioner of Crown Lands resigned his seat. The hon. gentleman then read the following correspondence in French and subsequently in English:

CROWN LANDS OFFICE,
April 26, 1857.

MY DEAR COLONEL,—After the discussion of yesterday in the Council, and before that of to morrow, I have thought that I should acquaint you with my views on the subject of the discussions:—A special grant of lands to the North Shore Railway Company.

I acknowledge frankly to you that my position has become insupportable, and I must have peace at any sacrifice whatever. Not only am I resolved not to sacrifice the interests of those who have made me what I am, but I am even unwilling that they should accuse me, though unjustly, of betraying them for any consideration whatever.

I do not question their judgment when their confidence gave me a portfolio, and I have no right to do so now when they have changed their minds.

Then I really see no grave inconvenience [impropriety] in a special grant of a million and a half of acres of land in the valley of the St. Maurice, and especially if the North Shore Company were compelled to construct a branch road to the Grandes Piles,

I am, Dear Colonel,
Very truly yours,
[Signed] J. CAUCHON.
To Hon. Colonel Tache.

Hon. Mr. CAUCHON.—This letter was written on Sunday.

Mr. LAFRENIER.—When you ought to have been at church. [Laughter.]

Hon. Mr. CAUCHON—I may not be so religious as the hon. member. But the letter, I may say, was written after church.—To resume. The following letter, dated April 26, was forwarded by me to Colonel Tache:—

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY,
April 28, 1857.

MY DEAR COLONEL,—I have to state to you that I cannot consent to allow the vote on the question of the Grand Trunk to pass without having the assurance of a special aid in lands for the North Shore Railroad during the present session, or at all events of a scheme similar to that suggested yesterday in Council by Mr. Vankoughnet.

You will be pleased to communicate this to your colleagues and believe me,

Your devoted servant,
And friend,
JAMES CAUCHON.

The following letter was received by me in reply:—

COUNCIL CHAMBERS,
April 29, 1857.

yesterday before my colleagues. We have considered it and with pain have come to the conclusion that but one course of action is left for you and for us.

I must express the astonishment with which we learn that for any consideration whatever you would be disposed to force us to abandon the measure of relief for the Grand Trunk Railway Company,—a measure which you so deliberately adopted in conjunction with your colleagues.

We understand you unwilling to oppose that measure of relief, but that you no longer intend to support if by your note unless we submit to a condition in regard to a measure totally distinct, and which you yourself, up to the last hour of our deliberations agreed ought in no way be associated with it. We are the more surprised at your course, because you know, as your votes admit—that the Government is now amply considering how far they can efficiently promote the enterprise contemplated by the act of last session for the construction of a Railway from Quebec to Lake Huron, and that the discussion on it was postponed until to day.

We can give but one interpretation to your note, and that is, an offer of your resignation of office, and it has pleased His Excellency after due consideration to accept the same.

I have the honor to,
My dear Sir,
Your very humble & obed't Servant,
(Signed,) E. P. TACHE.

To this I returned the following answer.

CROWN LANDS OFFICE,
April 29, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR.—I have just received your letter of this date and hasten to reply thereto. You can show it to whom you have submitted my letter of Sunday to your colleague, it is more than probable that we should not now have arrived at the painful conclusion of which you speak.

Yesterday, when after an active discussion of several days on the demands of the members for the district of Quebec, I prayed you to obtain a decision from the Council, you did not do so.

It seems to me that after a two months session in, with a little good will, we might have decided on some thing.

I have never wished to submit any one of the projects of aid to the Grand Trunk; but I have never thought that all possible interests should be sacrificed to it, especially after having done so much for that enterprise. I have suffered long, and I have even allowed myself to be unable to answer to the feeling to them in good faith in order that I might not be charged with having failed in using all other means before resorting to extreme measures.

I have submitted to drink the bitter drafts which have been presented to me from all sides, until the cup overflowed. I have been mistaken; the future will tell. In many cases be it favorable or otherwise, I accept the verdict of those whose confidence raised me to know that is the true and only principle upon which I act to-day.

Could I without suspecting ill will, understanding who, when the project was of the Grand Trunk was secretary. With open arms, I was made to answer to the members of the district of Quebec that their project was not acceptable without telling them what it was intended to give. And why, also, after several sittings passed in active discussion the Council were still refusing every project which in the opinion of the interested parties could have some chance of success?

Under one form or other, we have given aid to all the small railroads, under the pretext that by that they all terminated at the Grand Trunk, and without doubt also because in order to obtain a majority for the latter it was necessary to encircle all the local influences.

After that is not one forced to admit with chagrin that the Grand Trunk Company exercised on the Ministry, an influence which has something strange and fatal for the general interests of the country.

You have been to the last moment opposed not only to a special grant in favor of the North Shore Railway, but also to the project of M. Vankoughnet, who proposed to give five and a half million acres of land to the Quebec and Lake Huron road—one-third of which was to help immediately that part of the road completed between the cities of Ottawa and Quebec, leaving the remaining two-thirds for the rest of the line. I have more than once regretted that your support, which would have enabled me to obtain justice for Lower Canada, was wanting.

If I have stated the alternative of which you seem to complain, it is because I understand from words which fell from the hon. Attorney General Macdonald yesterday that the bill of the Grand Trunk once passed, there will be a general election without further legislation, and because I thought there were interests to guard other than one.

To day, after two months of session, and the most formal refusal ever to approach the project submitted to the Government by the members of which have just spoken. It is easy to see that the Government is not at present seriously considering to what extent it is possible effectively to aid the enterprise contemplated by the act of the last session for the construction of a railroad from Quebec to Lake Huron.

It is not exact either to say that the deliberation on this subject was postponed till to day, for there was no order to that effect.

I have the honor to be,
Dear Sir,
Your very humble & very obt. serv't.
(Signed,) JOS. CAUCHON.
Hon. Colonel Tache.

CANAL SURVEY.

Through the kindness of Mr. Pinney Civil Engineer, we are enabled to lay before our readers the result of the survey made from the Two Creeks to St. Clair River, for a Ship Canal to connect Lake Erie with the St. Clair. The Engineers made the Two Creeks Harbor their starting point, and from thence laid down a straight course to a point on Wilson's Creek, and followed this stream until it intersects with Baptiste Creek. It was found that there is only a fall of 5 ft. 87-100ths between the Baptiste Creek and Lake Erie, this fall being so slight, that it is hardly perceptible, being hardly six inches in the mile. The Baptiste Creek was then followed to its intersecting the channel of this river for two miles up the stream, a northerly line was adopted, to a point on Little Bear Creek, at its junction with the Chenail é Carié; then following that channel to the St. Clair, making in all a distance of thirty miles and a trifle over?

The survey, it appears, has proved most satisfactory; and from one shore to the other, or rather from the River Thames each way, there is almost a dead level. The summit level to be obtained is only 36 feet 23-100ths.

We hope hereafter to be enabled to give a more lengthy notice of the survey, when the engineers will have made their report. But the above figures, &c., may be relied upon as correct, as they were given from the field notes of the surveyors.

THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS DISSECTED.

The following calculations, after the manner of the Masorites, were published by an anonymous writer of the last century, the fruit, it is said, of three years' labor. They may be interesting, and perhaps useful, though they can scarcely be called edifying; and we cannot help pronouncing them a singular instance of the trifling employments to which superstition has led mankind.

FALL OF THE CARTHAGE SUSPENSION BRIDGE.—By the Rochester Democrat we learn that on Tuesday morning last, during the terrible storm, the wire suspension bridge over the Genesee river, below the lower falls, were destroyed. The bridge was 700 feet in length. And it is conjectured that the immediate cause of its fall was from the immense weight of snow which had accumulated on the surface. The storm commenced on Sunday morning, and lasted until Tuesday, at 10 A. M., and it is calculated that the pressure on the bridge at the time of its fall was 50 tons. The bridge was only erected last year and cost $23,000.

SCARCITY IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN.—The East Saginaw Enterprise states that in some portions of Genesee and Tuscola, and probably Saginaw county also, there is much suffering for want of provisions. All kinds of provisions, except flour, are unusually high, and very scarce throughout the northern region. In the newly settled town ships where most of the lands are but little improved, and the past season unfavorable, the supply of provision is short, and few of the inhabitants able to buy them at present high prices. Instances of great suffering and almost starvation, in particular neighborhoods are reported. In some cases property has been sacrificed at ruinous prices, and men have mortgaged their farms to obtain means for the support of their families, while those who have no such resources to draw upon, must receive aid or suffer actual starvation.

REAR ADMIRAL WALLIS.—The Halifax Sun states, that Rear Admiral Wallis, who has been appointed to command the Channel fleet on the southern coast of America, is a native of Halifax, and was second Lieutenant on the Shannon frigate, when she captured the frigate Chesapeake, forty-four years ago. Capt. Broke being dangerously wounded and the first Lieutenant killed; Lieutenant Wallis took the command and brought both ships into Halifax harbor.

"Here in Chicago, on Sunday we have 56 churches open during the forenoon and evening; but at the same time there are no less than 80 ball rooms, in each of which the 'band' plays from morning till midnight, and waltzing goes on without intermission. In addition to these "festivities," we have two theatres, each with its performers in tights and very short garments, rivaling Elsler in their graceful evolutions—Saloons have their front doors closed by proclamation, but do a thriving business through the entrances.

IMMENSE EMBEZZLEMENT BY A CASHIER.—$130,000 STOLEN.—John McIlveen, cashier of the firm of J. Beck & Co., extensive dealers in dry goods at No. 355 Broadway, was recently arrested charged with having embezzled a large sum of which he has been in their employ, embezzled money to the amount of upward of $130,000. The firm failed some months ago, and wishing to ascertain the cause, if possible, of their deficiency in funds, they instituted an investigation of their books for several years past, and the discovery of the above enormous defect in their cash account was made apparent. This account had been regularly balanced, but the balance had been forced and the difference between the true and false balance had been embezzled. The cashier had enjoyed the fullest confidence of his employers, and until the discoveries recently made was not suspected. It is stated that he made confession to his employers in regard to the disposition made by him of the embezzled fund, and had made over to them a house and lot in Fourth street, opposite Washington square, which he purchased with their money. It is expected also that considerable more property will be delivered up to them. McIlveen has always stood well in the community, and was formerly one of the commanding officers of the Seventh regiment. A "run" occurred on the depositors was stated to the heavy drain made by him upon their treasury. He has given bonds in a heavy amount to appear when wanted to answer the charge against him.—N. Y. Tribune.

A FEMALE RELIGIOUS DUEL.—The Correspondence Havas, has the following account of a female religious duel:

The Swiss Protestants are absorbed by a serio-comic topic. It is a feminine duel, which has just taken place, apropos to the unsolved questions between the disciples of Luther and Calvin. Two young women, teaches, of Berne, made fanatical by their reading, and the individual interpretation which it suggested, could not agree upon a point of doctrine, and finally agreed to resort to force to settle the question. The place of meeting was the most obscure part of a neighboring wood; the hour fixed was the week-day commonly had recourse to the steel weapons, for the duel was to be fought with swords. After several lively thrusts, one of the fair combatants received a severe wound in the knee, and fell upon the grass fainting

The combat ceased but our two casuists in petticoats have already rallied a good number of adherents. It is a new element of discord with the Bernese. It has almost eclipsed the Neufchatel question.

Lord Palmerston was Secretary at War in the Administrations of Mr. Percival and Lord Liverpool, from 1809 to 1827. Accepted office with Mr. Canning as Prime Minister, subsequently with Lord Goderich, and in 1828 with the Duke of Wellington. Resided with Mr. Hutchinson and Mr. Charles Grant. Appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs in Earl Gray's Administration, 1830; resigned the office in 1834; in November, 1834: reappointed April, 1835; resigned on the change of Ministry, September, 1841; reappointed a third time July, 1846 in Lord John Russell's Administration; resigned December, 1851; moved an amendment to Lord John Russell's motion for leave to bring in a Militia Bill; which was carried, and led to the resignation of the Whig Ministry in March, 1850; accepted the office of Secretary of State for the Home Department in Lord Aberdeen's Ministry, December, 1852.—Parliamentary Handbook.

An interesting young lady of Philadelphia, daughter of one of the most respectable residents, was to have been married on Wednesday evening last, 8th inst. Her bridal dress was prepared, and preparations made for the joyful event; but she suddenly fell ill, died on Sunday, and was buried on the day which should have witnessed solemnization of her nuptuals. By her request, her marriage garment formed her shroud.

THE NEW AMBASSADOR.—It is announced that Lord Elgin goes as Plenipotentiary to China to palavar Governor Yeh into good humor. His Lordship is a diplomat, of no ordinary calibre and no doubt will come sawney over the chinaman. We are not informed, which nevertheless is the fact, that his Lordship's motive in begging for the appointment was to import, wholesale Shangaiens, for his own personal benefit. While in Montreal, he was literally surfeited with the vulgar article, and as his Lordship is somewhat fastidious owing to the liberal supply he received in Montreal, but being given gratis, that should have redeemed the awkwardness of presenting the gift—his palate has become vitiated and he is about to restore its tone. Whatever distaste he may have to an egg, he is far from having any antipathy to a good nest.—Three Rivers Inquirer.

$100,000.—I being old, will give my son, a fine young man, aged 24, $100,000, provided some respectable man will give his daughter, a sensible lady, to him in wedlock, with $25,000. Mutual affection of course This is a sincere proposal. This property can be made worth $700,000. Address Junius, Herald office, for explanation. Good reason.

Mr. Hayter, the Treasury Secretary, has issued a notice to the liberal members asking them to be in their places in Parliament on the 3rd of May to vote for Mr. E. J. Denison, the ministerial candidate for the Speakership.

There are speculations in endless variety as to the ministerial programme for the new Parliament.

The Observer says that many important measures of social polity, will be at once proceeded with. It does not venture a variation on the subject of a reform bill; but amongst the matters mapped up as likely to occupy the session, is a bill for the continuance of the general board of Health—the reform of the Courts of Law and Chancery—a measure in reference to the rights of married women as regards their own property—a bill regulating a whole system of local taxation—and a medical reform bill.

FRANCE.—A number of political arrests have been made, but there is a rumour that the conspiracy was merely a trap laid by the Government to commit refugees in London to acts liable to prosecutions.

SPAIN.—An extensive conspiracy is said to have been discovered by Narvaez.

An actual outbreak occurred at Burgos.

It was proposed to place Count Montemolin on the throne, and re-establish the Inquisition.

DENMARK.—The ministerial crisis has resulted in the triumph of the constitutional party.

PRUSSIA.—The Prince, Princess, and Prince William visit England in July.

The Prussian Government has remonstrated with the United States' Government relative to the kidnapping of Prussian subjects on board American vessels.

It is more than hinted that the opposition will commence an obstructive policy at once, most likely, says the Press.

The first session of the new Parliament, short as it must be, will not pass by without ground being broken on both sides.

The supplies of produce, other than wheat continued exceedingly small, and not at all adequate to the demand. Prices are therefore very firm, and an advance for many articles is noted. Farmers are generally busy with Spring operations and it will be some time before an increase in receipts can be expected.

WHEAT.—In wheat the transactions have been large for this season of the year, and at higher prices than those prevalent at any other producing point on the continent. The range has extended from 7s to 7s 6d, the average for the week being 7s 4½d per bushel. To-day the supply was small in consequence of the bad weather, but several loads moved off at 7s 5d a 7s 6d per bushel for good fall wheat. Spring wheat is in active request at 5s 4d a 6s 5d per bushel. Good samples might realize higher prices.

FLOUR.—The flour market has been much excited during the week, and prices have advanced to a high level. On the late opening of western navigation, the light stocks at the seaward and all places of large consumption, with the comparatively small stock in store in grain depots of the west, coupled with advancing prices in England, gives a buoyancy to the market, and confidence to buyers. We advance our quotations to 26s 3d a 28s 6d for superfine, 28s 9d a 31s 3d for Fancy, 32s 6d a 35s 3d for all grades of Extra.

Barley is in good demand for seed, and 5s a 6s 6d has been freely paid.

Rye comes in slowly at 3s 9d a 4s per bushel.

Peas also wanted for seed at 5s a 5s 6d

Oats scarce and enquired for at 2s 9d a 3s per bushel.

Hay not so plentiful, and worth $18 a $24 per ton.

Potatoes very scarce and held firmly at 5s 9d a 7s per bushel.

Canada,

HER FORM OF GOVERNMENT, CONNECTION WITH GREAT BRITAIN, AND CHARACTER OF THE POPULATION.—Canada is a colony of Great Britain, but is as free and unfettered as an independent nation. The wisdom of the mother country has entrusted to Canadians the management of their own affairs. The Governor of Canada, who is also Governor General of British North America, is appointed by the British Crown, and is its representative in the colony. He nominates an Executive Council, who are his advisers on all matters. There are two legislative bodies, called the House of Assembly, and the Legislative Council, the members of which are elected by the people. The Legislative Council was formerly filled by nominees of the Crown. The system of government is that of legislative majorities, and responsibility to electors, in imitation of, and as similar as possible to, that which exists in Great Britain. All public offices and seats in the Legislature are open to any candidate possessing the confidence of the people, and holding a certain limited amount of property, and being at the time a British subject. The elective franchise is nearly universal. Every man paying an annual household rental of 30 dollars (£6 stg.), in the cities and towns, and 20 dollars (£4 stg.), in the rural districts, is entitled to vote. Aliens or foreigners can acquire and hold lands, and when naturalized, which takes place under very easy conditions, they enjoy the full privileges of native born British subjects, in electoral and all other matters. The British Government maintains a small force in Canada and the neighboring Provinces for protection against foreign invasion, and for the maintenance and preservation of the fortifications of Quebec, Kingston, and other places, in the event of a foreign war. While, therefore, the connection of Canada with Great Britain secures her against all foreign aggression, she enjoys the largest measure of political liberty possessed by any people, and exercises entire control over her internal commerce, laws, municipal institutions, taxation, religion, and education. All her external relations between government and people are those of a distinct and independent Nationality; her external relations are in a measure controlled by the mother country. Such is the connection which exists between the Imperial Government and her colonial offspring. It may now be said that it is the earnest wish, and even the aspiration, of every true Canadian, that this connection may grow to a more intimate union in all commercial relations with the people of Great Britain and Ireland, and in all sympathies which can draw fast and sure the bonds of friendship between distant nations of the same origin, government, and blood.

Canada was once a French colony and until it was ceded to the British, possessed, exclusively, a French population. In that part of the Province which lies to the east part of the Ottawa river, and which is called Lower Canada, the people are chiefly of French extraction. West of the Ottawa, or Upper Canada, is essentially British. The population of the province now exceeds 2,500,000. In some parts of Upper Canada there are large colonies of German and Dutch, and it is probable that no less than 30,000 farmers and their families, in the Talbot District, are of Irish origin, or settled in Canada after leaving Ireland. Agriculture is the chief occupation of the Province. The rise and progress of cities and towns in Canada afford a curious and most instructive illustration of the expansion of the country, the development of its resources, the increase of its wealth, and the activity and energy of its people. Montreal is the largest city in Canada, and contains about 75,000 inhabitants: Quebec ranks next, with 55,000; Toronto third, with 43,000. The history of Toronto fore-hadows the history of other towns in Canada. In 1842, a period so recent that most will remember it, Toronto contained 12,000 inhabitants, in 1852, 30,763, and in 1856, 42,000. In 1851 the estimated value of property within the city limits amounted to 12,459,600 dollars; in 1854, to 19,530,000 dollars; in 1855, to 23,092,000 dollars; and in 1856, to 28,531,064 dollars, or more than doubling in value in six years. So also with the commerce of this city; in 1852 the value of imports amounted to 2,548,858 dollars, and of exports, 536,844 dollars, whereas, in 1856, the imports were valued at 6,954,628 dollars, and the exports at 2,202,332 dollars. Toronto is situated on Lake Ontario, and may be considered as the type of a thriving commercial Canadian Port on one of the great Lakes. One more example will suffice, and that one is taken from the centre of a fine agricultural district; London, in Upper Canada, contained in 1850, 5,124 inhabitants; its population in 1856, exceeded 15,000, a nearly three-fold increase in six years. These startling instances of sudden growth, are by no means exceptions to the rule; other towns and cities are not deprived of their population to swell that of more favoured ones, or expensive communities, nor is the country drained to feed the towns. On the contrary, the progress is general: increase is the rule throughout, both in cities and in rural districts. Everywhere postal communication is complete; the most distant hamlet has its post office, and the number of offices in Canada is now about 1,500. The electric telegraph passes through every town and almost every village in the Province, and the number of miles in operation approaches already 3,500. The approach and arrival of a steamer or sailing vessel at Quebec is known very nearly at the same moment in every town of the Lower and Upper portion of the Province. All improvements in the arts or sciences affecting the commercial or industrial interests of her people are quietly introduced into Canada, and with numerous elements of adaption and progress within her reach, she eagerly avails herself of the practice and enterprise of other countries. The great and unfailing source of this steady growth, this quiet but irresistible onward movement of Canada is undoubtedly the infusion of new blood, the adoption of a new and prosperous home by tens of thousands from across the seas and beyond the confines; a home which, with all its immunities, privileges, and hopes, is offered to you, requiring no other return than a strong arm, a willing heart, and a confident self reliying trust in your future, and in the happiness and prosperity of your adopted country. This invitation, though feebly proffered hitherto, because not coupled with the positive advantages which Canada now enjoys, has succeeded in winning to her shores and fortunes, within the past twelve years, a full half million of stout and trusting hearts.—Alute English Paper.

Old Men in Old Times.

MODERN DEGENERACY.

Modern luxury is not favourable to long life. In the patriarchal era, if translators of the scriptures are correct in their interpretations of the Mosaic measurement of time, an ancient Hebrew was quite a youth at the age of a century or so, and could scarcely be considered settled for life before he had reached his second centennial epoch. Now, however, a man is venerable at fifty, and although Old Parr saw his 159th birthday and the census occasionally brings a centenarian to light, seventy is usually the extreme limit of human existence. The fact is, we moderns eat too much, drink too much, loaf too much, and work too little.—We spoil our stomachs with over indulgence, and the result is impure blood, vitiated secretions, a disordered system, and premature decay. The root of half the fatal diseases of the race is dyspepsia, a complaint unknown, it is presumed, in the days of Moses and the prophets, when turtle soup, terrapin stew, rich pate's and champagne were uninvented. As these, and hundreds of other indigestibles, however, form an indispensable portion of the carte of the nineteenth century, and human nature or rather artificial appetite will invoke dyspepsia with all its kindred horrors, one of the great objects of medical science should be to provide a cure for them. This we really think has been accomplished by Holloway. His Pills seem almost to realize the fable of the Elixir Vitæ. There can be no manner of doubt, (unless we choose to reject a mass of testimony which would be deemed conclusive by any court and jury in Christendom), that they are the most potent and unfailing remedy the world has ever seen for indigestion, and all disorders of the stomach, the liver and the bowels. We do not advise our readers to tempt an attack of these maladies by neglecting the condition of health; but if the mischief is done, we most earnestly recommend this famous laxative and stomachic—for strange to say, the Pills combine these two qualities—as the speediest, the safest, and the most infallible means of cure. In so doing we simply act upon our own convictions, founded on personal observation, as well as on volumes upon volumes of unimpeachable vouchers.—Boston Traveller.

A SCHOOLMASTER RIDES A RAIL.—Warrants have been issued at East Deer Township, Alleghany county, Pennsylvania, for the arrest of six young ladies, charged with riding the schoolmaster of that district on a rail. It appears that the schoolmaster refused the use of his school-house for the purpose of holding singing schools, which gave the young ladies great offence. So great is the excitement that the young ladies have secreted themselves to avoid arrest:

"On Friday forenoon, everything being prepared, seven buxom maidens suddenly made their appearance in the school room, and without any ceremony seized hold of the schoolmaster, placed a bag over his head, conducted him to the door, where a three-cornered rail was in readiness, upon which he was placed, notwithstanding a stout resistance, and borne off in triumph, much to the consternation of the teacher and those of the scholars not in the secret. After riding a short distance, the fair riders, not relishing the task, dropped their burden. The teacher grew furious, and made an information of the facts before a magistrate at Tarentum, and warrants were issued for the seven young ladies; the nature of the charge brought against them we did not learn. No arrests, however, have been made. Three of the young ladies were in the city on Wednesday, on their way to some secure hiding place, and the remainder, we presume have made themselves scarce.

A private letter from a French naval officer serving in the Chinese squadron, says many of the Europeans who partook of the poisoned bread at Hongkong, lost their teeth, their nails, and even the hair of their heads. A Russian captain was attacked with opthalmia, and his sight is impaired of. About 400 persons were more or less poisoned. The writer asserts that there are Europeans in the Chinese fleet, and the aptitude displayed by the natives sailors is described as extraordinary.

A MONSTER TOOTH.—A California paper says that some miners on How's Flat, recently picked up from the bed rock, eight feet below the surface, a veritable tooth measuring seven inches long, three feet wide, and eight high, from the end of the roots to the top. A mastodon with such a set of grinders, might easily have chawed up trees, while grass would have been but slender forage.

TELEGRAPH ACROSS DETROIT RIVER.—The Detroit Free Press learns that responsible parties are making arrangements to connect the Canada Railway telegraph with that of the Michigan Central Road. The wires will cross the River at Belle Isle, at a height of one hundred and sixty feet from the surface of the water. Such a connection has long been needed by both these companies, and will add greatly to their present facilities for transacting business with each other.

A WARNING TO PASSIONATE FATHERS.—A farmer in the Cape Colony had just received £40 in bank notes which he left on the table while he went out of the house to speak to a friend. In the room where the notes were left, two children were playing. During the father's absence one of them took the notes and put their into the fire. The farmer on re-entering the room asked where the paper money was. The child answered that he thought that they were only bits of common paper, and then burned them." In the heat of the moment the father gave the child an awful blow behind the ear, and he fell dead. His wife who was in the next room, putting an infant into a bath, rushed out on hearing an exclamation leaving her child alone. After some minutes she returned, and found that the infant had fallen into the bath during her absence, and life was already extinct. But the terrible tragedy was not yet complete. The unhappy father on hearing of this second loss, occasioned by his own rashness took down his gun and shot himself.—English Paper.

According to one of the provisions of the new Mexican Constitution all persons born in the Republic of Mexico are all born free; and all slaves touching the Mexican territory, regain by that act their liberty, and have a right to the protection of the laws.

SIR ASTLEY COOPER'S PILLS.

These celebrated Pills are well known in Europe where an experience of upwards of fifty years has proved them a safe and valuable remedy, and although only a few years have elapsed since they were first made known in America, an immense number of cures have been effected, more than one half of which were considered incurable, and what is more remarkable, cases which possess the very opposite as regards outward appearance, the balsamic and invigorating effects on the blood, produced by this fine medicine is perfectly miraculous; many who have kept their beds for years, have been so speedily reinvigorated with an infusion of new, rich, and pure blood, and consequently of new life and strength, that their reappearance among their fellow beings who had long given them up as incurable, is looked upon as the greatest of the many great wonders of this miraculous age.

Thousands who have been afflicted in every possible way, are daily bearing their grateful testimony to the great benefit they have received from their use, and who are now rejoicing in a renewed state of health, after having long despaired of ever possessing it again.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—To prevent imposition, be sure to ask for the Genuine Sir Astley Cooper's Pill, prepared in London and New-York; if you ask for Sir Astley Cooper's Pills only, you will get a spurious compound, which will not have a beneficial effect. The Genuine Pills have an excellent likeness of Sir Astley Cooper on the top of each box; also the fac-simile of the signature of the Proprietors, MacPhail & Co. London and New-York, on each box, and on the directions.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Gait; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - 1
For full Course in Phonography, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING,

strikes at the very foundation of part of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mystery, made such by the arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, and the student is kept constantly employed in writing up the business of a retail store, with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking part in the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best Teachers in the West. Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when vitiated, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these pills, but infallible as certainties. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma, Bowel Complaints, Coughs, Colds, Chest Diseases, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Diarrhœa, Dropsy, Debility, Fever and Ague, Female Complaints, Headaches, Indigestion, Influenza, Inflammation, Inward Weakness, Liver Complaints, Lowness of Spirits, Piles, Stone and Gravel, Secondary Symptoms, Venereal Affections, Worms of all kinds.

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 244 Strand, London, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, 244 Strand, London," are discernible as a watermark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Saturday, the

6th day of May next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 13, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

The Song of Spring.

Across the barren mountains,
I'm coming full of glee;
My magic wand is in my hand,
My step is light and free;
Beneath my feet sweet flowers arise,
And sprinkle all the ground;
The daisy's star, the cowslip's gold,
In plenty spring around,

The gentle zephyr is my breath
With violets perfumed;
My palace is the wide, wide world,
By nature's sun illumed.
My music is the warbler's song;
Amongst the clothing trees,
My dancers are the budding sprays,
Pirouetting in the breeze.

My voice is heard in every wind,
Or rivlet's murmuring sound;
My footsteps leave a trace behind,
Upon the barren ground;
My herald is the early lark,
Fresh from his misty bed;
The dog rose and the eglantine,
Form garlands for my head.

Away! away! ye biting winds,
And leave me to my toil;
Touch not thou nipping frost, the vest,
I spread upon the soil!
Sing on, ye merry warbling birds;
Dance on, dance on ye trembling sprays,
Awake, ye mortals, and enjoy,
Your happy vernal days!

ADVANTAGE OF USING TOBACCO.—Some few years ago the following was communicated to Commodore Wilkes, of the exploring expedition, by a savage of the Fee'ee Islands. He stated that a vessel, the hull of which was still lying on the beach, had come ashore in a storm, and that all the crew had fallen into the hands of the Islanders.

"What did you do with them? inquired Wilkes.

"Killed 'em all," answered the savage.

"What did you do with them after you had killed them?"

"Eat 'em, good," returned the cannibal.

"Did you eat them all?' asked the half sick Commodore.

"Yes, we eat them all but one!"

"And why did you spare one?"

"Because he tasted too much like tobacco.—Couldn't eat him no how!"

If a tobacco chewer should happen to fall into the hands of the New Zealand savages or get shipwrecked somewhere in the Fejee group, he will have the consolation of knowing that he will not be put into stakes and buried in the unconsecrated stomach of a cannibal.

TRYING AN EXPERIMENT.—The following is an extract from a private letter, dated Hong Kong, the 29th of January:—"A capital tale is told of ——'s campradore. On the morning the bread was poisoned,——'s boy ran into his room, telling him not to eat any, as it was poisoned——rang for the campradore to ask him about it, and the man promised to investigate the matter—Half an hour elapsed, and the campradore did not return. His master walked down stairs and asked him if he had discovered any trace of poison. "Yes," was the reply. "Indeed! and how did you find it out? "Oh I have given one-half to that small boy, and the other half to that coolie." "And why have you done that?" Oh, that small boy has no father, mother, sister, or wife. If he do die, what matter? Coolie all the same."

GIRLS AND BEARDS.—Two young misses, discussing the qualities of some young gentlemen, were overheard thus:

No. 1. Well, I like Charley, but he is rather girlish, he hasn't got the least bit of a beard.

No. 2. I say Charley has a beard but he shaves it off.

No. 1. No he hain't neither, any more than I have.

No. 2. I say he has too, and I know it, for it pricked my cheek.

A GAY LOTHARIO.—A good story is told of a fellow in North Carolina. Having been put in jail for marrying thirteen wives, he made his escape, and was seen three or four days afterwards by a gentleman who recognised him. The gentleman anxious to secure the reward for his apprehension, invited him to dinner, and then slyly slipped out in pursuit of a constable; but great was his horror on his return, to find that the culprit had absconded with his own wife!

CONFAB.—Dutchman—"Coot moryer Patrick, how you tuz?"

Irishman.—"Good mornin till ye Mike; think we will get any rain the day?"

Dutchman.—"I guess not, ve never has much rain in very dry dime."

Irishman.—"And ye're right, there Mike; and thin whinever it gets in the way o' rainin' the devil a bit o' dhry wether will ye get as long as the wet spell howlds."

A melting sermon being preached in a country church, all wept except one man, who was asked why he did not weep with the rest, "Oh," said he, "I belong to another parish."

"What are you about, my dear?"—said his grandmother to a little boy, who was sidling along the room, and casting furtive glances at a gentleman who was paying a visit. "I am trying, granma, to steal papa's hat out of the room, without letting the gentleman see it, for papa wants him to think he's out."

MARTEN AND MARTIN.—A gentleman of the name of Marten married a lady of the name of Martin, and it was punished by said that he knocked her eye (t) out on the day of her marriage.

Some one remarked to Lord Effingham that in Greenland persons had been known to live to the age of a hundred years, in a place where there were no physicians. 'That is certainly wonderful,' replied his lordship, 'but I can tell you what is far more so, persons have been known to live to the age of a hundred here in London—and yet there are here many thousand physicians."

The Salem Gazette says the following sign may be seen swinging at a blacksmith shop in Essex:—"No horses shod on Sunday excepting sickness or death."

CIRCULAR WORK.—"Sambo, what's yer up to now a days?" "O, I'se a carpenter and jiner," "Ho! I guess yer is. What department does yer perform, Sambo?"—"What department? I does de circular work." "What's that?"—"Why, I turns de grindstone."

Timely hints--Care of your Meadows this Spring.

1. Close them now against all cattle and all kinds of animals. Do not allow even your geese to ramble over them. Every young blade of grass cropped off now will diminish the crop of hay four or five times the amount of nutriment received by the stock from the grass. This is a kind of profit you can't afford to indulge in.

2. You will probably find inequalities of your meadows on which the water stands, after a rain. If these are of any size, dig a little trench which will drain them into some water-course. This will pay. You may add the turf which you remove to make the drain, to your manure heap. It will thus be saved, and will not leave your meadow rough.

3. Pick up all the stones which the winter frosts have brought to the surface.—The scythe or mower should not ever enter one acre during the whole season. Do this same with all sticks, and roots, and chunks, and, as far as possible, with all stumps too. A clear even surface, is at once a great beauty in a meadow, and a necessary condition of getting the whole crop of hay.

4. Cut away all hummocks and ant hills with a good spade, unless you have some more compendious way of removing them. Rolling the meadow, though a good operation, if done so as not to leave the ground "heavy," will not always press down these projections; paring them off is the only sure way. The economy of this operation will be plain to you, if you remember how many scythes and snatches have been bluted or injured by coming against these masses of turf.

5. Scatter manure generously over the higher and poorer ground in your meadow. This will of course pay.—Ohio Farmer.

Kinds of green Corn for Table use.

Every farmer, and amateur grower of horticultural products, should plant various kinds of corn, to be used for boiling or roasting while in its green state. Now which are the best kinc? Answer—the early Jefferson, White Flour Corn, Twelve Rowed Sweet, and Stowell's Evergreen.

The Early Jefferson, if grown a few degrees further South than where the seed is procured, will produce roasting ears in sixty days from the time of planting. The ears are about eight inches long, and the corn white, and a little flinty, the kernels of good fair size, and the taste almost sweet.

The White Flour Corn does not mature for roasting or boiling purposes, under about ninety days. The ears are nine to eleven long; the corn a dull white, a very little flinty, kernels fair size, good for eating green, and all the overplus, when ripe, will grind into meal almost as white and handsome as the best of wheat flour,

The Twelve Rowed Sweet Corn is an improvement on the old common sweet corn, having larger ears and larger kernels.

The Stowell's Evergreen is a variety of sweet corn that requires longer to mature than any other variety. It furnishes a supply of green corn very late in the season, the ears, many of them, being suited to boiling in November; and if left in shocks in the field, or gathered or hung up with the husks on, is often good for eating during the winter.

Hot Water for Plants.

A Correspondent of the Boston Cultivator writing on the cultivation of house plants says:

"The way to have healthy plants, is to shorten all straggling growth and remove every less and thinner as soon as the least symptom of decay is perceivable, watering them occasionally with very warm water from the fine nose of a watering-pot held high above them, thus giving them the benefit of a warm shower at any time or place.

"But the thing of all others the most important is to water them at all times with hot water: yet hot to the touch, even beyond what is supposed to be prudent, until after experiment; and it is only necessary to watch the result on the health and vigor of the plants, especially when in bloom, to be convinced of the value of this 'grand specific.' The writer says that he has fuchsias now in bloom, mere cuttings, about six inches in height, not one failing out of seven or more cuttings, planted in a single pot, and watered with hot water.

MAPLE SUGAR.—The great attention paid this Spring to the production of this article will invest all the statistics that can be gathered in relation to it, with considerable interest. The aggregate product of maple sugar in the United States in 1850, as returned by the census of that year, was 34,253,436 pounds. Of this amount 4,588,435 pounds were produced in Ohio. The New York Tribune thinks that, considering the extension of our settlements towards the North and West, the present high prices of sugar, the general attention this year to sugar making, and the long season in which the flow of sap has been continued, the amount of maple sugar made will be fully double that of 1850, or not less that seventy millions of pounds, worth at least ten cents per pound, or an aggregate of seven millions of dollars. These figures though apparently fabulous, are perfectly reasonable, and demonstrate to the thinking reader what an element of wealth we have in our midst, that is suffered to go almost entirely unattended to.

BEAUTIFUL EXPERIMENT.—The following beautiful experiment may easily be performed by a lady to the great astonishment of the circle of her tea party.

Take two or three blades of red cal bage, ut them into small bits, put them into a asin, and pour a pint of boiling water on them; let it stand half an hour, and then decant the liquid into a clean bottle; it will be of a fine violet blue color. Then take four wine glasses, into one put two or three drops of sulphuric acid, or five or six drops of vinegar; into another five or six drops of the solution of alumn; into the third a few drops of the solution of soda; and let the fourth remain empty. Fill the glasses from the bottle, and the liquid poured into the glass containing the acid will quickly change color, and become a beautiful red, and the glass containing the soda a fine green, and that containing the alum a fine purple, while that poured into the empty one will of course remain unchanged. By adding a little vinegar to the green it will become red; and by a little of the solution of soda to the red, it will become green, thus showing the action of acids and alkalies on vegetable blues.

For Sale!!!

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On Lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On Lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on the Town Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Mill House, a never-failing spring well, and all things considered, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is expected will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above premises, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£350.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are of the first class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch Than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Dunlop & Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOLMES, agent, Detroit.

Select Poetry.

The Cottage Fire.

When evening sheds its peaceful veil
O'er the light orb of day,
The happy labourer homeward goes
To wile the hours away.
Homward wake with quicken'd pace,
No more his limbs may tire,
For bright the smiles that lights each face
Around his cottage fire.

His rosy children, wild with glee,
Bounding to meet him come,
And clustering round their father dear,
They shout his welcome home;
And with those children by his side,
What more can he desire,
If those he loves are gather'd round
His cheerful cottage fire?

When o'er his pipe with welcomed friend
He'll talk of labors done—
Of many a trial that has long since past
And many a trouble gone;
Or he'll tell the tale of some battle field,
As told by his ancient sire,
Till his children fancy those warriors bold
Around their cottage fire.

And thus the evening glides away,
And night comes on apace,
But the silvery moonbeams gently fall
On many a smiling face;
For oh, no better lot they crave,
Nor wealth do they desire,
For well they know their happiest place
Is by the cottage fire.

The Dutchman and the Balloon.

A great many curious and facetious things have been told of Æronauts, and the aerial carriages, yclept balloons. A balloon making a descent on or near people who have never seen such a flying machine, unquestionably looks a little supernatural, and no doubt makes the hair rise about as sudden as bread stuffs' do semi-occasionally.

The Pennsylvanians are great on ballooning, that State having produced about a baker's dozen of aerial experimentalists whose performances have been attended by no disasters, some pecuniary advantage—to the æronauts—and considerable additions to the general stock of useful science. Some years ago, a balloonist, named West, made several voyages to the upper regions from the town of Lancaster, Lancaster Co., Pa. About the same period, a Dutch farmer, residing in the interior of New York State, Dutch as sourkrout, took it into his head to pay a visit to some of his equally Dutch friends in the aforesaid Lancaster county. Nick Morgan was the old farmer's name—simple and honest he was as the day is long—with not two consecutive ideas beyond the daily routine of his farm; a railroad and locomotive he had never seen, and as to the matter of balloons, they were altogether such contrivances as he had never dreamed or heard of. Mounted upon his old sorrel mare, with a few endibles and a dram shanter or two in his saddle bags, old Nick started on his tour to Penn.

The vrow had preceded old Nick some days in his visit, and he bustled along to join her.

Jogging along quietly and unsuspectingly, not far from his journey's end, the old farmer and the old mare were creeping up the slope of a little hill, when a voice bawled out:

"Hurry on old man! I want to pitch my grappel into that hill side, hurry, hurry!"

The old sorrel pricked up her ears, and old Nick's eyes pounched out considerably, and he screwed and twisted them behind and before, right and left, and down below, yet nothing he could see, when still louder and more stentorian than before came the same awful voice:

"Come, come, old codger, hang you, ride on, ride on, I say, or I'll pitch square into you!"

The old man was bewildered, alarmed and horrified. He reined up the old mare, and the old critter as terrified as her master, trembled like a leaf. Old Nick's eyes fairly hung out in every direction, but upward—but not the first ghost of a thing could he see save the hill on which he stood transfixed, and a few stumps close by.

To the old stumps, West, the Æronaut, who was some hundreds of feet in the air, just over the Dutchman, wished to fasten his grapling iron and stop his balloon, as night was approaching and no better spot could be easily found but then and there, West was extremely anxious to alight. But the old fellow and his horse materially interfered with this arrangement. Then was everything just then; the Æronaut did not wish to hook up the traveller nor lose his own balloon, so getting exact at the Dutchman's delay, down West throws his grappel attached to many fathoms of strong cord; but which, proving a little too short, just lit upon the hind quarters of the old sorrell, hooked the Dutchman's coat tail, and clamped the back part of the saddle tight as wax. At this critical juncture, a puff of wind bounced the balloon upwards, and lifted the mare clean and clear off her hind legs, and but for the girth parting the poor quadruped, Dutchman and all, might have been carried bodily off. The old mare turned up her eyes just as the girth of the saddle broke, and spying the great balloon over her head, she bolted off as if the veritable old Nick was after her.

Poor Nick Morgan! his coat tail came out by the roots, and he and the saddle were pitched and hauled forth rolls down the hills, where with all the breath knocked out of his body, the poor man lay stretched out like a spread eagle.

"There, you infernal old donnkey, you," bawled the Æronaut, as he was sailing away, "there you old cuss, you, I know it."

Old Nick revived in time to hear the malediction, and get one glimpse of the flying machine, when up he bounced, and after this mare went ten miles an hour.

On he splurged until not two ounces of vital air filled his breathing apparatus: over the fence of his relative's ground Nick flew and up the lane he travelled, hasting into the house, foamed, fumed and cut up such wonderous didoes that his wife and friends believed he had gone stark mad.

Exhausted quite, the poor fellow threw himself down on the bed, and to the combined efforts of his friends, the tongue of Nick Morgan refused to operate and unravel the mystery. At length his vrow essayed:

"Nicholas, vat is the matter mit you? Umph speak, speak, and tell your vife vot de matter ish, umph?"

No reply, but turning his head over and looking at his wife and friends with all the subdued tenderness of a dying calf, the old fellow offered up a heavy, doleful groan.

"Nicholas! mine tere husband, vat is de matter mit you?"

Another look and another dreadful groan.

"Nicholas, Nicholas, vy don't you tell me vas de matter."

The old man rose up a little, stared around, caught hold of his wife's arm to satisfy himself that she was really flesh and blood, then in a voice low and strong betokening the deep's density of his feelings, he spake:

"I've seen, I—I've seen him!"

The friends all huddled around, the old vrow leaned over the bed, and with a voice of extreme anxiety asked:

"Seen him! who vos it vot you seed?"

"I—I've seen him!"

"Who?" cried all the friends.

"Der ol-vil!"

"Der di-vil?" echoed the whole group of listeners.

"Yaas! an oh! mine soul, vot a big pag he carries on his shoulders!"

One Good Turn deserves Another.

A tinker was travelling in a country town, and, having traversed many weary miles without finding anything to do, he stopped, weary and hungry at a tavern. Here he got into conversation with a glazier, to whom he related his troubles. The latter sympathized with him deeply, and, telling him he should have a job before long, advised him to go into his dinner and eat heartily. The tinker took his advice, ate his fill, and when he returned to bar, he was overjoyed to hear that the landlord required his services, to mend a lot of pans and kettles, which had suddenly sprung a leak.

The tinker at once fell to work, accomplished the task, was liberally rewarded, and started on his way rejoicing. Upon reaching the outside of the house he found the glazier, who said—

"Well, you see, I told the truth. I procured you a job of work, and how do you thing I accomplished it?"

"I am sure I cannot tell," replied the tinker.

"I will tell you," rejoined the glazier: "you told me you were weary, hungry, and penniless. I knew the landlord was well off, and doing a good business, so I started a leak in every tin utensil I could get hold of."

The tinker with many thanks and a heart full of gratitude, resumed his journey, but he had not proceeded many yards before he reached the village church, when a brilliant idea struck him.

The glazier had befriended him—he would befriend the glazier. The church he thought, could afford to bear a slight leak a good cause, so taking a position where he could not be seen, he riddled every window in the edifice with stones and then, highly elated with his exploit, he retraced his steps to notify the glazier he would speedily have a very important job. He met the glazier at the door of the tavern.

"Sir," said he, "I am happy to inform you that fortune has enabled me to return the kindness I received from you an hour since."

"How so?" asked the glazier pleasantly.

"I have broken every pane of glass in the church," answered the tinker, "and you will, of course, be employed to put them in again."

The glazier's jaw fell, and his face assumed a blank expression, as he said in a tremulous tone—

"You don't mean that, do you?"

"Certainly," returned the tinker; "there isn't a whole pane of glass in the building. One good turn deserves another, you know."

"Yes," answered the glazier, in a tone of utter despair, "but, you scoundrel, you have ruined me, for I keep the church windows in repair by the year!"

A Stubborn Stripling.

A big stripling, fresh from Vermont, once entered the Dunmer Academy at Byfield, Mass. At that time the boys and girls were kept in one apartment only the middle aisles separating them. One day this Vermont stripling, who had just been helping one of the girls through a hard sum, thought it not more than fair that he should take toll for his services; accordingly he threw his stalwart arm around the rosy damsel, and gave her a sly but rousing smack, which startled the whole assembly.

"Jedediah Tower, come up here!" roared the pres-ptor,

The delinquent appeared, his face glowing with blushes like a red-hot warming-pan, and looking as silly as a ninny.

"Hold out your hand, sir!" said the pedagogue. "I'll teach you not to act thus in this institute.

The huge paw was extended in a horizontal line towards the instructor, who surveyed its broad surface with a mathematical eye—calculating how many strokes of his small ferule it would take to cover the large number of square inches it contained.

"Jedediah," at length he said, "this is the first time that you have been called up for any delinquency; now sir, if you will say that you are sorry for what you have done, I will let you off this time without punishment.

"Sorry," exclaimed the youngster, striking an attitude of pride and indignation, "sorry! No, sir! I am not. And I will do just so agin if I have a chance. So, put on, old fellow, just as hard as you like. By the Jumpin' Jehosiphat, I'd stand here and let you lick me till kingdom kum afore I'd be sorry at that!"

Miscellany.

CURIOUS FACT IN SHOT MANUFACTURING.—Previous to 1782. shot were made by dropping lead into water, and they were invariably flattened on one side. In that year, Mrs. Watts, the wife of a British shot-maker, who had been earnestly rethinking some method of making the shot perfectly round, is said to have dreamed that it could be done by dropping the lead from a great height. She and her husband tried it in the shaft of a coal mine with perfect success, and took out a patent, realizing a fortune thereby.

There is not a more ridiculous animal than an atheist in his retirement. His mind is incapable of rapture or elevation. He can only consider himself as an insignificant figure in a landscape, and wandering up and down in a field or meadow, under the same terms as the meanest animals about him, and as subject to as total a morality as they; with this aggravation, that he is the only one amongst them who lies under the apprehension of it.

RATS.—An article in a recent number of the London Quarterly says that rats are compelled to gnaw hard substances, by the peculiar nature and construction of their teeth, which are not only sharp, but endowed with such a prodigious power of growth that when a tooth is removed, the one opposite will soon shoot up and penetrate the lip of the other jaw, forming sometimes a segment of a circle. How little we know about these "old rats," after all!

The poor man has health a good appetite, an i sleeps soundly at night. The rich man has his cares, his headaches, and his heart aches; and if the sum of human enjoyment could be exactly measured by some sort of moral thermometer, we should find that real happiness is pretty equally distributed, and that there is little cause for any man to repine at his own lot, or envy that of his neighbor.

Whale fishing in the Bay of New York appears to be quite a profitable speculation in a small way. A schooner has been cruising of late in the vicinity of Sandy Hook, and from it the third capture within ten days was made on Saturday, and that too in six fathoms of water. The whales taken measure from forty to fifty feet in length, and yield from forty to seventy barrels of oil each, which, with the bone, gives a hand some return for the trouble incurred.

A fast young man, in Rochester, N. Y. recently ran his cutter against that of a Dutch lady damaging the latter somewhat, whereupon the valiant female leaped out, collared the man and made him fork over fifty cents for damages.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS Impurities of the blood are often developed in disgusting eruption, ulcers, tumors, scrofulous sores, boils, and other external affections. For all these distressing and dangerous complaints, Holloway's Ointment is literally a healing balsam. It neutralizes the materies morbi, or seeds of diseases in the exterior secretions, and dispels the inflamation. Nature does the rest. The experience of every human being who has tested the efficacy of the Ointment is the same. It has never failed. When the internal organs are alone affected, as in liver complaints, dyspepsia, and irregularities of the bowels, a few doses of the Pills afford certain and permanent relief.

RICHES PERSONIFIED.—The wealth of Cræsus, which has passed into a proverb, has been variously accounted for. The possessors of Sardis, the capital of the Lydian kings, were enriched by the neighborhood of the river Pactolus, which flowed down from Mount Timolus towards the Hermus, and brought with it considerable quantities of gold in its sand. To this cause historians often ascribe the abundant treasures belonging to Cræsus and his predecessors: but Cræsus possessed upsides, other mines near pergamus and other cause of wealth is cited, to found his the general history of the Lydian people. They were the first (according to Herodotus) who ever carried on retail trade, and the first to coin money of gold and silver."—From Timbs' "Curiousity of History."

The eccentric Lord Holland, of the reign of William III., used to give his horses a weekly concert in a covered gallery, specially erected for the purpose. He maintained that it cheered their hearts and improved their temper, and an eyewitness says that they seemed to be greatly delighted therewith.

Two children buried five years since in Allantown, Pa; were recently exhumed, and it was found that their bodies were petrified.

The Poisoning of the President.

A Washington dispatch says, "the merchants and business men in the city are taking up a subscription of ten thousand dollars, which will be paid to any person or persons ascertaining the cause of the poisoning case at the National Hotel. The developments that have recently come to light have caused much excitement here.

"There is a mystery about the origin of this matter that is far from being cleared up by any investigation that has yet been made. According to a cotemporary, at least 700 persons have been affected, and about thirty deaths have taken place. The universal opinion is that the source of the malady was poison, and the prevalent belief is that it was administered by design to kill the President. Ever and anon, some new victim is added to the list, and the periodical return of the disease constitutes another fearful feature to suspicion. The Daily Times" says:—

"The disease appeared at Washington immediately upon President Buchanan's visit there on the first of February:—it had not been heard of before:—it broke out suddenly and attacked nearly all who were living, lodging and eating at the National Hotel;—and among those who were affected by it none more seriously, or, to all appearance, more dangerously ill than Mr. Buchanan himself. He returned to Wheatland with the decease upon him:—and so threatening were the symptoms that a medical gentleman who saw him there within a fortnight of his departure a second time for the capital, wrote a private letter to this city stating that the President was very ill,—that it was not the result of fatigue or of anxiety,—that his symptoms baffled inquiry and that in his opinion it was very doubtful whether he would ever be able to go through the ceremony of the Inauguration, if indeed, he should live until that time. This letter he refused to allow to be published, and beyond a distant allusion to the serious nature of the President's illness which appeared in the "Times," the whole matter was kept from the knowledge of the public. But the President has not yet recovered from its effects. The disease hangs around him still, as it hangs around the scores of others who were seized by it at the same time."

CURIOSITY.—In the Interior of the Eastern Penitentiary, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, there are two cells, the walls of which are painted in water colors in a manner so elaborately beautiful as to cause an involuntary wish on the part of each visitor that the chamber of his or her residence could be similarly adorned. The work was performed by a convict at odd intervals of leisure. The only tools at his command were a ruler, lead pencil, and a small brush, which, we are informed, he made from his own hair. The pattern is kaleidoscopic, interspersed with rich medallions; the effect of the whole being, with the exception of transparency, very similar to that of stained glass. The four sides of the cell, and the arched roof, are alike covered. Over the brass water faucet, which, by the way, is furnished like a mirror, there is painted a water cooler, and at the place where his eye touches the wall is represented the head of a fashionable bedstead: all this is executed in a highly artistic manner, and will bear close examination. The convict who performed this beautiful work has already served four terms in the same prison; and, strange to say, is now in Moyamensing awaiting trial upon a fifth serious charge. He is by birth a German, and has a mania for appropriating other people's goods, which is believed to be wholly unconquerable.—Phila, N. American.

EVENING REFLECTION.—No sounds are in the air but the singing of the solitary lark—who pours down his thrilling music from a height at which his little figure is invisible, —and the small twittering of myriad grasshoppers. Soft feelings creep upon the soul:—sensations of peace, and calm, and Eden given happiness! Longing to cast away the trammels of the world, and to return no more to the sweltering dense people's city or engage in the strife of ambition, the empty struggle for still emptier distinction! In the glowing stillness of that glorious evening, the soul holds mysterious communion with its Maker, and in its ardent longings for that peace of which it is permitted to enjoy a transient foretaste, asks why it is that peace is such a stranger to its thoughts

Great Southern Railway.

PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

To the exclusion of nearly all other matter, we this week give the proceedings before the Railway Committee of the Legislative Assembly upon the Great Southern Railway Bill, that has been introduced by Mr Rankin. Comment is hardly necessary, as the facts brought out already are sufficient to stamp those who have been most prominent in bringing this measure forward, with the unenviable character of Railway sharpers; and, from what has been brought to light, very little confidence can be placed in the honesty of intention of the Member for Essex.

Commenting upon the evidence already adduced, the Toronto Colonist of Satur lay last, says:

"The Committee Room, yesterday morning, was crowded to excess to hear evidence, or counsel, or indeed anything else which might turn up in relation to this disgraceful concern. After some sparring between the counsel, and a good deal of manœuvring between various members of the Committee, as to the mode of examining witnesses, it was finally decided that four out of the Committee might do so, and that the presence of any two of them would justify the examination.

Mr Groer's evidence is extraordinary, and will startle every honorable man who reads it; but we are told, that future revelations are to be infinitely more disgraceful and scandalous, and that the parties opposed to Mr. Rankin are likely to cut even a worse figure than those who are now on their trial, for the investigation amounts to this.

Whilst alluding to these matters, we may as well extend our enquries to other corruption committees, as well as to the general railroad committee. At this present moment there are no less than three of those Committees in full blast; namely, the Committee appointed expressly to examine into the affairs of the Grand Trunk, the committee to investigate the alleged corruptions connected with the Woodstock and Erie Railroad, and the General Committee, now trying the claims of the conflicting parties to make the Great Southern Road. And, of all the disclosures which have ever been made before a legislative assembly, we question much if any thing so thoroughly and irredeemably disgraceful was ever brought to light before, as is now daily brought out by these committees."

The following particulars of the proceedings before the Committee, are taken from the Colonist and the Globe:

TUESDAY, May 7, 1857.

The Railway Committee met this 7th instant for the purpose of proceeding with their enquiry respecting the Great Southern Railway Bill introduced to the House by Mr. Rankin; Sir Allan McNab in the chair.

Mr. FRANK POWELL and Mr. JOHN O'CONNOR in support of the bill; and Dr. CONNER, Q. C., and Mr. ECCLES, Q. C. against it.

The CHAIRMAN called upon the promoters of the bill to proceed with their case.

Mr. RANKIN said he had yesterday made all the explanations which he considered necessary, and were he to make any statement now it would only be going over the same ground again.

Hon. J. C. MORRISON said, counsel had only been engaged since yesterday, and, therefore, those appearing for the petitioners against the Bill, were placed in a somewhat awkward position from having no knowledge of the statements.

The CHAIRMAN said it was for the Committee to say whether the promoters of the bill should not conclude their case before the opposing party were called upon to state the grounds of their opposition. The proper course to pursue, in his opinion, would be for Mr. Rankin, through his counsel, to proceed to make the observations which he thought necessary.

Mr. RANKIN repeated that he had said all that he considered was required.

After some discussion on this point, it was eventually arranged that the petitioners against the bill should proceed with their case.

Mr. ECCLES then proceeded to remark that the course which the Chairman had suggested should be taken, seemed to him not only reasonable but one which a professional man could well understand, namely, that where parties were called upon to answer a case, they should first hear it. From all he could learn, the case in favor of the bill was confined to the statements contained in the petition of four individuals one of whom was a member of that committee. No evidence, he understood, had been offered in support of those statements, and he humbly submitted, therefore, that, before his clients were called upon to answer them, evidence should be given in support of them. The statements were divided under three heads. The first was, that the construction of a line of railway by the shortest route, from the Niagara to the Detroit river, had been carnestly desired by the people inhabiting the region of country through which it is proposed to build such railway. This was the first proposition and there were four petitioners who were desirous to have the road made. Whether there were 400 or 4000 persons behind in favor of it, who signed the petition, was not stated, but certainly there was not a particle of evidence of the fact, and from all he had been able to learn, he believed the desire for such a line of road was confined to a few individuals who had their own personal interests to serve. The second branch was, that although the charters for the different portions of the said line had been granted to distinct companies, years had elapsed without even a commencement of the works having been made, nor was there any prospect of a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties growing out of the conflicting interests of parties of a local and private character. Now, if any evidence were adduced in support of these assertions, they would be quite able to abut it. They were prepared to show that the works had been commenced, and that thousands of pounds had been spent upon them. It was, therefore, exceedingly unreasonable that, while there was no evidence in support of these assertions, his clients were called upon to show that they were unfounded. The third statement in the petition was, that suits in chancery are still pending, and undecided, between the opposing parties claiming to exercise control over the affairs of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway, and that years may elapse before such suits are brought to a close. There, again, there was no evidence that even any suits were pending, much less that suits were pending and that years were likely to elapse before they were closed. These were the points set out in support of the bill, but he was instructed that not one of them could be established. However as the committee had decided that his clients should answer these statements, they were perfectly prepared to do so, and to show that they were the very contrary to facts. He would read to them the petition of the St. Thomas and Amhersburg Rail way Company. Previous, however, to doing so, it was necessary for him to make the preliminary observation that, unfortunately this company was split up into parties. This had been the case from the first establishment of the company, and two boards of directors had been created. The conflict between the two boards had been the means of preventing a great deal being done that otherwise would have been effected. At the head of one of these boards, or at all events one of the Directors was Mr. Rankin, the gentleman who had introduced, and brought this bill before the House. At the head of the other board, or controlling the other board, was Mr. Buchanan, the gentleman he represented before this committee. These boards were appointed on the same day by parties representing the whole Company. The stock was taken by a number of persons on the day appointed for the election of directors. It was found that while there were two boards working in opposition to each other it was impossible to make any progress with the works. Accordingly, proceedings were instituted by the board of which Mr. Rankin was a member, against the board of which Mr. Buchanan was a representative. These suits, it was alleged in the petition, might not end for years. He was instructed to say these suits had been concluded—that an amicable arrangement had been come to between the parties—some two or three months since. But he understood that recently Mr. Rankin had given instructions to the Solicitor, who filed the bill on behalf of that gentleman and others, to put the said bill in abeyance, and to consider that it had been complied with. These instructions had been given with ut the concurrence or co operation of those engaged in instituting the original suits. In the petition of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company all these facts were minutely detailed. The petition was as follows.

To the Honourable the Legislative Assembly of Canada in Provincial Parliament assembled:

THE PETITION OF THE AMHERSTBURGH AND ST. THOMAS RAILWAY COMPANY.

HUMBLY SHEWETH.—That your Petitioners having learned that a Bill is before your Honourable House to incorporate the Great Southern Railway Company most respectfully beg leave to state reasons why the said Bill should not pass.

That your Petitioners subscribed stock in your Petitioners Railway to an amount not exceeding five hundred thousand pounds, (£500,000) and paid the ten per cent thereon into the Bank of Upper Canada, where it still remains.

That your Petitioners on the 7th day of August last proceeded to the election of Directors, and having done so elected John McLeod, of Amhersburgh, Esquire, President.

That on the same day the parties represented by the late Samuel Zimmerman, assembled at Amhersburgh, and over two hundred and fifty thousand sounds (£250,000) met at another place and elected Directors of whom the said John McLeod was one; and Arthur Rankin, Esquire, a member of your House, was made President.

That your Petitioners were taking the necessary steps to proceed with the works of the Company, when the Directors, presided over by the said Arthur Rankin, at the instance of the late Mr. Zimmerman filed a bill against the members of your Petitioner's board in Chancery to test the validity of your Petitioners election of Directors, which suit is still pending.

That some time after advances for an amicable settlement were made by both the contending parties, and were at the point of being concluded, and, no doubt, would have been, had not the unfortunate accident happened which caused the death of Mr. Zimmerman.

That shortly after Mr Zimmerman's death as the time approached in which your Petitioners had to commence their works under their charter, and, as intended by Mr. Zimmerman, a contract was concluded and entered into with parties in England for the construction of the whole line in the most perfect and substantial manner, and one half of such contract was to be offered to the Estate of Mr. Zimmerman.

That such contract was duly executed on the 28th day of March, and your Petitioners Line of Railway was to be proceeded with at once.

That it was also agreed by your Petitioners that the amalgamation intended by the act of last session, chap 74, should immediately take place with the Woodstock Company.

That the amalgamated Board should consist of eleven Directors, viz.; two from each of the Boards presided over by Mr. Rankin and Mr. McLeod; two from the Woodstock Board; two on the part of Mr. Zimmerman's estate; two on the part of Mr. Buchanan and a neutral party, viz, Thomas G. R dout, Esq., Cashier of the Bank of Upper Canada

That all suits were to be withdrawn, and that the preliminary steps to this amicable settlement and amalgamation were to be taken.

That in pursuance thereof your Petitioner, in conjunction with your Petitioner's rival Board and the Woodstock Company, have passed the necessary resolutions and called the meetings of shareholders for the purpose of confirming the three Boards of Directors and the two lines of railway, and that as soon as the time limited by law expires the amalgamation will be completed, and the purpose and object for which your Honorable House chartered your Petitioners, and amended the charter to Bill was now Woodstock Company, viz, the construction of a through Southern Line of Railway will be fully carried out.

That the estate of Mr. Zimmerman declined taking any interest in the contract above referred to upon condition that all advances made, and preliminary expenses incurred by the late Mr. Zimmerman should be refunded; that Mr. O'Reiley be paid for his services for the last 15 months as agent of the said Mr. Zimmerman and on account of the Municipalities; that the through line be completed from Detroit River to the town of Clifton with the utmost speed; that the rolling stock be construction at the Niagara Dock; and that all agreements in writing made by Mr. Zimmerman be respected and carried out if possible.

That on the part of your petitioners the preliminary arrangements were being proceeded with when your petitioners were informed by the parties representing the Zimmerman estate, that Mr. Rankin claimed a share in the contract for the construction of your petitioners railway, or to be secured in the payment of the amount of his bill if passed, would

That he would not consent to an amalgamation unless he was secured to that or some other large amount of money, and that he should have the control or management of the Company.

That your petitioners could not consent that £750,000 stock should be controlled by £1,000; nor could they agree to the payment of any sum of money to Mr. Rankin, they knew nothing of the matter, and that his claim if any, was one with which your petitioners and the estate of Zimmerman had to deal.

That for reasons unknown to your petitioners, except such as your Petitioners might deduce from the circums ance of Mr. Rankin's connection to the amalgamation, the Bill has been introduced into your Honorable House for a new charter.

Therefore your Petitioners humbly pray, that your Honourable House, in view of existing Statutes, Chartering and amending the Charters of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Company, and the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, and the steps make towards a settlement of the disputes between the conflicting Boards of the latter Company, and the general amalgamation of all the conflicting and concurring interests, which will result in the completion of a through line of road; and in view of the varied and large interests created by Parliament, and brought into active operation by these Statutes will not for the reasons urged in the above petition sanction the passage of the Bill to incorporate the Great Southern Railway Company.

In this petition the position of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway was clearly defined. It would appear that Mr. Rankin was at this moment one of the Board of Directors of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway. Upon him, therefore there could be no question, a very serious trust devolved. It was a part of his duty to protect the interests of that company, and it was also a part of his duty to see that the interests of the present holders of stock in the company were not in any way compromised, jeopardised, or injured. It was, therefore, a strong point in his client's case that the gentleman who appeared before the committee as the advocate for the destruction of the Company was one of the very persons who had been selected by the stockholders to maintain it in its integrity. On behalf of Mr. Buchanan he also presented a petition, which set forth certain serious objections to the Bill. Indeed, up to the present time there had been advanced by Mr. Buchanan a sum of nearly £500,000. This money had been in part spent, and a part was now lying in the bank, where it had been deposited in the name and according to the charter of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company. Mr. Buchanan, therefore, individually, felt himself placed in a very awkward position; for the effect of the bill, if passed into law, would be to destroy totally the charter under which he had advanced this money, and if the charter was destroyed of course this money was lost for ever.—There were also other very serious objections urged by Mr. Buchanan. Without any present interest in it, he had been the means of inducing parties in England to enter into contracts with the Company for the completion of the road. These parties are to raise the funds necessary for executing the works, and they had already commenced the works and expended a large sum of money. This had been done in accordance with and under the authority of several acts of Parliament of this Province. As he had already said, they had extending Boards of Directors of the Amhersburg and Saint Thomas company and of the Woodstock and Lake Erie company had united; they had come to an agreement, the effect of which was that they should carry out all the objects of the charter, and that all differences existing between them should be at an end. A Board of eleven Directors had been chosen under the authority of these Acts. It had been cle ared by all the parties connected with these two companies—including, of course, the Board of which Mr. Rankin was President, that the agreement was entered into by Mr. Rankin on the part of one of the contending parties. The agreement was entered into in the month of May last, and it was expressly stipulated that means should be found early in the month of August to offer the object of the different characters. In pursuance of this arrangement communications were had with parties in England with the view of inducing them to take a contract to make the road from one end to the other and to furnish the necessary funds. The parties had taken the contract, and it was in the course of being fulfilled. Under these circumstances, then, it did happen strangely that there should be an attempt to overr.de all that had been done—to strike at the very foundation of the arrangement by the three Boards of Directors and the two lines of railway, and that as soon as the time limited by law expires the amalgamation will be completed, and the purpose and object for which your Honorable House chartered your Petitioners, and amended the charter to Bill was now Woodstock Company, viz, the construction of a through Southern Line of Railway will be fully carried out.

That the estate of Mr. Zimmerman declined taking any interest in the contract above referred to upon condition that all advances made, and preliminary expenses incurred by the late Mr. Zimmerman should be refunded; that Mr. O'Reiley be paid for his services for the last 15 months as agent of the said Mr. Zimmerman and on account of the Municipalities; that the through line be completed from Detroit River to the town of Clifton with the utmost speed; that the rolling stock be construction at the Niagara Dock; and that all agreements in writing made by Mr. Zimmerman be respected and carried out if possible.

"Signed and sealed at the Clifton House, Falls of Niagara, this third day of July, 1856."

(Signed) SAMUEL ZIMMERMAN [Seal]
" ARTHUR RANKIN, [Seal]
" JOSEPH A. WOODRUFF, Witness."

He would only remark upon this agreement that at the time it was made Mr. Rankin was one of the provincial committees in whose hands as well as in those of Mr. McLeod and others, was the sole management of the affairs, and that a step of this kind taken by him was one well known to the courts of equity to be a great breach of trust, as a common established principle of those courts that any trustee, director, or member of any company should not participate in any way in the profits made out of the capital or the funds of the company.

Mr. BROWN:—Does Mr. Rankin admit the genuineness of this document?

Mr. RANKIN:—I do, I read it myself here. It contains nothing which I shall not be able to justify.

Mr. ECCLES:—The agreement was not only that Mr. Rankin should participate in the profits of the contract, but it was made binding upon him that in August he was the day appointed for the election of Directors. Another scheme was in contemplation at the time. The lapse of a month made a great difference in the state of things, and while Zimmerman was uppermost on the 3rd of July, it would seem that Buchanan was going to be uppermost in August. Another proposition originating with Mr. Rankin then came to Mr. Buchanan. It was this—that he wanted an understanding before uniting with Mr. Buchanan in appointing Directors, never saying a word about the previous engagement with Mr. Zimmerman—that, in the event of Mr. Buchanan's party being successful, and failing to get the contract from Mr. Zimmerman, he might have something to fall back upon on that side—that, in short, Mr. Buchanan should give him a contract, and in order to compel Mr. Buchanan to come to those terms, he made use of threats that he would oppose him in the appointment of Directors, &c (Mr. Eccles), should have stated before this that the Committee had a letter which he would read, which he had received from Mr. Rankin.

Mr. ECCLES:—We have taken the trouble of bringing here all the persons who can give testimony on the whole matter for the purpose of having it sifted to the last tow. The letter of the communications which took place between Mr. Rankin and Mr. Greer, the agent of Mr. Buchanan, in which it was proposed by the one or the other that Mr. Rankin should have a contract. Mr. Rankin wanted to know what Mr. Zimmerman would give him, and Mr. Greer said, and having been told by Mr. Buchanan that he would make £1,000 per mile, Mr. Rankin's reply was that he wanted something equal to that, and Mr. Greer said he would introduce him to Mr. Vansittart, who was a friend of his, and who, he thought, he would make as good a contract as Mr. Zimmerman. That proposal failed. Mr. Rankin refused to forego his opposition on such terms, and still kept back the fact of the agreement which he had made with Mr. Zimmerman. There was no other alternative, Mr. Rankin said that he had a dispute with the Great Western Company. "They took," he said, "400 old feet frontage of my land; we arbitrated the amount to be paid; the award was £800, whereas I was entitled to £2,000; and as Mr. Buchanan's steps forward on behalf of the Great Western Company I will make the proposition that if he gets that award thrown open and a new arbitration, so that I may again have a chance of establishing the real value of the land taken from me, then I will come to his terms and join him in carrying out the act. The reply to this proposal was in writing; Mr. Buchanan, on behalf of the Company, offered to allow £500, which, however, was rejected. All the communications of Mr Rankin with Mr. Buchanan falling in the latter end of July, he had occasion again to the Zimmerman party to assist him. The unfortunate accident which deprived Mr. Zimmerman of his life, it was also supposed put an end to his contract. Were the bill one which the public desired—one which seemed beneficial to the public—and one which would not infringe upon the rights of individuals, then he presumed that any arrangement between Mr. Rankin and Mr. Buchanan would not impede the passing of the bill. But he had shown that the petitioners were nobody—that the object of the bill was not reasonable—and that the policy of it was injurious to the interests of those, who on the faith of charters, had invested money in the road. If the real object of the bill was shewn to be as he had represented: that of itself would very materially influence the Committee. He had now drawn to the close of his remarks. He had endeavoured to lay before them an outline of the answer which they proposed to give to the petition for this bill, and if what he had stated was establish ed in evidence, and he instructed it would be, the answer to the bill was as good a one as could possibly be asked. There was only one other part that he would mention. After Mr. Zimmerman's death the following memorandum was given by Mr. Rankin to Mr. Vansittart.—

"If Mr. Buchanan and Mr. Street (on behalf of Mr. Wythes) will bind themselves to carry out the arrangements entered into between Mr. Zimmerman and myself, with reference to the Amhersburg and St. Thomas railway, and to protect my interests to the full extent to which Mr. Zimmerman had agreed, in writing over his own signature, and further to protect the rights of all other parties, derived from the late Mr. Z. which have been reduced to writing, and signed, I will at once abandon all opposition to their plans, and do my utmost to reconcile all conflicting interests."

" A. R."

The memorandum explained itself. It was, if Mr. Buchanan will only yield to Mr. Rankin what he asks, he will abandon all the proceedings which he has taken.

The Committee then adjourned.

FRIDAY, May 8, 1857.

In the Railroad Committee of the House of Assembly the party opposing the Bill called as a witness Mr. John H. Greer, of Hamilton.

Q.—Are you acquainted with Mr. Isaac Buchanan and Mr. A. Rankin.

A.—I am.

Q.—Did you at any time last year have anything to say to Mr. A. Rankin with respect to the St. Thomas and Amhersburg Railroad?

A.—I did.

Q.—At what time were these communications held, and what position did Mr. Rankin then hold in the St. Thomas and Amhersburg Railway Company?

A.—Between the 25th of July and 1st of August, Mr. Rankin was one of the Provisional Committee of Management, one of the original seven.

Q.—Where did you meet Mr. Rankin?

A.—I met him at Windsor.

Q.—What was the occasion of your going to Mr. Rankin, and by whose direction did you go?

A.—I went on the occasion of enlisting his good will and services in behalf of the Great Western Railroad, and at the instance of Mr. Isaac Buchanan.

Q.—What took place when you so met him?

A.—I said to Mr Rankin that of course he was aware of important railroad matters then on the tapis. I introduced myself by saying I had come to see him on railroad business from Mr. Buchanan—that he was of course aware there were important moves afoot. I did not like to come out too bluntly with it at first; but I then said we would be desirous of his co-operation. I then asked him in what position he stood as regarded the opposite party to us—if he were disentangled from Mr. Zimmerman, and free to act with us. His answer was, yes, that he was. I reiterated that Mr. Buchanan was a friend of the Great Western Railway Company, and wishing him to co-operate with them. I said that that gentleman had sent me to him, he being one of the original provisional with the scheme of the Southern Road —that in a remunerative point of view he would be placed on as favourable a footing as other gentlemen similarly situated were. Mr. Rankin naturally wished to know what that meant. I told him it at there would be £2,000,000 sterling out of £2,000,000 of stock, which would produce to him, Mr. Rankin, something like £5000. Mr. Rankin looked upon that proposition, I may say with contempt. He looked to a different state of things altogether than a paltry £5000 His object was to obtain a contract for the construction of a portion of the road, which he hoped would yield him £30,000 or £40,000—I think he said £50,000. He remarked that, under the circumstances, he was as well entitled to such favours as foreigners. I said I had no doubt in my mind that Mr. Buchanan and his friends would be very pleasure in forwarding his views in that respect, as far as lay in their power; but that at that stage of the proceedings they could not talk of the matter of contracts. I found it was impracticable to accomplish the object of my mission, or any part thereof, and therefore, as we had a train to catch, shortly see him again, I parted with him.

Q.—Did you then communicate with Mr. Buchanan? If so, how?

A.—I then returned to Hamilton, and orally communicated to Mr. Buchanan the result of my interview with Mr. Rankin, which was unsatisfactory to him.

Q.—Did you again meet Mr. Rankin? If so, when? where? and at whose request?

A.—I again met Mr. Rankin, having waited upon him at his own locality of Sandwich, on the 1st of August. I told him I again waited on him for the purpose of endeavoring to obtain his co-operation, and that I did so at the request of Mr. Buchanan, and that I hoped something to accomodate matters might be done. Mr. Rankin said he thought something might be done. He said there existed a matter in dispute between the Great Western Company and himself concerning the sale of a water lot for the Company's depot at Windsor. Mr. Rankin then said that he had sold the Company the said lot at a price which was very unsatisfactory to him, and that he had endeavoured through Courts of Law on two occasions, I think, to dissolve the bargain in vain. Mr. Rankin then added as a proposition that, if the company would cancel that purchase, and leave the value of the lot to arbitration, he would withdraw his opposition to our views as originally proposed. I then said I thought I could take upon myself to settle it. It could not involve a large sum, I thought—probably not more than £500 or £600. Mr. Rankin demurred to that proposition on my part and added that the arbitration must be left entirely to him. I then said that I was very anxious to forward the closing of the matter and I would telegraph Mr. Buchanan on the subject. I accordingly wrote a telegraph at that time in Mr. Rankin's presence, and which I read to him, to Mr. Buchanan at Hamilton, and which is as follows:—"Windsor, August 2, 1856. Isaac Buchanan Esq; Hamilton. An unsettled old sore exists between Company and Mr. Rankin, about 403 front on the depot ground now in their use. Lot No. 86. Mr. Rankin is perfectly willing to submit the matter to arbitration in the usual way, and acquiescence will dispel all hostility and secure the entire friendship of Mr. Rankin. I strongly recommend this course. Answer me as soon as possible with authority to close." Signed, John H. Greer."

Q.—What answer did you receive from Mr. Buchanan, and did you communicate the same to Mr. Rankin?

A.—I received Mr. Buchanan's reply on my departure for Hamilton, and which was: John H. Greer, Windsor. I shall get the railway to consider Mr. Rankin's Case on condition that no suit or delay be effected. Hamilton, 2nd August, 1856. Signed, Isaac Buchanan." The above telegraph I mailed from Windsor to Mr. Rankin, with the following letter:—" Windsor, 2nd August, 1856. Arthur Rankin, Esq., Windsor. My Dear Sir,—I have just received a reply to my telegraph which says—(above quoted). As I am not sufficiently acquainted with the actual position of your case, I cannot urge you but trust the offer is such as you can accept of in order to have the vexed question set at rest, and this once done the bone of contention is removed, and the most particular care, you may rely upon it, to deal with you otherwise in a way that must render you satisfaction, and to feel and know that you have been liberally and suitably acknowledged in the Great South Western project will be scrupulously observed. I therefore trust you will yourself be justified in acceding to Mr. Buchanan's proposition, and that you will have the bond made out and sent down on Monday for ratification. In any case let me hear fully from you by telegraph early on Monday morning. In haste, yours sincerely, John H. Greer.

It is proper to mention that a portion of the cause of my going up was omitted. The following telegraph I received at Hamilton, previous to my departure for Windsor on this occasion, and which I should have mentioned sooner:—

WINDSOR, 1st August, 1856.

"John H. Greer Hamilton.

"Have got the Amhersburg book. If you choose to come up, I will talk with you.

" A. RANKIN."

On Monday I telegraphed to Mr Rankin:

" Hamilton, 4th August.

" A. Rankin, Windsor.

" Mr. Buchanan is unacquainted with transaction. I am authorized to inform you that the matter may be settled according to my telegraph to Mr Buchanan on Saturday, which I read to you. In general matters, Mr. Buchanan would be proud to act with you, cordially and confidentially.

" JOHN H. GREER."

On the same day, subsequently, I received a telegraph from Mr. Rankin, dated Windsor, 4th August:

"John H. Greer, Hamilton.

"Nothing but the bond to arbitrate under seal of Company, without conditions as to price to be demanded, will do.

"A. RANKIN."

Q.—Had you any further correspondence with Mr. Rankin?

A.—No. That closed the correspondence between Mr. Rankin and myself on the subject.

Q.—When did you next see Mr. Rankin?

A.—At Amhersburgh, on the 7th of August.

Q.—State what then took place between you,

A.—I had no business interview with Mr Rankin on that day.

Q.—What took you to Amhersburgh that day?

A.—I went there for the purpose of being present on the occasion of the election of Directors of the Amhersburgh and St. Thomas Railway.

Q.—What took place that day?

A.—On the morning of that day, I issued handbills that a meeting of shareholders would take place at the Townhall of Amhersburgh, at twelve o'clock, for the purpose of electing a Board of Direction Copies of said handbills were delivered by myself to the four Provisional Directors—Messrs. Rankin, Larwill, Southwick, and Macbeth, who were considered to compose a conflicting interest. At noon the meeting was held, and a Board of Directors chosen, consisting of the following gentlemen—John McLeod, William Wallace, Joseph B. Berthelot, William Duff, Theodore J. Park, John G. Kolfage, James Dunbar, John W. Ritsdale, and Peter Menzies. John McLeod, Esquire, was appointed President, and Theodore J. Park, Vice President of said Board of Direction.

The examination of this witness had not closed when the Committee adjourned.

EVIDENCE OF MR. ISAAC BUCHANAN.

Mr. Greer not being able, on account of ill health, to appear before the Railway Committee on Saturday, the evidence of Mr. Buchanan was then taken.

Q.—How did you become connected with the chartered companies forming the southern chain of Railways, and with what object?

A.—I got hold of the stock of the Southern Railway to offer it pro rata to shareholders of the Great Western Railway Company. I had been working, for the Great Western from its commencement, having moved the first resolution at a meeting originating it in 1845. I felt my interest to be identical with the Great Western Railway. Those co-operating with me, had for many years objected to the construction of the Southern Road, until the success of the Great Western Railway was secure. We had done this for the single reason, that if the Great Western line is the best for the interior of Canada, it would never be profitably built if not built before the Southern line, which clearly is the best through route. The time had come when we had given up the feeling that we would with justice oppose the construction of a second line. This fact was known to all. Our application for a charter to build a second road was upon the Great Western Line. For the second track money was ready in London, and my movement in connection with the chartered company forming the southern chain of railway, had the principle object of getting for the shareholders of the Great Western Railway, the privilege of building their second track along the vastly more favorable line of the Southern Railway, instead of along the present circuitous and difficult line of the Great Western Railway. Mr. Harris, my partner, was to build the new line, was then in England, and from my long connection with the company, and having been a director, it was thought that I was the natural party to move. I had the concurrence of all the Directors of the G. W. R. in Canada except Mr. Brydges. I had no object of personal profit, but an advantage that could be derived from purchasing land at the various stations along the line, or any balance which might remain of 2½ per cent, which had been laid aside of premiums to be given to the original promoters or parties controlling the charters, were still to be applied to create a fund for annuities and other reliefs of distressed employees of the railroad.

Q.—How did you propose to effect that object as to the Eastern and Western links?

A.—The capital of the western end was one million pounds currency, and the capital of the eastern end was the same amount—We proposed to amalgamate the eastern and western charters.

Q.—Did you directly or indirectly reserve to yourself any interest?

A.—I have answered this question before. I again repeat that in no way whatever did I expect to receive any personal advantage in connection with the possession of these charters, and as a matter of fact I have received no such advantage.

Q.—Did you ever offer Mr. Rankin £50,000 to secure his interest in promoting your views?

The only approach to such a thing was, that he asked for a contract, and that I said that no doubt the friends of the Great Western Railway, if we built the line, would receive a preference for the contract. He asked what I supposed Mr. Zimmerman could make by the contract which we had given him on the 50 miles of the Sarnia track of the Great Western Railway. Mr.

Rankin represented that he desired that contract. I said I would introduce him to a practical contractor, who, I had no doubt, would co operate with him, and through whom I had no doubt such an amount could be secured to him. I think I said that the Company would do everything they could to make the arrangement as secure as possible for Mr. Rankin, and with the concurrence of the contractor alluded to, with whom he was to be connected, might stop from each payment a certain per centage. Mr. Rankin said that he did not wish any such arrangement, for that he desired to be a party to a contract in the ordinary way, having all the risks as well as all the profits of a contractor. The other contractor alluded to, was the only one who had been spoken to about the preference of the contract, and except with Mr. Rankin, such an agreement, his not been entertained with any person. The services of this other contractor were that he had arranged to get for the Great Western Railway the control of the Eastern charter, a thing necessary to be accomplished before we took the responsibility of acquiring the million of pounds stock created by the Amherstburg and St. Thomas. The agreement with this gentleman, with whom I supposed Mr. Rankin would be associated as a sub-contractor, will be the best means of explaining the agreement which I proposed in behalf of the Great Western Railway to have with Mr. Rankin. The agreement with the contractor, Mr. Van voorhis, is thus alluded to in my agreement made in England with Messrs Samuel Zimmerman and George Wythes, by which it was arranged that in consideration of my transferring to them all my interests in both the eastern and western links of this southern railway chain, I should get the monies laid out by me returned, during the progress of the construction of the road, and the agreements I had made with others were to be carried: "Whereas the said Isaac Buchanan agreed to give J. B. Vanvoorhis a preference to make 35 miles of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway, not including superstructures, provided no other person shall be willing to undertake the same upon lower terms." His agreement was that the said S. Zimmerman and Geo. Wythes shall give J. B. Vanvoorhis preference of a contract for the construction of 35 miles of the Woodstock and Lake Erie section of the amalgamated line, not including superstructure, provided the said S. Zimmerman and Geo. Wythes cannot enter into a more advantageous arrangement with other parties.—There was no idea of giving Mr. Rankin a greater price than any other respectable contractor. The contract proposed was in fact a thing whose only value consisted in the contractor being in the hands of friends bound in honour to give him a contract at fair prices; and although other parties knowing of this arrangement might try to get an advantage over him, by tendering under the usual rates. Except what is included in the foregoing, I am not aware that anything passed between Mr. Rankin and me which would give rise to the idea of my having desired to bribe him to support the interest of the Great Western Railway, except that admitting as I do and have ever done, that he, like others, had promoted the charter of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway, I intimated to him, as to others, my readiness to acknowledge his claims by allocating to him a fifth part of the premium which the Great Western shareholders were to pay or £50,000 cy. This sum, however, he spurned as altogether inadequate to his pretensions.

Q.—What stock have you in the Railway?

A.—I have paid for shares in the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway, £50-375; in the Woodstock and Lake Erie, £25,250. I am a bondholder of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway for money, a large part of which went to pay to the Government the interest due to the Consolidated Loan Fund on £145,000 cy. borrowed by the municipalities and invested in the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway to the amount of £19,326. I have made advances to the two companies, on the faith of the amalgamation, of about £3,000. It all amounts to £96,951. I have besides the foregoing a responsibility to pay up the balance of shares subscribed in the Amherstburg and Saint Thomas for £500,000 (£450,000) and a responsibility to pay up shares in the Woodstock and Lake Erie Road £2,250 (£2,000) The entire responsibility is £548,951.—From my previous evidence it must be evident that I entered into this responsibility expecting to be immediately relieved of it by the Great Western Railway.

Q.—Is this line under contract?

A.—The line from the Detroit River on the West to St. Thomas, is under contract, being 135 miles. The line from Simcoe to the Suspension Bridge, is also under contract, being about 70 miles. and the only part of the through line which is not under contract is the line between St. Thomas and Simcoe, being about 40 miles. There is also under contract, the cross road from Woodstock to Port Dover, about 40 miles. Upon all these contracts there has been paid to the contractors £150,000 viz: £100,000 to the Eastern end of the line; £50,000 on the Western end.

Q.—Has the Hon. J. C. Morrison interfered in these matters, and what was the amount of his interference?

A.—On the 7th of August last, the day of the election of Directors of the Amherstburgh and St. Thomas Railway, the Hon. Mr. Morrison appeared with his friend Mr. Zimmerman. Mr. Morrison was also an old friend of mine, and he explained to me that he felt it his duty to disregard all other considerations, and to interest himself in the transactions then going forward on account of his being the representative of Niagara, which is so vitally interested in the Southern line, being no longer delayed. It is to Mr. Morrison's active generosity being willing, for the same purpose, to become president of the Southern line about to be amalgamated under one Company, that we were indebted for the amalgamation being on the eve of consummation, when Mr. Rankin's present movements alarmed the capitalists: then we expected to induce them to subscribe £300,000, and to pay 30,000 before the 19th of this month, so directed by act of Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway. I map mention that Mr. Morrison has been most anxious to see all Mr. Zimmerman's agreements fulfilled, and in connection with his trustees, was willing on behalf of Mr. Zimmerman's estate, to claim nothing in the way of prospective profit. They were willing, if Mr. Zimmerman's agreements were fulfilled, to be satisfied to give up all interest in the line upon the following conditions: the repayment of Mr. Zimmerman's advances, the completion of the line to the Suspension Bridge, and the manufacturing of the rolling stock of the Niagara works at the usual prices. I understand, therefore, that Mr. Rankin's application for the fulfillment of Mr. Zimmerman's agreement with him, was viewed favourably, and was not settled in consequence of some additional claim made by him arising out of a sub contract, which he had promised to other parties Mr. Morrison all along expressed himself most anxious to have Mr. Rankin satisfied, simply in deference to Zimmerman having made an agreement, although no man could have expressed more surprise than Mr. Morrison on learning after Mr. Zimmerman's death that such an agreement existed.

Q.—What is the cause of the works of the line not being proceeded with, prior to Mr. Zimmerman's death.

A.—The causes were the impediments thrown in his way to amalgamation. Had the impediments not existed, we could have got the money to build the road in January last, in England. Subsequent to that period the money market in England has been in a declining state, and the money could not have been got. There is nothing to prevent the works being proceeded with and immediately completed the first moment there is an improvement in the money market in England, if the roads are amalgamated, and no competing charter granted. I have before mentioned the answer to this question, namely that the impediments to amalgamation, or in other words, the progress of the works, have been the existence of the chancery suit, and the pretensions to the presidency of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Company of Mr. Rankin.

Q.—Since Mr. Zimmerman's death were negotiations renewed for the purpose of an amalgamation, and settling the differences of the Roads?

A.—Yes, they were renewed and were successful, and the three Boards have actually passed the amalgamation agreement, a copy of which I have before the committee.

Q.—What was the cause of the amalgamation not being completed?

A.—The cause is the reluctance formerly alluded to, of the capitalists who were expected to subscribe £300,000 in the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway, and pay 30,000.—This reluctance has been caused by the introduction at a new charter by Mr. Rankin. In present circumstances the holders of the £78,000 stock subscribed in the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway, on which £27,000 has been paid, feel that it would be imprudent to consumate the amalgamation until they see Mr. Rankin's bill thrown out as, if it passed, they would find themselves not only deprived of the power of proceeding with the construction of the amalgamated railways, but they would also find that the amalgamation had effected nothing except amalgamating their large subscriptions and deposits, now lying in the bank, with the large debts of the Woodstock and Lake Erie railway. It is the opinion of the shareholders of the companies to be amalgamated—that if the through charter were passed, no southern road could be built.

Q.—Have the three Boards of Directors and the two lines of Railway passed resolutions to perfect the amalgamation in accordance with the intention of their charters and the act of the last session?

A.—The three Boards have passed resolutions and perfected the agreement under the provisions of the act of last session, and the assent of the municipalities has been obtained by the passage of the necessary bye law in each municipality.

Q.—Are you acquainted with the localities of the present line of road between the Detroit and Niagara River, and also with that proposed by the bill?

A.—Since 1830 I have known them intimately.

Q.—What is the difference of length?

There is no difference except between St. Thomas and Simcoe, which is stated at from three to four miles. There are deep ravines on the straight line, and it is impossible to build a road on a straight line. The difference between a straight line and a line by Otterville may be seven miles, but the difference between any practicable line and the route by Otterville will not exceed four miles.

Q.—How much of the Woodstock and Erie Road could be used in the through line proposed by the amalgamated charter?

A.—About seventeen miles, two thirds of which is already graded.

The Committee then adjourned.

Dinner to Albert Prince, Esq.

A public entertainment was given to Mr. Albert Prince, in this town, on Saturday last, by a large number of his Sandwich, Windsor, and Amhersburg friends, who were desirous of evincing towards him some mark of esteem and respect, prior to his departure for his new home—Chatham: and Well worthy indeed, is Mr. Prince of the compliment thus paid him, and we should have been much disappoin ted had not some such demonstration been made. He has ever been foremost in the van in endeavoring to promote, by every means that lay in his power, the interests of this county, and especially this portion of it, and has, by his integrity, talents and zeal in this respect won for himself golden opinions "from all sorts of people." Indeed, he has become here what, in theatrical perlance, would be called an "immense favourite," so that we were not at all surprised to see so large a number (considering the very inclement state of the weather, and which prevented a great many from attending who otherwise would have been present) of his friends and foes (in using the term foes, of course we mean political ones—he has no other) avail themselves of the opportunity which presented itself of giving honour to one to whom honour was justly due.

In losing Mr. Prince we lose a kind friend, an able Lawyer, and an upright, honorable and high minded man, and one whose departure from here will be much regretted by all classes of the community. We cannot, however, bring ourselves to look upon Mr. Prince's absence from here as anything more than a temporary one, nor help laying the "flattering unction to our soul," that we shall have the pleasure ere many months have rolled by, of greeting our young friend's return amongst us with a "eade mille faltha falthe."

Dinner was served up at half-past Seven, P. M., by mine host of Jessop's Hotel, and was all that the most fastidious could desire and was done ample justice to by as convivial a party as ever sat down to discuss the merits of Roast Beef and Plum Pudding, or crack a bottle of the "Mountain Dew." Joseph Mercer, Esq., presided as president, and William Johnson as Vice. When we say the chair was filled by Mr. Mercer, it would be superfluous to add one word more for any person at all acquainted with our friend "Joe," must know that things were kept moving.

GREEN'S
GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,
Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public that all their money goes to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe line, very cheap.

N. B. — Gentlemen's wear of all kinds made to order on the shortest notice.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS
CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system,

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and embodied muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No matter who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dysepsia,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhœa,	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds.

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States, and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1843

☞CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Saturday, the

6th day of May next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain mortgages executed to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows:

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

The Difference.

[The reader will find, in the annexed lines, a sarcasm on the injustice of the world, replete with everything that can give pungency to satire and criticism. It cannot be denied that the injustice, to which these stanzas refer, is realized every day, and every hour, by woman.]

MAN.

If he wears a good coat,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though he be but a boor,
Lift him up.
If he has not common sense,
And can boast a few pence,
Lift him up.

If his face shows no shame,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though crime is his name,
Lift him up;
Though their disgrace be his sport,
Let your daughters him court—
Lift him up.

Though he brings some disgrace,
Lift him up, lift him up;
And brings the blush to your face,
Lift him up;
Society him needs—
Never mind his black deeds—
Lift him up.

WOMAN.

If woman once errs,
Kick her down, kick her down;
If misfortune is here,
Kick her down;
Though her tears fall like rain,
And she never smiles again,
Kick her down.

If a man break her heart,
Kick her down, kick her down;
Redouble the smart—
Kick her down;
And if low in condition,
Oh, on to perdition,
Kick her down.

RESIGNATION.—Some years since Mr——, of Roxbury, Mass., a very covetous man, lost his only son James; an event which overwhelmed him with sorrow. The minister came to comfort him, and in course of conversation remarked, that such chastisements of Providence were mercies in disguise; that although in the death of his son he had suffered a severe and irreparable misfortune, yet undoubtedly his own reflections had suggested some source of consolation. "Yes," exclaimed the weeping but still provident father, "Jim was a monstrous eater!"

Old Dr. Strong, of Hartford, whose name is still a praise in the churches, had an unfortunate habit of saying amusing things when he meant it not so. As when he was president in a meeting of his ministers, and wishing to call on one of them to come forward and offer prayer, he said,

"Brother Colton,
Of Bolton,
Will you step this way,
And pray?"

To which Mr. Colton immediately answered, without intending to perpetrate anything of the same sort:

"My dear brother Strong,
You do very wrong,
To be making a rhyme
At such a solemn time."

A minister of the "Kirk" of Scotland, once discovered his wife asleep in the midst of his homily on the Sabbath. So, pausing in the steady, and possibly somewhat monotonous flow of his oratory, he broke forth with his personal address, sharp and clear, but very deliberate:

"Susan!"

Susan opened her eyes and ears in a twinkling, as did all other dreamers in the house, whether asleep or awake.

"Susan, I dinna marry ye for your wealth, sin' ye hae'd none! And I dinna marry ye for your beauty, that the hail congregation can see. And if ye have no grace, I have made but a sair bargain!"

Susan's slumbers were effectually broken up for that day.

A dabbler in literature and fine arts, who prided himself on his language, came upon a youngster a few days since sitting upon the bank of a creek angling for gudgeon, and thus addressed him:

"Adolence, art thou not endeavouring to entice the finny tribe, to engulph into their denticulated mouths a barbed hook upon whose point is affixed a dainty allurement?"

"No," said the boy, "I'm a fishing!"

A newly married couple, some years ago took up their abode in Poplar Street. At breakfast the next morning said the lady; 'My dear, this is the Poplar, and by putting in a (you) it becomes popular.' 'And by putting us in it,' promptly replied the lady, 'it will become populous.'

A lady upon taking up Shelly's novel 'The Last Man,' threw it down very suddenly exclaiming—The last man! bless me! if such a thing was ever to happen, what would become of the women!

A pedlar calling on an old lady to dispose of some goods, inquired of her if she could tell him of any road no pedlar had travelled. 'Yes,' said she, 'I know of one, and only one, which no pedlar has ever travelled, and that's the road to heaven.'

A NEW CREED.—'Are you a Catholic?' 'No I'm a Nova Scotian,' said the witness, quite simply. 'Well, that's a new creed,' quoth the lawyer; 'should not the witness be sworn on a blue nose potatoe!' The Court was in doubt, and left the question open.

The editress of the Ladies' Repository says: 'Kisses, like faces of philosophers vary. Some are as hot as coal fire, some sweet as honey, some as tasteless as long-drawn soda. Stolen kisses are said to have more nutmeg and cream than any other sort.'

A pretty pair of eyes are the best mirrors to shave by.—'Yes,' replied a bachelor, on reading the above, 'many a man has been shaved by them.'

In a French translation of Shakspere, the passage—'Frailty! thy name is woman'—is translated, 'Malemoiselle Frailty is the name of the lady?'

'I say,' said a dandy to an intelligent mechanic, 'I have got an idea in my head.' 'Well,' replied the other, 'if you dont cherish it with great care, it will die for the want of companions.'

Short women are generally sweet,—They are concentrated,—sort of boiled down.

Points in a good Horse.

In purchasing a good horse, sight, wind, feet, and limbs must be the uppermost objects of inquiry; for nine horses out of ten are defective in one of these particulars First, then examine his eyes, and do this before he leaves the stable; see that they are perfectly clear and transparent, and the pupils or apples of the eyes are exactly alike in size and colour. Next examine his pipes; if good and sound on being nipped in the gullet, he will utter a sound like that from a bellows; but if his lungs are touched, he is broken-winded, he will give vent to a dry, husky, short cough, look to his limbs also, and in passing your hand down his legs, if you find an unnatural protuberance, or puffiness, or if feeling first one leg and then the other, you discover any difference between them, disease more less, is present; he may not be lame, but he is not clean upon his legs. If he is broad and full between the eyes, he may be depended on as a horse of good sense, and capable of being trained to almost anything. If you want a gentle horse, get one with more or less white upon him; many suppose that the particolored horses, belonging to circusses, shows, &c., are selected for their oddity; but it is on account of their docility and gentleness; in fact the more kindly you treat horses, the better you will be treated by them in return.—Spirit of the Times.

CURE FOR THE AGUE.—Take thirty grains of snake root, forty of wormwood, half an ounce of the best Jesuits' Bark, put to half a pint of red port wine. Put the whole into a bottle, and shake it well together. It should be taken in four equal quantities, the first thing in the morning, and the last thing at night when the fit is quite over. The quantity should be made into equal parts for a child; and the bottle should always be well shaken before taking it. This medicine should be continued some time after the ague and fever have left.

LAXATIVE SYRUP.—Take one ounce of Senna leaves and having carefully picked out every bit of stalk, pour over them one pint of boiling water; let this boil till one-half remains, then pour the whole into a china basin, covering it up, set it aside for twenty-four hours; strain it off through a linen rag, and adding four ounces of treacle, put it over a fire till it becomes so much heated as to be thoroughly mixed together. When cold, cork it up for use, and keep it in a cool place. This syrup is chiefly intended for children: the dose may be from a tea spoonful to a table spoonful, according to the age and strength of the child; if not active enough, powdered jalap may be added.

LINIMENT FOR A BURN OR SCALD.—Let the clothes be taken off with great care and tenderness; then lay on a thick plaster of fresh yeast, renewing it as often as it becomes hot or dry; or dash the part with cold water in which some yeast has been stirred, or with vinegar, or with strong brine, or with the liquid which runs from potatoes sliced thin and sprinkled with salt; or cut a large cucumber in slices and lay it on the part. A medical gentleman has lately published the following recipe, which he recommends as the very best application for a burn or scald. Half a pint of clear lime water, quarter of a pint of olive oil, and a table spoonful of spirits of turpentine, to be beaten up into a thin ointment which is to be applied frequently upon fine rags or lint so as to keep them always moist.

SORE THROAT.—Sweet oil and honey, a teaspoonful each, boiled on a sheet of glazed letter paper, over a lamp, about three minutes; give a few drops of it well mixed and as soon as the patient can take it—a great relief for the extreme soreness of the mouth and throat, in scarlet fever. The above is not recommended as a cure for this disease, but in some cases where the throat and lungs were unable any longer to perform their wonted functions, it afforded timely relief and probably saved the patient's life.

TO RAISE BREAD.—Try the following Receipe:—'All persons where snow abounds are not, perhaps aware of the value of the fleecy cakes in making light, delicious, and wholesome bread. There is no 'raising' in the world so perfectly physiological as good, fresh sweet snow; it raises bread or cakes as beautiful as the best yeast, or the purest acids and alkalies, while it leaves no taint or fermentation like the former, nor injurious neutral salt like the latter. Indeed it raises by supplying atmospheres wherewith to puff up the dough, while the other methods only supply carbonic acid gas.'

Fretting Horses.

If horses will not eat their oats, mix it with chaff and beans; a sprinkling of salt is a good thing, and so are cut carrots. In Austria they give their horses small doses of arsenic, but I should not like to try it. I once had a mare so thin as to be a disgrace to my stable, yet so fast and high courageed, and with such sporting points about her, that I could not make up my mind to get rid of her. Yet she was the plague of my riding-life, a perfect Rosinante. I tried everything I could think of, but what with rejecting her food and fretting over her work, she was nothing but a bag of bones. At last, chance brought me acquainted with a noted character, now no more, 'Dick Watherall, the trainer. 'My Lord,' said Dick, who always used this form of address as a matter of fine diplomacy: 'I'tell you what you go and do with her. Take a lot of barley, a good lot on't. Pour boiling water on't, jist enough to cover it. Then put it, or features afore you puts the boiling water put the barley in, a glazed pan as nothing of the steam can get through, and there let it soak. Next morning go and put some molasses in along with it and stir it all up. Don't trust your groom to do this if he aint one of the right sort, you half eat the molasses if you do, or perhaps take 'em one to his missus. When you've made this mixture up (it's like a stiff fish pudding it is, when it's made right, or a jelly as you may say,) give her a lot on't, mixed in with her corn, and it she don't slobber that into her, and get fat on it, I'll never open trust me again. Let her have four feeds of it a day.' Such was the summary of Mr. Wetherall's wisdom, and the best advice I can give the reader is, in the words of the Duke of Wellington to Sir Charles Napier, 'if you understand these instructions, and execute them.'—Dick ea's Household Words.

Influence of Comets on the Weather.

Innumerable surmises and speculations have been made as to the cause of such unusual weather. Some attribute it to the approach of comets. Upon this subject a writer in the St. Louis Republican remarks:

"It is singular that the unprecedented cold weather which has prevailed over the whole country during the present month of April, should not have attracted the attention of the press and the public to the probable cause. This is undoubtedly the presence and rapid approach of the comet in question in the evening sky, whose elements have been very minutely calculated by the most celebrated astronomers of Europe, and which it is predicted by certain highly respectable mathematicians of Germany, will come in direct collision with the earth on the 16th of June proximo. This opinion has been made light of by Pierce and other American astronomers, but whether probable or not, there is no questioning the fact, that the comet has entered the limits of the solar system, and is now approaching the earth with fearful rapidity, as may be seen by the most casual observer, by noticing its daily increase in size.

"There can be little doubt that the extraordinary phenomena witnessed in the weather during the month is attributable to this cause. Similar changes of the climate have been observed before, during the passage of comets near the earth. The comet of 1556 is said to have brought with it a dense and unpleasant fog, which lasted 21 days; that of 1826 was accompanied by heavy rains and consequent inundations; and every one must remember the unusually cold and severe weather prevalent at the time of the appearance of the brilliant comet of the year 1843. The comet now approaching the earth is that of Charles the V., which first appeared in pehelion, in 1264. It may be near B. Sagittari, and is evidently nearing the earth with great rapidity."

The same writer partly coincides with the very generous opinion that the comet referred to, in passing across our orbit, may come in contact with our earth. Enough has been demonstrated by astronomers to show the entire fallacy of such an idea. Whatever meteorological or atmospheric effect a comet may have—and it is doubtful if any—becomes another question.

A communication from Professor Maury to the National Intelligencer, announces the discovery and approach of another comet, making two now visible by means of the telescope.

Revenge is longer lived than gratitude. Endorse Mr. Smith's note to keep him from bursting, and he will forget all about it in a month. Pull Mr. Smith's nose, and he will cherish a secret desire to burn your house down for the remainder of his life.

Some descendant of Solomon has wisely remarked that those who go to law for damages are sure to get them.

Why should potatoes grow better than any other vegetable? Because they have got eyes to see what they are doing.

For Sale!!!

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION AND DESIRABLE RESIDENCE, IN THE BEAUTIFUL TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be completed and in operation, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Factory Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

All applications to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all NEW, of the largest class, being about 1,000 thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience and comfort of passengers, with all comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties in connection New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SEYMOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

Select Poetry.

Bury me in the Morning.

Bury me in the morning, mother;
Oh! let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere you leave alone with night;
Alone in the night of the grave, mother—
'Tis a thought of terrible fear!—
And you will be here alone, mother,
And stars will be shining here.
So bury me in the morn, mother,
And let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere I'm alone with night.

You tell me of the Savour's love, mother—
I feel it in my heart;
But, oh! from this beautiful world, mother,
'Tis hard for the young to part!
Forever to part, when here, mother,
The soul is faint to stay,
For the grave is deep and dark, mother,
And Heaven seems far away.
Then bury me in the morn, mother,
And let me have the light
Of one bright day on my grave, mother,
Ere I'm alone with night.

Never unclasp my hand, mother,
Till it falls away from thine—
Let me hold the pledge of thy love, mother,
Till I feel the love divine.
The love divine—oh! look, mother—
Above its beams I see:
And there an angel's face, mother,
Is smiling down on me!
So bury me in the morn, mother,
When sunbeams flood the sky—
For Death is the gate of Life, mother,
And leads to light on high.

The Forger and his Wife.

BY A RETIRED ATTORNEY.

'Are you alone, Mr. Docket?

The question was proposed by one, who, thought only twenty three, had seen a great deal of trouble. As he entered my office, I saw that his pale cheek was paler than usual, that his hollow eyes were more hollow than ever before. He was the son of an opulent merchant, doing business on the wharf.

It has been said that "money is the root of all evil," I feel disposed to change the maxim so that it shall read—"Pride is the root of all evil; and if I had space, I think [illegible] and jury that the charges would be a judicious one.

Certainly it was the root of a prodigious evil even in the story I am about to tell. Henry Daylton, the pale young man whom I have introduced, was the son of Amos Dayton.—He had graduated at Cambridge at twenty-one, without much distinction, it is true; but he was intended for a mercantile profession where shrewness and industry would be more available capital than the treasures of science and philosophy. He was a good fellow, with a warm and true heart. He had no vices; consequently he was not popular with the young bloods about town. He had not much force of character, as the world understands this term, though he was firm in his adherence to principle, and punctuously careful in the discharge of his duties to himself and his fellow man, at least this was his character when his father received him into his counting room; and when he fell from it, it was more because he did desire still to be true.

Eighteen months before he entered my office on this occasion, he had married a fair young maiden, penniless and without a name in this world of vanity and vain show. Report said she was the daughter of an Irish laborer, who had aspired above her condition. Whether this is true or not I cannot say.—But I can say that she was a beautiful woman, that she was as pure and gentle at heart as she was lovely in person. I knew her well, and I have no hesitation in saying that she would have been an ornament, even to the princely drawing-room of Amos Dayton, the proud and aristocratic Merchant Prince.

This marriage, unequal when measured by the silly standard of worldly distinctions, but equal and true in the presence of the angels, and of Him who sitteth on the Throne, engendered a feeling in the bosom of the proud father which I can call by no softer name than hate. He drove him from his counting house, and even then prevented him from procuring an excellent situation, which was opened to him.

Henry after many struggles, obtained the place of book-keeper in a small concern which paid him only three hundred a year. It was a meagre pittance for one who had been brought up in the lap of luxury; but he made the best of the circumstances, struggling like a brave man with trials that environed him. But the day of darkness came, and the light that was within him proved insufficient to the occasion.

'I am alone,' I replied, as Henry stepped timidly into the room. 'What is the matter?'

'God be with me!' ejaculated he, throwing himself in the chair. 'May I look the door?' he asked a moment after, as he rose.

'Why look the door?'

'You shall know; and he turned the key. I am pursued. The officers are after me.'

'The officers!'

'Oh God,' he exclaimed, dropping into the chair again. I have been tempted and I have fallen!'

'I am sorry to hear that.'

My heart bled for him, for I knew his case as no one else knew it, and even at that moment his father's will, disinheriting him was in my drawer. I was his father's attorney, and more than a year before I had been called upon to draw up this repulsive instrument. On various pretences I had prevented him from signing it. Now I suggested a legal doubt as to one request, and the practical difficulty of carrying out another—anything to afford the young man time to reconcile his parent. I say I felt for him, for the case was not strange to me; and I felt for him the more, now that poverty had driven him from the high estate of moral manhood.

In a word, he confessed that he had forged a check with his father's name for the paltry sum of one hundred dollars.

'What could have induced you to do such a thing?' I said, mildly reproaching him.—'Why didn't you come to me? I would have lent you more than that!

'God bless you! My wife was sick. We were actually in want of some of the comforts of life. I tried to borrow, but could not. But to see my poor Catharine suffer, and at such a time, oh, it was so horrible! Time pressed me; my child was born last night; and in the phrenzy of desperation I did the deed.—May God forgive me.'

'God will forgive you, Henry, but your father will not.'

'I know it. He pursues me even now. I was discovered to-day, and only escaped the officers by jumping out of the back window. You can save me, not for my own sake, but for the sake of my poor wife and child.'

He gasped for breath. I never saw a more terrible picture of distress than this young man, in the bloom of manhood, bowed down by guilt and sorrow.

'What can I do for you?'

I had scarcely spoken the words before a violent hand was laid upon the door handle.

'They have found me!' almost shrieked the culprit. 'Save me, Mr. Docket, save me!'

There was a violent knocking at the door and, as my name was called, I recognized the voice of Henry's father.

'Do not fear, Henry. Step into this closet; and I thrust him into the place where I kept my coal and lumber.

I admitted Mr. Dayton.

'That will sir?' said he, imperatively—'It must be signed at once.'

'You are excited, sir,' I mildly remarked as I took the will from the drawer.

'Excited!' and he added an oath, which I will not write. 'The villain!—The scoundrel!' and he paced the room like a mad man.

'Be calm sir!'

'Calm! Can I be calm when my son—I disown him—renounce him—[illegible] and was passed, unable in his rage to articulate the foul words.

'Pray be seated, sir. Try to calm yourself; you will injure yourself by this violence.'

'He has forged my name! Stolen my money, to waste upon the harlot who has dishonored him! The vil—!'

They were the last words Amos Dayton ever spoke. He went into the presence of his God, with maledictions upon his son on his lips.

He had burst a blood vessel. I immediately procured assistance. Two physicians were called, but the proud merchant was strangled by the gushing life blood before they reached him.

I called Henry from his hiding place.—As may be supposed he was paralyzed by the appalling suddenness of the visitation. He gazed upon the dying form of his unnatural father, and the tears burst from his eyes. I hurried him away, and after the body of the merchant had been conveyed to his late residence, I succeeded in suspending legal proceedings against his son.

It was a judgment upon that proud man. His anger and hate had been the instruments of retribution in the hands of Omnipotence. He was borne to his grave, the newspapers gave him pretty puffs, and he was passed by to be forgotten; for he had no worthy deeds by which he was to live in the remembrance of future generations, or even the present.

Henry was the heir of one-third of his father's estate. The hand that would have disinherited him had been paralyzed by the destroyer, just as it would have done the unjust deed.

Shortly after, the young man, with his wife and child, departed for Western New York, where upon the banks of one of those beautiful lakes, he bought a farm. Thousands more guilty than he, have lived respectably to the age of three score and ten; but he was truly penitent, and on his beautiful place, with his loving wife, he lives happily, a little gray, but still young in his affections.

A Substitute For Silkworms.

Happily, there would seem to be little need of the eria, or Chinese silkworms, or of the cocoon of commerce, for the production of silk will ere long in all probability be derived not from the worm, but from the leaf on which it has hitherto existed. It is now not the breeding of the insect, but of the mulberry tree, that species which was its only food, and which from that circumstance gave the savant the cue that led to his making the intimated discovery. His name has not yet been announced, although we should imagine it was none other than Signor Lotteri who in the course of last year fully ascertained that a silky substance could be procured from the bark of the mulberry tree, and that by maceration good silk and paper also, could be easily prepared therefrom. The savant in question, ruminating, it is said, on the circumstance of the silk worm living on one description of food, came to the conclusion that "the silky substance must lie not in the animal, but the vegetable matter? which supported it. He therefore "analyzing the composition of the mulberry leaf, and by boiling it to a thick paste, produced every description of silk in immense quantities." Such a substance being obtained from that species of leaf, it is not at all unlikely that from the Chinese oak and the castor oil plant a somewhat similar result might be obtained. Be that as it may and the truth of the other being shortly corroborated, neither Morston Bay head sigh for the introduction of the Cotton plant, nor the northern and southern states of America shed their blood for the suppression or in the defence of slavery, nor England much longer play the hypocrite by condemning that accursed "institution" with one breath, and with another admitting the expediency, at all hazards, of strenuously upholding it. This is the land, every land, within the temperate zone is, more or less, favourable to the rearing of the vine, the mulberry, and the olive. Every one, therefore, the possessor or occupier of a small spot of ground therein, may rear the great substitute for cotton, and and in so doing, weaken more and more this lamentable and apparently indispensible adhesion to slavery. He may "put money in his purse; and, clothing family and himself both parties. The prevailing temper of the mind should be cheerful, but serious; but there are times when relaxation and laughter are proper for all. There is nothing better for this end, than that parents and older persons should join in the sport of childhood. Mature minds can always make such sport entertaining to children, and can exert a healthful moral influence over their minds; and at the same time, can gain exercise and amusement for themselves; How lamentable that so many fathers, who could be thus useful and happy with their children, throw away such opportunities, and wear out mind and body in the pursuit of gain or fame!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, in spite of the prejudices of medical martinets, have found their way into the leading hospitals and dispensaries of Europe, and are now the established family medicine of all classes in the United States. Upon the stomach and liver, which prepare and temper the blood, upon the organs which vitalize it in the process of respiration and upon the [illegible] which discharge from the system the residium not required for the purposes of nutrition, these pills operate in an almost miraculous manner, regulating, invigorating, cleansing, and fortifying the whole physique. In bilious disorders, dyspepsia, sickness, diarrhœa, dysentery, sick headach, constipation, general debility, and complaints peculiar to females, their effect is astonishing.

Great Southern Railway.

The disclosures which are being made from day to day, before the Railway Committee, are of a nature to create astonishment at their magnitude. One could hardly but believe, from the fair promises and solemn assurances of Mr. Rankin, that the benefit of the country alone was his great aim, and that personal considerations had no weight with him whatever. Now any person who will take the trouble to read the evidence, taken before the Committee, will find that personal considerations were the main object which influenced all his actions. It was not in a few thousands that he chose to deal, but it was in hundreds of thousands.—A handsome little sum, indeed, would be the hundred thousand dollars that the Member for Essex would have received, had the plans of Mr. Zimmerman been carried out. And then, again, the other two hundred thousand dollars which he hoped to make out of Mr. Buchanan, would have, as Jonathan says, rather set him up a little. He was not alone in the great scheme of peculation that has been carried on to such an enormous extent; and we find that, instead of the different directors striving to press on the works, they were delaying them, for the purpose of their own aggrandisement.

We hope and trust that if a charter should be granted for a through line, that those who were most prominent in the old Direction for dishonesty, will be excluded from the new Board of Provisional Directors.

PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE RAILWAY COMMITTEE.

Q.—It is true, as alleged in the petition of Mr. Keating and others, that there was no prospect of a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties alluded to therein at the time of presenting that petition.

A.—Subsequent to Mr. Zimmerman's death there has been the same progress which would have been had he lived, and probably more. This fact was notorious, having been published in every newspaper in the country, in consequence of a malicious cry having been got up that in the progress of transactions subsequent to Mr. Zimmerman's death, his interest or estate had not been so well protected as if he had been alive. To show therefore that in giving out the contract, I had attended scrupulously to the interests of Mr. Zimmerman's estate, I have produced and published the following evidence of transactions connected with the giving out of contracts. The first document is a letter written by me to the representatives of George Wythes and S. Zimmerman, who jointly had gone into an agreement which was produced by Mr. Morrison at the first sitting of the Committee, for a contract to build the whole line from Detroit to the Niagara River. This agreement was dated in England, at Liverpool on the 28th of September last. With a view to the actually giving out of the western part of this contract, I wrote to the representatives of these contractors about a week after Mr. Zimmerman's death as follows:—

HAMILTON, 21st March, 1857.

To J. C. Street, Esq., representing (George Wythes, Esq., and Walter O'Reilly, Esq., for himself, and representing the late S. Zimmerman, Esq.)—

GENTLEMEN,—Mr. McLeod is here, and has repeated the former assertion of the Amherstburgh Board of the Amherstburgh and St. Thomas Railway, that they are led to prevent me from carrying out my brother's agreement with Messrs Wythes and Zimmerman, only by the indications given by Mr. Zimmerman of his not being prepared to abide by the charters as to the western terminus. He offers on behalf of that board to re-enact the Bylaw, to secure my brother in the Railway, and with my consent to give a contract securing the road to go to Amherstburgh, this seeming to be the best, if not the only way to satisfy all parties. In present circumstances, you see the proper party to assume the contract, afterwards to be transferred to, or held for parties who are to carry out the agreement aforesaid, to secure my outlay and responsibility for the Railway. By now taking this contract, you have it in your power to receive from them the assurance of this which my brother undertook to put in their hands. I therefore call upon you to take the contract, and if you do not do so, with you must remain the responsibility of refusing this practical fulfilment on my brother's part of the agreement aforesaid.

I am,

Yours respectfully,

(Signed,) ISAAC BUCHANAN.

To this letter I received the following reply:—

HAMILTON, 27th March, 1857.

To ISAAC BUCHANAN, Esq.,

Dear Sir.—We have to acknowledge your letter of 21st inst., and to express ourselves prepared to take a contract from the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, for the purposes therein mentioned, having special reference to the fulfilment of your brother's agreement of 25th September last, with Messrs Geo. Wythes and Samuel Zimmerman. We therefore now give you this letter to show the understanding on which we shall act, that the Board of Directors of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, giving us the contract about to given out.

We are, dear sir, respectfully

M. O'REILLY,
JAMES C. STREET.

Accompanying the foregoing letters, I had also published for the satisfaction of Parliament and the public before this Bill was introduced by Mr. Rankin, a copy of the proceedings of the Board, giving out the contract as follows:—

Resolution of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Directors at a meeting held at Amherstburg on the 28th March last: It was moved by J. W. Ridsdale, seconded by Theodore J. Park, and carried unanimously.

That the company do now enter into a contract for the construction of the Road with Messrs J. C. Street and M. O'Reilly, the former representing Geo. Wythes, Esq. and the latter representing himself and the Trustees of the late Samuel Zimmerman, said contract being for the sum of £1,125,000, and that the President be authorized to sign the same and attach to it the seal of the Company.

I may mention that a similar contract was being prepared in Hamilton for the Eastern half of the line, to be given out by the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Company, when I received the telegraph from Mr. Morrison mentioning that adverse proceedings to our charters were likely to be commenced in Parliament. These proceedings as embodying the present Bill before the Committee, have also been the cause, as before explained, of the amalgamation not being completed and the work not being done.

Q.—Did you bring a party to the suit in Chancery between the rival Board of Directors?

A.—No.

Q.—Do you know, whether or not the suit referred to has been settled or compromised, and if so how it was settled?

A.—I knew that the Board of the Saint Thomas and Amherstburg Railway at its meeting on the day when the amalgamation agreement was consented to between the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway, as reported, both by Mr. Rankin's and Mr. McLeod's Boards with the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway, the proceedings at were based on the understanding that that chancery suit was withdrawn; but otherwise I had no means, being no party to the suit, to know whether or not instructions had been given to the Solicitors on both sides to that effect.

Q.—Do you know the petitioners for the Bill in question, or any, or which of them.

A.—I know J. W. Keating, but not the others.

Q.—Are they in a position to comply with the requirements of the proposed Bill?

A.—Certainly not, as far as I know.

Q.—Do you know any other matter or thing which is material to the question under consideration?

A.—In thinking over the questions which I answered on Saturday, I feel anxious to explain, though the share of £5,000 of the 2½ per cent premium on the capital stock which was proposed to be divided among the original promoters of the Railway was to my brother and I, never offered to Mr. Rankin, that I consented on behalf of the Great Western Railway, that we should reopen an arbitration so desired by him in the former decision of which he thought great injustice had been done him. And I thought some little injustice had certainly been done. I should also wish to explain what made those acting for the Great Western Railway so anxious not to leave Mr. Rankin in the position of an injured man, even according to his own ideas of right and wrong. The Great Western Railway had suffered severely in the matter of the Bill for their right of way, through the interference of parties pretending to be aggrieved, and Mr. Rankin as a member for the county, had much in his power in this way. He had also actually threatened that he would use his influence in this way at the outset of the line, and would make any Company who would not connect themselves with him pay a hundred thousand pounds, more for right of way than they would otherwise do. This threat was made to my agent Mr. Greer.—A similar threat, repeated to have been made to Mr. Zimmerman, we believed to have been the cause of that gentleman's anxiety to have Mr. Rankin's co-operation, as we did not at that time know of the existence of the agreement to give Mr. Rankin a share of the contract or £25,000. I am also anxious to state that the interference of Mr. Ridsdale, the Vice President of the Great Western Railway, and myself, to get the Southern line as a second trace of the Great Western Railway, had two simple objects. We saw that the safety of the lives of the public, no less than the interests of the Great Western Railway, required that the Southern should not be a competing line. The Great Western Railway had cost double what it ought to have done, and even with the most brilliant traffic, could not be expected to yield the dividends which we know was to be insisted on by the shareholders in England, without a delay in going on with the bridges and permanent structures, which would cause great risk to the lives of the public.

To Mr. POWELL—That this mode of giving individual motive and opinion was not admissible, especially in connection with the interests of the Great Western Railway. Then as regards the interest of the Great Western Railway, that it could never compete in carrying cheaply. The Southern line, as a double track, with permanent bridges, could be built for less than the single track of the Great Western now costs by some thousand pounds. This was the cause of our anxiety to see the lines united; and we intended to satisfy the public that no monopoly would be caused by arrangement in the amalgamation agreement that any money earned over ten per cent, should first be laid out on permanent structures, in station buildings, and afterwards applied to the reduction of fares. We believed that the Southern line could carry passengers and freight direct from the Detroit to the Niagara Rivers for one half that the Great Western could carry. The expense of each train is, on the Great Western Railway, six shillings currency per mile, which is more than the average expense of lines in England. And as an engine on the light grades of the Southern line could draw double the weight that it could on the heavy grades of the Great Western line, the cost to the railway would not be more than one half, even if the Southern line had a double track carried more than double a single track were not considered. It is calculated that it carries four times as much.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

Q.—In what bank did the notices from the Provincial Directors of the Amherstburgh and St. Thomas Company require the deposit money on the stock to be paid and where the terms of such notices complied with by the board representing the Zimmermen interest?

A.—In the Bank of Upper Canada. Before the Amherstburgh Board there was no evidence, except Mr. Maebeth's; I believe that the Zimmerman money was deposited in the Zimmerman Bank.

Q.—Without reference to outlay connected with dishonoured paper or in the collateral securities—how much actual expenditure has been made by you on account of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway and Woodstock and Lake Erie Road, and if any, what cash have you outlaid on account of the expenses alluded to in the first part of this question?

A.—I have had nothing to do with dishonored paper, and have not paid anything as expenses thereon, nor am I bound to pay any expenses thereon, the actual cash outlaid by me was stated on Saturday in detail, exclusive of the sum of £30,000 which I have to be half for one company, and half for the other, and consists chiefly of cost of preliminary surveys, expenses in England, and other preliminary charges.

Q.—Has any part of the money placed by you to the credit of Upper Canada to enter credit of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway been chequed out, and by whom?

A.—The money placed by me in the Bank of Upper Canada to meet my subscription to the stock of the Amherstburg Railway, is in that bank at Amherstburg, a fortnight after Mr. Zimmerman's death, wrote to said agent that he would accept that contract.

Q.—In what capacity did Mr. Henry De Blaquiere stand to the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway, and did you consider you had power to give him £25,000 or any other sum for the purpose of buying up the control of the direction of said Board.

A.—In July last I did not know Mr. Henry De Blaquiere, even by sight, and I do not think he was a director of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway Company, which I afterwards found to be the case. I never had any communication with him about the 2½ per cent or £100,000 which on behalf of the Great Western Railway I had agreed to give to those holding the shares of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway, or the power to subscribe their shares to the shares to the extent of £1,000,000, I desired the control of the Railway for the bona fide purpose of enabling the Great Western Railway to subscribe the £1,000,000 of stock. The parties from whom I got the control offered to get the directors to allocate to any one for the Great Western Railway the whole stock of £1,000,000. This would have required me to pay an additional £100,000 as the first instalment, and therefore until we could hear from London I preferred paying the premium arranged for, or the £25,000 on the power to subscribe said million of pounds being transferred to me—by nearly the whole stock being offered to myself or those who I was making the transfer to me, and I was told to pay the whole amount of premium of £25,000 to him which I did. What division if any, he made among the other shareholders who made transfers to me, I am not aware?

Q.—Where are the vouchers for which the £150,000 spoken of by you was paid, by whom and when, and under what contract was it done?

A.—Nearly the whole was done by Mr. Zimmerman on contract with the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway. On the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway the ground has only been broken formally and a resolution passed by the directors at Amherstburg on 28th March, after the contract between Messrs. Street and Reilly was signed, authorizing Mr. Street at once to proceed to sound for his gravel pits, a knowledge of whose position is required by the engineers of the line. Mr. Street's progress was interrupted by Mr. Rankin, in bringing forward the bill now before the committee.

Q.—Did Mr. Ridsdale, or any person connected with you, draw upon the Great Western Company for money to be applied in this transaction? and if any how much and for what purpose, and was each paper honoured, and if not why not?

A.—Mr. Ridsdale the Vice President of the G. W. Company, stated that although the Great Western Company could not legally guarantee the bank's loan to me to be used for the purpose of the Great Western Railway in securing for the shareholders thereof the offer of the stock of the Southern line, he would take care to work the Railway account with the Bank of Upper Canada in such a way, by leaving a similar sum to the credit of the Railway in the bank, so that the bank should not have any reason to suppose I was going into the affairs of the Railway through advancing me £50,000. He promised to transfer from England to Canada, such an amount that the Railway's balance in the bank would be £50,000 more than it otherwise would have been, in case the bank was desirous of advance to me of that amount. Mr. Brydges, who was the only director dissenting from the policy of acquiring the South-rn line, wrote to England misrepresenting this transaction, and by this means bills for £40,000, which the Company drew at the time, were dishonoured in London, as supposed to be connected with this arrangement, and other bills also, to a greater amount than £50,000 cy. were also dishonoured upon a false suspicion of having been drawn for moneys to invest in the Southern line. We were left to adopt this plan from seeing in a successful operation some years ago, in a similar arrangement between the Government and the Great Western Railway.

Q.—Had the stock or any part of the stock, been subscribed to extend the Wood, stock and Lake Erie Co., as now existing been taken? If so, when were the books opened and the stock subscribed?

A.—The stock books for the stock to build the extensions of the Woodstock and Lake Erie road, were to be opened at a meeting of the Board, held on the 24th ultimo, and the Secretary has forwarded books to all the different towns specified in the Act. I have not, however, heard of any stock being taken as yet, in consequence of the Bill introduced by Mr. Rankin.

EVIDENCE OF MR. RANKIN.

WEDNESDAY, May 13, 1857.

The investigation of Railway Committee were continued to day. The testimony of Mr. Rankin, Esq., M.P.P., was first taken.

Q.—Did you in 1855 introduce a Bill similar to the one now introduced, for a through line from Niagara to the Detroit River? State what you know in relation thereto, and all matters connected with the present Bill, and the opposition thereto.

A.—In 1855 I introduced a Bill to incorporate a company, to be called the Amherstburg and St Thomas Railway Company, to con truct a road from Amherstburg on the Detroit River, to St. Thomas in the County of Elgin.

During the same session of Parliament a Bill was introduced and carried, authorizing the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Company, to make extensions from their main line, eastwardly to the Suspension Bridge, and westwardly to St. Thomas, with power to amalgamate with the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company; the same power of amalgamation having been given to the last named Company. One of the clauses of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, require that £500,000 of stock should be subscribed before any Stock Company could be properly organized in such a manner as to enable the said Board to carry out the provisions of the charter. One of the clauses of the Act authorizing the extension of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway Company, and one of the conditions required to be fulfilled before an amalgamation could take place between the two above named companies, was that the Woodstock and Lake Erie Company should open books for stock to be subscribed at the places mentioned in the Act of Incorporation, and that so soon (the previous conditions of the act having been complied with,) as £300,000 of stock had been subscribed in the books of the said Company, and ten per cent of the same, or £30,000 paid into such chartered bank as should be designated by the board, the Company should have the power to consummate the amalgamation with the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, and to commence the building of their extensions. The said amalgamation and extensions of the Woodstock and Lake Erie Company, received the Royal sanction on the 10th of May, 1855, and it required that those extensions should be commenced in two years from the passing of the Act. Soon after the passing of the Act, books for the subscription books of stock in the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company were opened in the manner required by Act of Parliament, at Amherstburg, Windsor Chatham and St. Thomas; and immediately I personally entered upon an active canvass of the counties of Essex and Kent, with a view to induce the ratepayers of those counties to sanction the taking of stock in behalf of the county municipalities. In pursuit of this object, I only addressed public meetings in most of the townships of the county of Essex, but I proceeded twice to various parts of the county of Kent, and addressed public meetings, urging upon the people there the same object. I once addressed the County Council of Kent, at a special session of that body, convened for the express purpose of hearing my views, and of urging upon them the propriety of subscribing for stock in the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company. I twice visited St. Thomas, in the county of Elgin, once of my own accord, the second time at the request of the Warden of St. Thomas, the reeve representing the East Riding of Elgin, and a number of other influential inhabitants of that county. On the occasion of my second visit to St. Thomas, I addressed the County Council of Elgin in Council assembled. The resolutions and conditions which by laws were submitted to the people in Essex, Kent and Elgin, proposing that each of those counties should take £50,000 of stock in the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railroad Company. These by-laws, after having been advertised in the manner required by law, were act ratified by the ratepayers of the respective counties. The W re en of the county of Essex subscribed his name in the Windsor stock-book for £50,000, taken by the municipality of the county of Essex. The Reeve of the town of Amherstburg having been duly empowered to take a vote of the ratepayers of that municipality, subscribed his name in the Amherstburg stock-book for £20,000, on behalf of the ratepayers of the above named town. I am not aware whether the Wardens of Kent or Elgin ever signed their names in either the St. Thomas or Chatham stock-book for the amount of stock which they had been authorized to take on behalf of their respective municipalities. In addition to the municipal stock thus taken and authorized to be taken, private subscri tions for stock were obtained in the Amherstburg stock book to an amount in all exceeding £6,000. In the Windsor stock-book private subscriptions were also obtained to the amount of several thousand pounds, I cannot charge my memory with the precise amount, not having seen the stock book since the month of August last. Notwithstanding the exertions made by myself and other parties in Kent and Elgin, we failed to obtain subscriptions for even half the amount required to be subscribed before the Company could commence operations under the authority of the charter. On the assembling of Parliament at Toronto, in February, 1856, finding that the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Company had not as yet made any exertion whatever towards obtaining subscriptions for stock in their books, which they had not even caused to be opened for subscription in the manner required by the Act authorizing them to make their extensions east and west, I introduced a bill to amend and extend the Charter of the Amhersburg and St Thomas Railway Company. The object of the said Bill was, first, to reduce the amount required to be subscribed by the Act incorporating the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, before a Board of Di rectors could be elected, from £500,000 to £250,000; and secondly, to authorize the Company to extend their line of railway from St. Thomas eastwardly to the Suspension Bridge regardless of the Woodstock and Lake Erie extensions having or not succeeded in obtaining the amendment, reducing the amount of stock required to be subscribed, but failed to obtain the right to extend the railway eastwardly from Saint Thom as. Up to the period of the passage of the Act to amend the original charter as described above, I had devoted my whole time to the advocacy of the enterprise, defraying all my own expenses and frequently the expenses of other parties who accompanied me. Indeed, I have made it my sole business, neglecting all my private affairs. When addressing public meetings on various occasions and at different places in the county of Essex, votes of thanks for my exertions were passed by the meetings. On all these occasions I made it a point to explain to my constituents that I was assisting myself or advance their interests, it was my intention to endeavour to obtain either the whole contract or an interest in the contract for building the railway. After the prorogation of Parliament in 1856, on the 3rd of July of that year, I entered into a written agreement with the late Samuel Zimmerman, after having been repeatedly and earnestly urged by him to do so—he having in fact first proposed to me to enter into some such arrangement at Quebec in 1855. My reason for declining to act with Mr. Zimmerman in the first instance was that I was apprehensive that he was desirous of obtaining the control of the Southern Line for the purpose of retarding the building of that line in consequence of some arrangement which I was led to believe existed between him and the Great Western Railway Company—he being then supposed, as reported that the Great Western Company had promised Mr. Zimmerman the contract for building their intended double track on condition that he would contrive to prevent the building of the Southern line by way of Company, and one of the conditions required to be fulfilled before an amalgamation could take place between the two above named companies, was that the Woodstock and Lake Erie Company should open books for stock to be subscribed at the places mentioned in the Act of Incorporation, and that so soon (the previous conditions of the act having been complied with,) as £300,000 of stock had been subscribed in the books of the said Company, and ten per cent of the same, or £30,000 paid into such chartered bank as should be designated by the board, the Company should have the power to consummate the amalgamation with the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, and to commence the building of their extensions. Indeed, I have made it my sole business, neglecting all my private affairs. When addressing public meetings on various occasions and at different places in the county of Essex, votes of thanks for my exertions were passed by the meetings. On all these occasions I made it a point to explain to my constituents that I was assisting myself or advance their interests, it was my intention to endeavour to obtain either the whole contract or an interest in the contract for building the railway. After the prorogation of Parliament in 1856, on the 3rd of July of that year, I entered into a written agreement with the late Samuel Zimmerman, after having been repeatedly and earnestly urged by him to do so—he having in fact first proposed to me to enter into some such arrangement at Quebec in 1855. My reason for declining to act with Mr. Zimmerman in the first instance was that I was apprehensive that he was desirous of obtaining the control of the Southern Line for the purpose of retarding the building of that line in consequence of some arrangement which I was led to believe existed between him and the Great Western Railway Company—he being then supposed, as reported that the Great Western Company had promised Mr. Zimmerman the contract for building their intended double track on condition that he would contrive to prevent the building of the Southern line by way of [illegible] and that he should so shape his course as to enable the Great Western Company to build the Southern Line at some future period, should they feel it to be for their interest to do so. After the Act to amend the original charter was passed my reasons were for declining to act with him, and these reasons were briefly these: I had pledged myself to my constituents to do all in my power to secure the building of an independent line of railway which should compete with the Great Western, and having made this pledge I felt that no inducement of a personal nature which could be held out to me would justify me in acting with any party till I was thoroughly convinced that by so doing I would place myself in a position which would enable me faithfully to redeem the pledge I had made. Notwithstanding Mr. Zimmerman's assurance, that I had been misinformed as to his intentions, and that it was his determination to endeavour to build the Southern Railway as a line competing with the Great Western Railway, I was unwilling to associate myself with him. But during the last session of Parliament, I think in the month of April, 1855, Mr. Hodge, an engineer professing to be in the confidence of Mr. Buchanan, by whom he has since been employed in his professional capacity in various ways, called upon me and suggested to me that if I would go to Hamilton and see Mr. Isaac Buchanan, I could enter into arrangements with that gentleman, by which I could effectually defeat the plans of Mr. Zimmerman with reference to the Southern Railway. In fact, Mr. Hodge distinctly intimated to me that it was the desire of Mr. Buchanan to obtain the control of the Southern line for the Great Western Railway Company; and that if I would act with Mr. Buchanan and assist him in carrying out his plans, I could more effectually serve my constituents and also by any other course I could possibly adopt. In reply to Mr. Hodge, when he first address ed me, I told him that if Mr. Buchanan desired to see me for any purpose, he would find me in Toronto, attending to my Parliamentary duties, and that in the course of a considerable space of time, Mr. Hodge called upon me again, and repeated the arguments which he had before advanced in favour of acting with Mr. Buchanan in his endeavour to obtain the control of the Southern line for the Great Western Railway Company, going more fully, on the present occasion, into an explanation of the advantages of a personal character which I could secure by acting upon his suggestions. The effect produced upon my mind by the arguments of Mr. Hodge was, that in acting with Mr. Zimmerman I should be more likely to attain the object I had in view, which was the building of a rival line to the Great Western than by any other course I could adopt. In fact, I become convinced that unless proper means were taken to defeat the plans of Mr. Buchanan, all hope of the building of a railway to compete with the Great Western would be destroyed. I therefore immediately determined to unite with Mr. Zimmerman in endeavouring to obtain the control of the Southern line, believing that by that means alone could I secure for the people inhabiting the region of the country bordering upon Lake Erie and lying between the Niagara and the Detroit Rivers, the completion of an enterprise so long and anxiously sought for, and of such vital importance to their interests. Acting upon this determination, I entered into a written agreement with Mr. Zimmerman, dated at the Clifton House, Niagara Falls on the third day of July, 1856, by which I agreed to unite with Mr. Zimmerman in endeavoring, first, to secure an amalgamation between the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company and the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Company; and, secondly, that, having accomplished that amalgamation, I should unite with Mr. Zimmerman in applying for the contract for building the railway from Amhersburg to St. Thomas, with the understanding that, if successful in obtaining the contract, I should be entitled to receive one fourth of the profits arising from it. It was, however, further agreed that Mr. Zimmerman should have the power; if he thought proper to avail himself of it, within twelve months from the date of the agreement, of purchasing my interest in the second contract for the sum of £25,000. I was at that time one of a sub committee of seven persons named in the Charter of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Company, whose duty it was to cause stock books to be opened in the manner and at the places designated in the Act; and upon the subscription of the amount of stock required by the Act to enable the shareholders to elect a board of Directors, to close those books and convene a meeting of the shareholders in the manner appointed by the Charter, for the purpose of enabling them to elect such Board of Directors, who should be clothed with all the power conferred upon them by the Act of incorporation. On the 5th of July, 1856, a meeting of the provisional committee was held at St. Thomas, at which five of the members of that committee were present.—Mr. Zimmerman appeared at that meeting and proposed to subscribe in his own name, and in the names of certain friends of his a sufficient amount of stock to form the Company in Amhersburg, and to fulfil the following conditions. First—That he should be permitted to deposit the amount of the first call upon the the stock, namely, ten per cent, in the Zimmerman Bank. Secondly—That after he had subscribed, the provisional committee should close the books and call a meeting of the shareholders at Amhersburg on the 7th of August following. After some deliberation among themselves, the members of the provisional committee present, unanimously agreed to comply with the conditions proposed by Mr. Zimmerman; whereupon he entered his name on the stock books, and produced Powers of Attorney from several other individuals authorizing him to subscribe their names for various amounts, which tog ther with the amount for which he had himself subscribed, made up the same amount by the amended Act for putting the said Act into effect. Immediately afterwards the provisional committee passed a resolution declaring the books to be closed, and calling a meeting of the shareholders at Amhersburgh on the 7th of August, 1856. Two members of the provisional committee, being a majority of them, met St. Thomas at the meeting. The Charter directly stated that the Acts of the provisional committee, or a majority of them, should be valid. The members of the provisional committee, who were present at St. Thomas had assembled at my request. I had not thought it necessary to request the attendance of the two members of the Provisional Committee residing at Amhersburgh: but on the third day after the meeting at St. Thomas, I went to Amhersburg for the express purpose of informing them of what had taken place at St. Thomas on the 5th of July. On arriving at Amhersburg, I called upon Mr. Kolfage, one of the Provisional Committee, and informed him of my having succeeded in getting a sufficient amount of stock taken up to enable the Company to commence operations. Mr. Kolfage was the person at whose store or hop the Amhersburg stock book had been left, by direction of the Provisional Committee, for subscriptions. On being informed by me of what had taken place at Saint Thomas, he expressed in strong terms the gratification he felt on hearing it, at length there was a prospect of the commencement of operations.

WEDNESDAY, May 14.

I continued to converse with Mr. Kolfage for a few moments, in the course of which conversation I learned from him that the only other member of the Provincial Committee who lived at Amhersburg, was then absent from town. On that occasion I omitted to ask Mr. Kolfage anything about the stock book which had been left in his possession. The last time I had seen that stock book, it contained the subscription of the Reeve of Amhersburg for £20,000 on behalf of the municipality, and some £2000 or thereabouts of private subscriptions. Mr. Kolfage did not intimate to me, or assign any reason whatever to suppose that any other subscriptions than those I have mentioned above, had been obtained since I had last seen the book. I therefore parted with him under the impression that he was rejoiced to hear the intelligence I had communicated to him. As nearly as I can recollect it was on the 14th of July, certainly it was before the 15th. Mr. Kolfage called upon me at my residence near Windsor, and asked me in what bank I would recommend him to put the deposit of ten per cent, upon the £500 of stock he had subscribed for in the Amhersburg stock book, he having been one of the first to subscribe. I replied that in my opinion it was not material where he made the deposit so long as he was paid into the chartered banks of the Province, but I added that I had paid my deposit upon the stock I had subscribed for, into the agency for the Bank of Upper Canada at Chatham. After some further conversation, in the course of which Mr. Kolfage made no allusion whatever to the Wallace subscription in the Amhersburg book, nor did he say anything to lead me to suppose that any subscriptions whatever had been made in that book since the time I had last seen it, when it contained only those to which I have referred. He took his departure saying that he would make his deposit also in the Bank of Upper Canada either at Windsor or Chatham. This conversation took place the day before the last day on which the law required parties having subscribed for stock to make their deposit in order that they might be entitled to vote at shareholders at the election of directors, to take place on the 7th of August following. A few days after the interview with Mr. Kolfage, a report reached me that some party or parties had subscribed for £500,000 of stock in the Amherstburg stock book. I naturally became alarmed at hearing this report, and immediately went to Amherstburg to see Mr. Kolfage, who, when I put the question to him as to whether there was any foundation for the report I had heard, answered in the affirmative. I then expressed my surprise at his not having communicated this intelligence to me before, to which he only answered that he had not thought it necessary to do so. I then requested him to allow me to look at the book in order that I might see in what name this large amount of stock had been taken. He at first declined to show me the book, but on my pressing him, he said he could not to do so, even if he were inclined, since he had some time before handed the book to Mr. T. Park, who still retains it in his own possession. Mr. Kolfage, however, consented to accompany me to Mr. Parks, for the purpose of desiring him to show the book. We accordingly went to Mr. Park's together, when Mr. Kolfage requested Mr. Park to show me the book, Mr. Park replied that he would have no particular objection to do so if it were in his power, but it was impossible, because his brother who was then absent in Buffalo or elsewhere had carried with him the key of a large iron safe in which the book had been placed. Mr. Kolfage was particularly anxious that the book should be shown to him, and expressed some annoyance at the evident evasion of Mr. Park, seeming to feel that the account of his brother having carried away the key of the safe, was a very improbable one. Mr. Park, however, told me that he expected his brother to return home on the following Wednesday, and that if his brother was willing to show me the book, he would send me word, in order that I might come down and see it. After the interview above referred to, I met Mr. Zimmerman by previous arrangement at London in order that he might take advice from counsel as to the best mode of proceeding in order to get possession of the book. The result was that Mr. Beecher, Barrister, advised me to replevy the stock book. Acting under this advice, on the following Wednesday, without waiting to be sent for, I went to Amherstburg accompanied by the Sheriff of Essex and Mr O'Connor, barrister of Windsor, with the intention of executing the writ of replevin, which was directed against Mr. Kolfage. I could not take it out of the possession of Mr. Park under that writ. Up to this time I had entertained doubts as to the truth of the story about the books being in Mr. Parks' possession, and it was in consequence of these doubts that I had taken the writ against Mr. Kolfage, but immediately on receiving information communicated to me after my arrival at Amherstburg, that the book really was in Mr. Parks' safe, I made no mention either to Mr. Kolfage or any of his friends, of my intention to replevy the book. I, however, went to Mr. Parks' on the street, and, in conversation, with him stated to him that, as his brother had not returned with the key, I hoped he would have no objection to show me the book. Mr. Park replied that when I last called upon him, he told me that after his brother's return he would send me word if he was willing to show me the book, and that as he had not sent me word I could not complain of his having put me to the trouble of coming down a second time. It is not necessary for me to repeat all that passed between Mr. Parks and myself. It is sufficient for me to say that he distinctly told me that I could not see the book.—On the third occasion of my visit to Amherstburg, I was accompanied by the Deputy Sheriff of Essex and a gunsmith from Sandwich, the gunsmith having, by my direction, furnished himself with a powder and fuze, in order that if Mr. Park still refused to open his safe and surrender the book I might take the most effectual means of getting it, by blowing the safe open with gunpowder. We had, however no difficulty in obtaining possession of the book on this occasion. Mr. Park bowed to the authority of the law, and, merely protesting against my conduct, quietly handed me the book. On obtaining possession of it, I at once became satisfied of the fraudulent nature of the subscription, that the party in whose name was the subscription, for £500,000 was a mere man of straw, whom I had good reason to believe was not worth £500 in the world. The individual I allude to was one William Wallace, a civil engineer, who, a few months before, had written to me, in closing letters of introduction from the late Judge Strachan and others and Mr. Alexander Douglass, of Fort Erie, applying for employment in his professional capacity, for which employment some £500 or £600 a year would have been liberal compensation. The manner in which the subscription was entered on the book afforded to my mind a clear evidence of fraudulent intention The Amherstburg stock book contained a heading, of which the following is a copy:—

"Province of Canada, Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, capital stock one million of pounds currency, or $4,000,000, in forty thousand shares of £25 or $100 each—subscription for £500,000

We the undersigned, respectively, hereby bind ourselves to, and promise and agree to, and with the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, to take the number of shares in the capital stock of the said Company set opposite our respective names, and to pay calls thereon, according to the regulations and by-laws of the said Company hereafter to be passed.

On the same day that I first went to Amherstburg with the intention of replevying the book with writ against Kolfage, Mr. Greer called at my house in the morning, and being told that I was not home, he went to Sandwich where, while waiting for the Sheriff to accompany me to Amherstburg, I met him (Mr. Greer) in the street. He told me that he had come from Hamilton on purpose to see me on railway matters. Mr. Greer then requested me to afford him a private interview, and in compliance with his wish I accompanied him to an adjoining hotel, where Mr. Greer communicated to me the fact that he had called upon me as an agent of Mr. Buchanan, who, as he alleged, was desirous of securing my co-operation in Mr. Buchanan's plans to get the contract for the southern line of railway. I cannot recall the exact words that passed between Mr. Greer and myself, but suffice it to say that from what he communicated to me I became satisfied that Mr. Buchanan was interested in what I afterwards discovered to be the Wallace subscription. To save Mr. Zimmerman from ruin it was absolutely necessary to establish the illegality of that subscription, Mr. Greer gave me to understand that Messrs. Park & McLeod of Amherstburg were acting in concert with Mr. Buchanan in his plans with reference to the Southern Railway, and that Mr. Buchanan was particularly anxious that I should join his party in order, as he alleged, to prevent disputes arising thereafter, which disputes might have a damaging effect upon the prospects of the enterprise. Feeling that I was bound at all hazards to save Mr. Zimmerman, and well knowing that if Mr. Buchanan had been confident of the legality of his position as a party interested or intending to become interested in a subscription sufficiently large to enable him to control the Company, there was no reason why he should concern himself about me. I at once looked upon his advances to me through his agent as strong evidence of the consciousness on his part of the unsoundness of his position, and feeling that it was of great importance that I should secure some unimpeachable proof of the fact that he felt that he stood on doubtful, if not positively dishonest ground, I at once resolved to adopt such a course with Mr. Greer as to lead him to suppose that for a consideration, I would consent to act with Mr. Buchanan. First, I told Mr. Greer that I was at liberty to take whatever course I thought proper. Mr Greer then entered into an explanation of the advantages of a personal nature which I would secure from complying with the wishes of his principal. I gave Mr. Greer to understand that I was desirous of putting myself in a position to make something out of the railway, and that the only honest means I knew of by which that could be done would be to get a contract, or an interest in a contract, for building the road. Mr. Greer left me under the impression that there would be no difficulty in arranging matters, and promise that on his return to Hamilton, after seeing Mr. Buchanan, he would write to me, which he accordingly did in the following words:—

"Hamilton, 28th July, 1856.

"My dear Sir,—I now have the pleasure of reading my promise by writing you. In my interview with you of Saturday last, of course I had no object or desire to influence you against your interest, but I considered that I was doing you a service in letting you know that you are upon what I considered and still see to be a losing ticket. My judgment in your circumstances would have decided that it was my interest to remain one of the 'old folks,' as Mr. Merritt styles those who have borne the heat and burden of the day in respect to the Southern road. They are all on one side, and you and your friends on the other. Now, I believed, in giving to you, and I still believe that there is no feeling to excuse you, or to deprive you of a share of any advantages which they might have to divide among themselves. I, of course, could not assure you or any other friends of a contract; but I repeat what I felt authorized to say to you, that, looking to a contract, you would be on the straight road to at least get a preference of the work on the same terms as strangers would offer to do it at; and this, in railroad matters, is generally a full rough calculation. I am quite aware that all this is indefinite, but I do not see how it can be otherwise in the meantime; but indefinite as it is, I think you will pardon me for expressing myself thus: I believe it to be more for your character as a politician and interest as an individual than any promises you can have from other parties, and, therefore, it is that I have out of friendship laid my views before you which are in no way changed from what I have seen and learned since I had the pleasure of seeing you at Sandwich. I shall be happy to hear from you, and I hope, announcing your intention of working harmoniously with those gentlemen with whom I am connected in the present undertaking.

I am, dear Sir,
Sincerely yours,
Your obedient Servant,
(Signed) JOHN H. GREER

After the receipt of this letter Mr. Greer again came from Hamilton to see me, and in a conversation at Windsor, he went more fully into an explanation of the inducements which he was authorized to offer me, in order to procure my co-operation with Mr. Buchanan. He dwelt largely upon the pecuniary advantages that I might expect to derive, and went more fully into pecuniary inducements, so expressing himself without stating it in so many distinct words, as to lead me to suppose that I might realize at least £30,000, and that I could obtain a check for £5,000 at once. The manner in which I was led to infer that the £30,000 might be obtained was from the fund of £150,000 which Mr. Buchanan was to contrive to establish by some means, and which fund would be divided among five persons, of whom I would be one. The language used by Mr. Greer on this occasion as well as on all the others was exceedingly vague, much in the style generally adopted by his principal, Mr Buchanan, that which might mean either a great deal or nothing as might best suit his purpose. On this occasion I told Mr. Greer that there was an unsettled dispute between the Great Western Railway Company and myself about the value of a certain piece of property of mine occupied by them, that an arbitration had taken place about the value of it some three years before, that the sum awarded was only £600 which had not been paid to me by the Company, within the time required by their Charter, and that subsequently I had declined to allow them to take it for the price awarded, and I was desirous of having a new arbitration, that if Mr. Buchanan would induce the Company to consent to a new arbitration it would remove the feeling of hostility on my mind which rendered one averse to acting with Mr. Buchanan. Mr. Greer again returned to Hamilton under the impression that I would be willing to act with Mr. Buchanan under certain conditions.

Editorial Correspondence.

Toronto, Tuesday, 10th May, 1857.

The incorporation of the Town of Sandwich was this morning brought before the Committee on Private Bills, for their report; and we, on behalf of the parties who petitioned for the incorporation, had an opportunity of witnessing the most scandalous tit or of petty spite and contemptible manoeuvreing that ever emanated from any person wishing to be regarded in the light of a Legislator, in the conduct of Mr. Rankin, the Representative of Essex. A most numerously and respectably signed petition had been got up, praying that the Legislature would incorporate Sandwich within certain limits, and the persons holding lands within those bounds were unanimous in their desire for the incorporation; but for all this, must Mr. Rankin go before the Committee, and make use of every quibble, in order that the object of the petition might be defeated; and having no argument whatever to adduce, was of necessity reduced to making statements which were unfounded in fact, utterly devoid of truth, and for instance, that the respectable individuals who signed the petition—referring more particularly to a number of the French Canadians who had done so, were ignorant, and unable to comprehend the meaning and purport of the petition to which they had attached their signatures, and it was therefore incumbent upon the Committee to prevent the incorporation, and regard the rights and interests of these poor and benighted persons, who were unable to take care of and manage their own affairs and required the interference of the Legislature on their behalf. A more barefaced and contemptible slander could not have been perpetrated against any set of men than this; for, to accuse the Canadians, who are most anxious to be included within the incorporation, and who well know the many advantages that would result to them in being so, is a libel foul and disgraceful in the extreme. What right has Mr. Rankin to dictate to these honest and respectable gentlemen the line of conduct they must pursue in regard to their interests? We have not the least hesitation in saying, that most of those very persons whom he accuses of ignorance, if placed with him in the scale, would prove that he was by far their inferior.

There was another assertion which was made by that truth loving gentleman, which demonstrates to a charm, the amount of reliance that can be placed in him. When he referred to the petition, he stated, that three-fourths of the signatures attached to it were those of negroes and possessed no property. This he must have known to be a downright misstatement, and is only on a par with every other objection made to our incorporation.

We could not help noticing his confusion when he asserted that the parties whose deeds were included within the bounds intended to be incorporated were strongly opposed to it, and had desired him to use every exertion to defeat it, when Col. Prince presented a further petition, signed by the very parties whom Mr. Rankin had asserted as being opposed, praying that they might be included within the Corporation.

The Committee were not, however, to be misled by such trash as this; and took a correct view of the matter, and reported the Bill for the Incorporation without amendment, upon the assurance of Col. Prince, who, be it observed, attended as an inhabitant of Sandwich, deeply interested in its welfare, and Mr. Woodbridge, that the signatures were genuine, and that the majority of the inhabitants were in favor of it, leaving Mr. Rankin in anything but a happy mood to digest his defeat, as best he might. For the life of us, we cannot conceive what could have been the motive of Mr. Rankin in opposing this measure, without it is from political spite against the place. If he had brought forward a single argument against it which might have been listened to with some degree of consideration; but failing in this, he was only ridiculed for his petty and selfish motive.

The Southern Railway.

The evidence in this matter has been closed, and to-day the Committee heard counsel. Dr. Connor on behalf of the McLeod Board, or rather against the new Bill, made a strong and telling speech against the measure, and referred to Mr. Rankin in a manner that must have been anything but agreeable to his feelings, showing that the only motive that he had in view, was a hope that the twenty-five thousand, which so unfortunately (for him) slipped through his fingers, might be realized if the new charter could only be carried. The speech upon the whole was decidedly a good and powerful one. Counsel will be heard on behalf of Mr. Rankin's Bill to-morrow, and the Committee will then report thereon.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and nerve in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the system of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these operations, in which the virtues are aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shrinking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who has once adopted them in her family's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma,	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion,
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Diarrhœa	Liver Complaints,
Dysepepsia,	Lowness of Spirits
Dropsy,	Piles,
Debility,	Stone and Gravel,
Fever and Ague,	Secondary Symptoms,
Female Complaints,	Venereal Affections,
	Worms of all kinds,

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor Holloway, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

☞ Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

HIBERNIAN LOGIC.—Mick Casey used to "stand" in Carew's grocery on the corner.—Smith went in the other day after some "fixins," and among the rest called for a gallon of molasses. There was about a pint in the measure, when Mick began drawing, and after he filled it he poured into Smith's vessel until about a pint was left, as before, in the measure, and then set it down under the cask.

"Hallo!" says Smith, "what are you about? Why don't you put in a gallon, as I ordered?"

"A gallon is it, sur! An' sure an' there's that much in the jug," replied Mick.

Of course Smith would never believe this, as there was a pint left in the measure; and he "made no bones" of accusing Mick of attempting to cheat him.

"Sur," asked Mick, "wasn't there a pint in the measure?"

"Yes."

"Well, thin, ther's the same now?"

"Yes."

"Well, thon, sure an' yo have all that belongs to yez, for didn't I draw the measure full and put it in the jug?"

"No, there's a pint left."

"The divil, sur, an' wasn't that pint there before? Get yourself out of the store, you specimen of maneness, to be after chatin' a lad out of a pint of molasses!"

Smith left, being utterly unable to convince Mick of the error of his way.

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.—Chesterfield was at court in France where Voltaire was one of the guests. Chesterfield seemed going about the brilliant circle of ladies. Voltaire accosted him.—

'My Lord' I know you are a judge; which are the more beautiful, the English or the French ladies?'

"Upon my word,' replyed Chesterfield, with his usual presence of mind, "I am no judge of paintings."

Some time afterwards Voltaire, being in London, happened to be at a nobleman's party with Chesterfield; a lady in the company, prodigiously rouged, directed her whole discourse to Voltaire, and engross his whole conversation. Chesterfield cams up, tapped him on the shoulder. and said:—

"Sir, take care that you are not captivated."

"My Lord,' replied the French wit, "I scorn to be taken by an English craft under French colors."

The following are said to be infallible recipes: for preserving the complexion, temperance; for whitening the hands, honesty; to remove stains, repentance; for improving the sight, observation; a beautiful ring, the home circle; for improving the voice, civility; the best companion to a toilet, a wife; to keep away moths, good society.

Winchell tells a story of a dog which undertook to cross a well in two jumps. There are a great many people just like that dog—folks who thinks they can jump across a well in two jumps. They that undertake it usually "bring up down in the water.'

The New York Mirror says that some omnibus proprietors have adopted the classic motto from Cæsar "Jam forte in omnibus."

Cheddar Cheese.

(Now the cheese-making season is about to commence, we commend the following article to the attention of dairy farmers. It is communicated by a friend who has had much experience in cheese-making. We cannot help thinking that Canada should supply her own wants in this time, and yet there are large quantities of English cheese sold in Canada at 1s 3d. to 2s. per pound. —Ed. Witness:)

"After the morning milking, the evening and morning milk are put together into the tub. The temperature of the whole is brought to 80 degrees, by heating a small quantity of the evening milk. After the rennet is put in, an hour is required for coagulation. If it was put into the milk at seven o'clock, at eight o'clock the curd is partly broken and allowed to subside for a few minutes, in order that a small quantity of the whey may be drawn off to be heated.—This whey is put into a tin vessel and placed in a boiler, to be heated in hot water. The curd is then most carefully and minutely broken. This is done with utensils called shovel breakers, when the curd is broken as minutely as rice; after this is done an insistant pours several pailfuls of heated whey into the mass, during the pouring in of the whey the stirring with the breakers is actively continued in order to mix the whole regularly and not to allow any portion of the curd to be over-heated. The temperature at this time is raised to 100 degrees and the stirring is continued a considerable time until the minutely broken pieces of curd acquire a certain degree of consistency. The curd is then left half an hour to subside. At the end of half an hour the curd has settled to the bottom of the tub when the most of the whey is removed from the curd. A spiggot is turned at the bottom of the tub and the remainder of the whey is allowed to drain off, which it does without any pressure being required. The curd is carefully cut and heaped up in the side of the tub, and then left for an hour with no other pressure than its own weight. But the proper way is to have a tub made with a convex bottom, and instead of putting the curd in the side of the tub, it is put up in the centre which is elevated, and left for an hour as I said before. After this interval it is cut across in large pieces, turned over once on the centre of the tub and left in a heap as before for half an hour. The whey drips away towards the sides of the tub, and runs off at the spiggot. It is now ready for pressure, but great care is to be taken not to put it into the vat, to be pressed at too high a temperature. If the heat be above 60 degrees, and it is usually higher at this time, the curd is broken by the hand, and thrown upon a lead cooler until it is brought to the desired temperatnre. It is then put into vats, and moderately pressed for about an hour. The next thing is to take the curds from the vat and break them fine by putting them through a curd mill, and mix them with salt, and make them up into a cheese, a pound of refined salt is sufficient for half a cwt. of curd.

The cheese is put into a press, at from 2 till 3 o'clock, and remains till the morning. Next morning the cheese is reversed in the vat, and a calico cloth is put upon it, to give it a smooth surface, and the following morning it is ready for the shelf; as that is three days in making, so that is only three cloths it gets.—During the two last days, the pressure is improved by doubling the cloths, one than for drying it."

OIL AND OINTMENT FOR BRUISES.—Take of camomile flowers, lavender, and southernwood tops, of each three handfuls; red sage, and rosemary tops, of each two handfuls; red rose buds, one handful; shred all very fine. Put the ingredients in a new stone pipkin, with a quart of best salad oil. Let them stand two months or more, stirring them often. Then boil it up in the same vessel. Let it boil a quarter of an hour, then add a quarter of a pint of the best French brandy. Boil it up again strain it off through a seive, and it will be fit for use. The ointment is to be made by adding some lard to the ingredients after the oil is strained off. Let it simmer about ten minutes, then strain clear into galipots.

MEASURING HAY.—The editor of the New Jersey Farmer gives his rule, based on large experience, for measuring hay, formerly weighed his hay. But repeated trials taught him that this was unnecessary. Take a mow that has lain through the winter, and ascertain its amount in cubic feet, (multiplying its width by its depth, and that product by its length,) and then divide by 700, and the quotient gives the number of tons. The upper third takes 800 feet to the ton, the lower 600 feet, making the mean 700 feet. If the mow is only five or six deep, however, it takes an average of 800 to the ton.

ASPARAGUS.—Those who have asparagus beds, must not expect that they will take care of themselves. If a good top dressing of short stable manure has not already been dug in, we recommend that as soon as possible a compost of stable manure and muck, muck mixed with three bushels of wood ashes to every cubic yard of the compost be spread over the bed to the depth of two to three inches. When this is done, then sow two or three quarts of salt to the square rod, and it will be found that the asparagus beds will repay the owner handsomely for his trouble. The asparagus plant is greedy and exhausting, and when not supplied with manure, the young shoots come up in the spring like pipe stems, and one can hardly get a good mouth from a mow in the space of ground. Now we might just as well have asparagus coming up in the spring with shoots like hoe handles, but the ground must be made rich in the fall. A good coating such as is recommended above, pro tects the plants from the frost, and when late applied, will keep the roots growing beneath the surface, so that when the spring comes, not only are the shoots early, but when ready to cut, they are of a good size, tender, and of a delicious flavor. Salt is of great use to asparagus, and the plants will bear an extraordinary dose. In its wild state, the natural habitat of the asparagus is near the sea or salt lakes and marshes. The top dressing, even where the bed has not been thoroughly enriched before the plants were set out, will answer every purpose and during the next season the old plants will throw out new roots near the surface, from which strong shoots will come up the next year.

CAKED UDDER—ARNICA.—Under this caption in the Country Gentleman of the 12th inst., the tincture of arnica was spoken of as having proved highly efficacious in a case of this kind, and doubtless it might prove so often in similar cases, as well as in bruises and injuries unattended with flesh wounds. It may be prepared by digesting for four days, two ounces of the flowers of Leopard's bane (Arnica montana) in a pint of Alcohol, and filtering the solution. This preparation has long been in use among German practitioners, for a variety of affections, and is used both internally and externally; from its efficacy in bruises, &c., it has received the title of panacea lupurum.—Preparations under the name of arnica have entered largely into the prescriptions of homœopathic practitioners; but if we are to understand that their practice is restricted to the use of infinitesimal doses, the instance in consideration would seem to have been entirely without any such limits.

Probably most of the liniments in common use for the human species, would prove efficacious if applied to domestic animals. Among these we may mention the compound tincture of soap, (liquid opodeldoc) which may be used in cases where a liniment is required, either alone or combined. when there is much pain, with a third or an equal quantity of tincture of aconite root, or what the same quantity of laudanum, or of tincture of arnica. The compound tincture of soap may be also usefully combined with one-fourth the quantity of oil of origanum, or oil of cedar, or with aqua ammonia, and used as a liniment.

These substances can usually be obtained of any apothecary.—B. Providence R. I.

ELECTURARY FOR THE RHEUMATISM.—Powdered gum guaiacum, eight grains flour sulphur, two drachms; powdered rhubarb, fifteen grains; cream of tartar, one drachm; powdered ginger, thirty grains; nutmeg, eight grains. To be made into an electuary with two ounces of clarified honey; a teaspoonful to be taken night and morning.

EYE WATER.—Those who have any weakness or complaints in the eyes should carefully avoid tampering with them, and either taking to glasses, or using medicial washes at the recommendation of ignorant people. The following may be used without injury, and may, in some slight cases, afford relief; but no great benefit is to be expected from them. Bread milk frequently milked into the eye from the nipple; rose water, or elder flower water; weak green tea, camomile tea, or rosemary tea.

A lady who was recently visited by a servant who had been married, and seeing that she presented an appearance of having very much bettered her circumstances, she inquired the nature of her husband's profession. To this interrogatory the young woman replied, "He is an asker, ma'am." "An asker!" inquired the good lady, with astonishment, "and what in the world is that?" "O, ma'am, he stands in the street and asks." "Why, you don't mean to say you have married a beggar, do you?" "Yes, ma'am, and it's very good business. My husband thinks it very hard indeed, if he don't bring home more than five shillings a day."

For Sale!!!

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada: LOT No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit, City of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will unquestionably be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£250.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned, if by letter post paid.

R. MAYCOCK,
Sandwich, Canada West.

Michigan Central Railroad Co.

North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander,
Will leave Detroit Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SHUMOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

ADRIATIC, " M. S. Lathrop
OGONTZ, " W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY, " (New Propeller,)

Which will, during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Eric Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as those of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week; and having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandize, via

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over FIVE THOUSAND TONS BURTHEN, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandise for the transport of Property.

My Lovers.

I know I am a merry girl,
And have had many a lover,
But the good traits in all of them
I never could discover.

Some had brown eyes, and some had blue
Of soft, bewitching light;
And some had orbs whose jetty hue
Seemed darker far than night.

And some very short, and others tall,
And some good-looking—very;
And some, perhaps, were good and true
And talented were many.

And some had gold, before whose shrine
So many ladies knelt,
But that had not a charm for me—
My heart seem'd made of steel.

But lo! I met another one
Of loving, honest heart;
Who spoke to me in gentleness,
Nor dealt in flattery's art.

And he too, sought to win my love,
Nor did he seek in vain;
For truth and gentleness will win
What gold cannot obtain.

A Chapter on Rats.

It is reckoned that in Jamaica rats consumed a twentieth part of the entire crop of Sugar Cane, and 30,000 were destroyed in one year in a single plantation. In fact, rats are to the earth what sparrows are to the air—universall; present. In the remote islands of the Pacific they abound, and are sometimes the only inhabitants.

The rapid spread of the rat is due to the fearlessness with which he will follow man and his commissariat wherever he goes. Scarcely a ship leaves port for a distant voyage but it takes in its compliment of rats as regularly as the passengers. In this manner many a hoary old wanderer has circumnavigated the globe oftener than Captain Cook, and set his paws on twenty or thirty different shores. The rat-catcher to the East India Company has often destroyed as many as five hundred in a ship newly arrived from Calcutta.

When the rats have once found their way into a ship they are secure as long as the cargo is on board, provided they can command the great necessary—water. If this is well guarded, they will resort to extraordinary expedients to procure it. In a rainy night they will come on deck to drink, and will even ascend the rigging to sip the moisture which lies in the folds of the sails. When reduced to extremities they will attack the spirit-cask and get so drunk that they are unable to walk home.

In France the sewer authorities hold an annual hunting match, on which occasion there is a grand capture of rats. We are informed that they have established a company in Paris, upon the Hudson's Bay principle, to buy up all the rats of the country for the sake of their skins. The soft nap of the fur when dressed is of the most beautiful texture far exceeding in delicacy that of the Beaver, and the hatters consequently use it as a substitute. The hide is employed to make the thumbs of the best gloves, the elasticity and closeness of its texture rendering it preferable to kid.

The sagacity of the rat in pursuit of food is very great. Incredible as the story may appear of their removing hen's eggs by one fellow lying on his back and grasping tightly his ovoid burden with his fore-paws, whilst his comrades drag him away by the tail, we have no reason to disbelieve it, knowing as we do that they will carry eggs from the bottom to the top of a house, lifting them from stair to stair, the first rat pushing them up on its hind and the second lifting them with its fore-legs. They will extract the contents from a flask of Florence oil, dipping in their long tails, and repeating the manœuvre until they have consumed every drop. A close observation of these animals entirely conquers the antipathy which is entertained towards them. Their sharp and handsome heads, their bright eyes, their intelligent look, their sleek skins, are the very reverse of repulsive, and their positive attraction in the beautiful manner in which they sit licking their paws and washing their faces, an occupation in which they pass a considerable portion of their time. The writer on rats in "Bentley's Miscellany" relates an anecdote of a tame rat, which showed that he is capable of serving his master as well as of passing a passive existence under his protection. The animal belongs to the driver of a London omnibus, who caught him as he was removing some hay. He was spared because he had the good luck to be piebald, became remarkably tame, and grew attached to the children. At night he exhibited a sense of the enjoyment of security and warmth by stretching himself out at full length on the rug before the fire, and on cold nights, after the fire was extinguished, he would creep into his master's bed. In the daytime, however, his owner utilized him. At the word of command, "Come along, Bey," he would jump into the ample great-coat pocket, from which he was transferred to the boot of the omnibus. Here his business was to guard the driver's dinner, and if any person attempted to make free with it the rat would fly at them out of the straw. There was one dish alone of which he was an inefficient protector. He could never resist plum-pudding, and though he kept off all other intruders, he ate his fill of it himself. A Belgian newspaper not long since published an account of a theatrical performance by a troop of rats, which gives us a higher idea of their intellectual nature than anything else which is recorded of them. This novel company of players were dressed in the garb of men and women, walked on their hind legs, and mimicked with ludicrous exactness many of the ordinary stage effects. On one point only were they intractable. Like the young lady in the fable, who turned to a cat the moment a mouse appeared, they forgot their parts, their audience, and their manager, at the sight of the viands which were introduced in the course of the piece, and, dropping on all fours, fell to with the native voracity of their race. The performance was concluded by their hanging, in triumph, their enemy the cat, and dancing round the body.

The rat is killed for food, in China, where dried split rats are sold as dainty. The chiffonniers of Paris feed on them with reluctance. Nor is it quite altogether obsolete in our own country. The gipsies continued to eat such as are caught in stack and barns. The Germans turn the rat himself into a police officer to warn off his burglarious brethern. Dr. Shaw, in his general Zoology, states, that a gentleman who travelled through Mecklenburgh about thirty years ago saw one at the posthouse with a bell about his neck, which the landlord assured him had frightened away the whole of the whiskered vermin, which previously infested the place. Mr. Neale says that at Bangkok, the Siamese capital, the people are in the habit of keeping tame rats, which walk about the room, and crawl up the legs of the inmates, who pet them as they would a dog. They are caught young, and, attaining a monstrous size by good feeding, take the place of our cats, and entirely free the house of their own kind.

Why is it?

Mrs. Emery calls on Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Emery is a very sociable woman, intelligent, and rather kind hearted. There is no person more ready to attend to the wants of the poor, watch with the sick and assist the needy than Mrs. Emery; and yet, strange to say, she is far from being a general favorite, —and why is it? We will see.

Mrs. Emery continues the conversation.

"Mrs. Jones, it is really too bad; what a town for tattling this is becoming; why only yesterday Mrs. Smith called on me, and, I declare, her mouth was full of gossip."

"Even with our own friends cannot escape" continues Mrs. Emery; "now Mrs. Smith is a great favorite of yours, and yet——"

"What—what did she say?"

"Now I really would rather say nothing about it; however, you know she was here last week, and she told me yesterday, that although it was ten o'clock the beds were not made, dishes washed, or rooms swept, and that she was so ashamed for you, she did up your work herself. Now you know such a report is ridiculous," exclaimed Mrs. Emery, forgetting, for the moment, that she had told this same story at least half a dozen times before, indeed at every place she had called that day.

Poor Mrs. Jones blushes, and exclaims, angrily—

"I didn't think that of Mrs. Smith; the morning she called I was quite ill. Mr. Jones prepared his own breakfast, and was called away on urgent business, while I was sick on the bed, taking care of the children as best I could. Mrs. Smith, kindly, as I thought, offered to do my work for me, but if this is the way she talks I don't thank her to come and offer her services again."

A few days after the above conversation, Mrs. Emery returns Mrs. Smith's call.

"Some folks are very ungrateful," says Mrs. Emery. "Now there's Mrs. Jones, whom you so kindly assisted the other day, told me she wouldn't thank you to do so again."

"I suppose she thought I didn't do it well enough; but I will not trouble her again,"

Mrs. Smith is greatly offended; and thus two good neighbors are angry with each other, until, by chance, Mrs. Emery's misrepresentations are discovered, and she is most bitterly denounced.

Mrs. Emery visits Mrs. Green; after various other items, the former asks the latter if she knows of any one in the country who is a good hand in putting down pickles.

"Mrs. Brooks is an excellent cook and housekeeper," says Mrs. Green, "and I have heard her pickles praised by a great many."

"Why it was only the other day I was speaking to some ladies about it, and they said she was not a good hand at all," replies Mrs. Emery.

"I was there once, when the pick'es on the table were soft and tasteless, but that was through the cook's carelessness, and unknown to Mrs. Brooks," is the answer.

A few days after, Mrs. Emery goes out into the country and visits Mrs. Brooks. At tea the table is graced with a dish of excellent pickles.

"Well, I declare!" exclaims Mrs. Emery, "these are the best pickles I have tasted for an age; I was thinking of getting you to put me down a barrel, but Mrs. Green said your pickles were soft and tasteless, and I supposed she knew."

The next time Mrs. Brooks goes to town she takes Mrs. Green a nice jar of pickles. Mrs. Green is delighted, and thanks her most sincerely, but the reply is—

"I thought I would give you a sample of my pickles that are not soft and tasteless."

Mrs. Green, astonished, asks an explanation; one is given, and Mrs. Emery is eschewed, henceforth, by the two friends.

If any persons wish to know the latest news let them go to Mrs. Emery, and, strange to say, she gives her surmises as facts.

Now there is Mrs. A. has a new bonnet which must have cost at least fourteen dollars, although her husband is a poor man and works hard every day to find bread and butter for his family. After the report is widely circulated, and Mrs. A. has been severely censured for her extravagance, it is ascertained the bonnet was a present from a very wealthy sister in the city. Mr. and Mrs. B. dress extravagantly and board at the Zonophian rouse. Mrs. Emery conjectures their wealth is only a pretence, and they will leave town shortly with their bills unpaid, as it is possible they may have done in other places; and so this goes as truth before the world much to the injury of Mr. B, who pays all his bills promptly. Mrs. C.'s party was a very dull affair; Miss D. entirely overdressed, and Miss E. looked like a real dowdy. Mrs. F.'s supper was very poor, and Mrs. G. has a very unruly family of children; so with all the ladies throughout the alphabet, although when in their presence she is their warmest friend, in their absence one would think she was their greatest enemy.

One by one Mrs. Emery's friends leave her; she thinks it strange after making herself so very useful. She wonders why she is not invited to the round of quilting parties, and when she has one no one will come. Why at a pic-nic excursion she should be left, and why on the street she should be passed unnoticed or with cold indifference. She is always slighted at home and abroad; and why is it?

The Bachelor and the Baby.

"What shall I do!" and the old bachelor stamped about the sitting room in a perfect rage of doubt, looking first at the napping babe in the little willow cradle, and then at the busy French clock on the mantel shelf. "As sure as my name is Joseph Phelps, that baby, that little, two-fisted, large lunged nephew of mine, is about waking, and it wants one whole hour of the time which mother appointed for her return.

Whew! I actually sweat, thinking about it. What can I do with it—how can I treat it to sugar what d'ye call 'ems, or hold it or trot it, or do anything with it?"

At this juncture, a faint wail from the baby receptacle brought bachelor Joseph to his taps. With the energy and alacrity that would not ill become a husband and babytender, he commenced rocking the cradle; sending the indignant baby into a perfect tremor of kicks and squalls. Backwards and forwards, from one side of the pillow to the other, the round, red face rolled; the infant fists were clenched with a force that purple'd them; while from the white, plump throat, came a cry that sent the bachelor wild with fear.

Again Joe looked at the clock.

"What in the deuce can I do!" he exclaimed, again viewing woefully the little inflamed face before him.

He sat down in a big chair before Baby —spread a double cradle quilt over his knees, and with a look of terror upon his face, proceeded to take Baby from its resting place. He drew the young hopeful into his lap, just as a very neat old lady would pick up a pocket-handkerchief, with his thumbs and fingers. A fresh yell from the rosy mouth of baby was the only expression of thanks as he commenced the never-out-of-fashion baby-trot.

"It must be that something is pricking him. "Shoo shoo!" said Joe, commencing a search for the aggravating pin, that was driving the child into such a rage. But no pin was to be found, and he made an attempt to turn Baby over; but oh, the clumsiness of his fingers—the little eel-like form slid out of his lap to the floor, sending forth a cry that was "louder, clearer, deadlier than before."

"Lord, bless me, I've broken it's neck!" was the exclamation as he picked Baby up, and in the agony of despair tried to quiet him. A thought struck Joe. He saw a basque hanging against the wall of the adjoining bed-room, and with a smile of delight upon his countenance, he went for it. Sure enough, there it was, stuffing, bodkins, and all! a real monument of feminine ingenuity. He was wild with joy. He pinned it over his coat, and fastened the sleeves behind him. He took Baby and laid its head against the false breast-work.

"Shades of Southern plantations and cotton factories!" exclaimed Joe, as Baby rooted its nose into it about a mile, then cuddled down for a snooze. Then the bachelor commenced singing:

"Women are all a fleeting show
For man's delusion given:
When filled with bran and stuffed with tow,
They look quite well—"

A tap upon the door stopped Joe in the midst of his suggestive song; and before he had time to disarray himself, the door was opened, and a roguish, laughing pair of eyes peered in upon him.

"Your sister is not at home is she?" chirruped the visitor.

"No ma'am," stammered Joe, growing very red in the face; "and I have turned nurse."

Miss Hayes laughed; offered to relieve him of his charge, which he willingly consented to; sitting near by, the while, intently watching her. She managed Baby to a charm, without the basque, and Joe was captivated.

Joseph Phelps married Fanny Hayes—'pon my word, he did.

Miscellany.

DESIRE OF FAME.—It is imagined by some, that the lover of fame is so voracious of praise that he is indifferent to its quality. This is not this case. The smiles of vulgar patronage, or the blundering eulogies of ignorance, are always offensive and disgusting. "I love praise" says Cowper, in one of his letters, "from the judicious, and those who have so much delicacy themselves as not to offend mine." The applause of men who are themselves eminent in literature often thrills an ambitious author with that inexpressible delight which can never be occasioned by the adulation of common minds. When Lord Byron's high opinion of Sheridan's power was communicated to that wild and sensitive genius, he burst into a flood of tears. His joy overpowered him, and was far too intense to find relief in words. —Literary Leaves.

The Kingston Whig says that Dr. Rae, the Arctic traveller, paid a short visit to Kingston, the other day, to inspect the progress of his Arctic schooner. While staying at the British American Hotel, he was waited upon by a deputation of gentlemen, requesting him to accept a complimentary dinner. Illness prevented Dr. Rae's acceptance of the honour then, but he said he would again be in Kingston in a few days, when he would feel delighted to receive the courtesies of the Kingstonese. Some talk is made about a set of colors for the vessel.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—What are their Credentials?—they are approved by the most enlightened governments, sanctioned by the higest medical authority. Let no victim of scrofula, salt rheum, or any ulcerous or eruptive malady, fancy a cure impossible. It is never too late to use Holloway's Ointment for external complaints, or his Pills for internal disorders. The public are hereby informed of a surtest, whereby to ascertain the genuiness, or the contrary of these medicines. This consist of a Water-mark, the words, "Holloway's, New York and London," in semi-transparent letters in every leaf of the book of directions, around each box and pot. Without the Water-mark, none are genuine.

BYRON AND HIS LADY.—Lord Byron was remarkably unlike his father, from whom his wife proceeded from a few hasty words, uttered when he was unware of her presence. During his financial troubles his wife had come into his study so quietly that Byron did not know it. Thinking over his condition, and how much his marriage had rendered his ruin more unpleasant, he cried audibly enough for her to hear, "Lady Byron is confoundedly in my way!" She roused him from his brown study by saying, "Indeed, my Lord! I can easily get out of it!" Byron would have it she never forgave this escapade.

A LUCKY MAN.—One of our exchanges announced that a Mr. White, living in Venice, Pa., was recently murdered in his own bed by some one who wished to get his money. The editor adds that, "luckily Mr. White had deposited his money in the bank the day before." Mr. White lost nothing but his life!

A glover's apprentice in Edinburg resolved to qualify himself for a higher profession. The relation with whom he lived, was very poor, and could not afford a candle, and scarcely a fire at night, and and it was only by sitting hours and hours that young man had leisure, he had no alternative but to go to the streets at night, and plant himself with his book, near a shop-window, the lights of which enabled him to read it, and when they were put out, he used to climb a lamppost, and hold on with one hand while he read with the other. The person lived to be one of the greatest oriental scholars in the world, and the first book in Arabic printed in Scotland, was his production.

A French physician, in a recent dissertation, contends that groaning and crying are the means by which nature allays anguish; and states that those patients who give way to their natural feelings, more speedily recover from accidents and operations than those who suppose it unmanly to groan or cry.

Brigham Young has abandoned the Mormon settlement at Utah. He succeeded in making his retreat, assisted by the Indians through their country. It is to be hoped the territory will be placed in better hands.

A subterranean river has been struck by persons engaged in boring an artesian well, at Henderson, Ky., from which a jet of water is formed up through the bore and thrown to the height of 50 feet above the surface of the ground.

PROLIFIC.—There is a man in White county, Illinois, who has a wife that has borne him sixteen children; the first six came by twos, the succeeding nine by threes —while the last one, poor helpless, lonely thing! came into this world without company. Sixteen children at seven births!—Olney Times.

HISTORY OF THE PENNY.—The ancient English penny was the first silver coin struck in England, and the only one current among our Saxon ancestors. At the time of Ethelred it was equal in weight to our threepence. Till the time of King Edward I. the penny was so deeply indented that it might easily be broken and parted, on occasion, into two parts—these were called half pence; or into four, these were called fourthings or farthings.

The Southern Railway.

PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE.

Saturday, May 10.

EVIDENCE OF JOHN MCLEOD, ESQ.

Q—State what is the nature of your connection with the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Company and how and when did you become so connected.

A.—In the year 1852, the hon. William Hamilton Merritt communicated with Mr. Park of Amherstburg, and myself, and several other gentlemen, for the purpose of agitating or getting up petitions, for the purpose of obtaining a charter for a through line from the Detroit river to the Niagara River. Our negotiations and exertions continued till the session of 1854, when Mr. Rankin was returned for the County of Essex. During those ten years Mr. Park and myself visited most of the Municipalities from Amherstburg to St. Thomas, and prevailed upon them to petition Parliament for the accomplishment of the above-named object. I was requested to attend the County Council of Kent in 1853, but do not think in 1853, and to urge upon them the necessity of passing a resolution that they would take stock, should a charter be so obtained. I did so attend, and after hearing my exposition, they unanimously passed a resolution that the municipality of the County of Kent should take £50,000 of stock in the Southern Railway, if a charter could be obtained. This was before the election of Mr. Rankin and before he had any connection with the road whatever. In the Parliamentary session of 1854, the hon. Wm. H. Merritt introduced a bill for the charter from the Detroit to the Niagara River, which Bill was rejected by the Railway Committee, of which Mr. Rankin was a member, although petitioned for by all the Municipalities from Amherstburg to St. Thomas. In the session of 1855 the half measure called the Amherstburg and Saint Thomas Railway was passed, wherein a clause was inserted requiring £500,000 to be taken, and ten per cent thereof paid in. Immediately thereupon four stockbooks were opened in the towns of St. Thomas, Chatham, Windsor and Amherstburg.— Subscriptions by the Municipalities and private individuals were taken to nearly the amount of £200,000. Finding at that time that it was impossible to get the necessary amount of stock subscribed, it was deemed best to have a bill introduced in the session of 1856, for the reduction of stock to one-half the amount.

Q.—State when the subscription of Mr. Wallace was made, and whether or not it was a bona fide one?

A.—While attending the session of 1856 in Toronto, I found it was the universal impression that, from the same combination of influences that defeated the through Bill of Mr. Merritt in 1854, the amendment for the reduction of stock would not be granted.— Mr. Merritt, Mr Park, and myself, in conjunction with some other gentlemen of Toronto, commenced negotiations for the purpose of subscribing the full amount of stock necessary to form the Company. During these negotiations, in the early part of May, 1856. Mr. Wm. Wallace of Fort Erie, P. W., Civil Engineer, came up to Amherstburg for the purpose of making arrangements for the location of the Company, and commencing a survey of the line. In conversation with him upon the subject, he stated that the capitalists connected with the Michigan Southern Railway, and the New York Central Railway, and the City Buffalo, with whom he was intimately acquainted, had repeatedly expressed themselves to him as very favourable to the construction of the Southern Road, as forming the only link for the connection of the Eastern and Western Railways in the United States, and that he had no doubt, through his influence with them and the confidence they reposed in him, they would advance the amount requisite to form the Company. He proposed to subscribe the whole amount of stock himself, and transfer it afterwards to the parties who should advance the aforesaid money. He told me that the Buffalo and Attica Road, in the State of New York, and some other Railway in the same State, of which I do not now recollect the name, was organized, and the stock taken by him in the same manner, and ultimately transferred to the capitalists who built the road. The Attica roads were built under his superintendence as Chief Engineer. On the 8th of May, the people of Amherstburg, anxious to have the survey of the line commenced, for the purpose of ascertaining the probable cost of the road, held a meeting, at which Mr. Wallace was authorized to commence the survey, and the sum of £250 was subscribed and paid to Mr. Wallace, in order to assist him to pay the expenses of the survey. At that meeting I was not present, being absent from home, but on my return I was waited upon, and I think by the Secretary of that meeting, for the purpose of obtaining my subscription to further the object of the survey, at which time he informed me that Mr. Wallace had subscribed the £500,000 necessary to form the Company, thus carrying out his ideas commenced to me on a former occasion. A few days afterwards, I met Mr. Wallace on his way from Amherstburg to Buffalo, when he informed me that in fulfilment of his former proposition, he had subscribed the stock with his own name on his way with the stock book in his possession, having first obtained permission from the provisional director, in whose custody the stock book was placed by resolution of the Provisional Committee, for the purpose of transferring the stock to any who would advance the money. During the months of June, July and August, the survey was continued.

Q—Were you, as one of the provisional directors present at a meeting of such directors at St. Thomas, on the 5th July, 1856? If so what proceedings were taken by them?

A—I was not present at the abandoning meeting called by Mr. Rankin, one of the provisional directors, for the simple reason that I was never notified, although I believe I was present at every meeting of said directors at St. Thomas, or any other place from the period of the granting of the charter. The proceeding taken by them, as I, afterwards saw advertised in the public prints, were that they had closed the books, and that the ten per cent on the stock subscribed was required to be paid within ten days of their meeting, otherwise the stock subscribed would be forfeited, and their right to vote at the election of directors, which was to take place at Amherstburgh, on the 7th of August.

Q—Are you aware that two of the Members of that Committee were not notified of the meeting, and if so, do you know why they were omitted by Mr. Rankin?

A.—Mr. Kolfage and myself, two of the provisional directors residing at Amherstburg, were not notified of the meeting, and of course were not present. I am unable to give a reason why we were not notified, unless it was that he feared that something might leak out of his private arrangement with Mr. Zimmerman in connection with the £25,000, he having called the meeting so hurriedly and on no authority but his own.

Q.—What arrangement was made with Mr. Buchanan on the subject of his paying the necessary deposits upon the stock subscribed for.

A.—About the 10th of July I was first aware of the meeting of the Directors at St. Thomas; I therefore communicated with Mr. Wallace and Mr. Park, and we concluded to proceed to St. Catharines to see Mr. Merritt, and to Buffalo to see Mr. Patchin the banker, and other capitalists, for the purpose of raising ten per cent upon the stock subscribed. Before I had come to communication with Mr. Merritt, and it was agreed that we should deposit our joint notes for £25,000 in the banks of St. Catharines, in order to obtain a discount thereon, and that we would proceed to Buffalo and try further to obtain from the capitalists with whom Mr. Wallace had been communicating, the other £25,000. On our way to Buffalo we accidentally met Mr. Patchin on the steamer Clifton, on his way to Buffalo, who agreed with Mr. Wallace that he would accompany us to St. Catharines on the Monday following, and deposit in a bank there £25,000, and take a transfer of the stock which that amount represented, as the ten per cent. Mr. Park and myself then proceeded to Amherstburg, and on the Monday morning following we, to our astonishment, received a telegraph from Mr. Isaac Buchanan, of Hamilton, (with whom up to that moment, we never had any communication on the subject), stating that he was on his way to Amherstburg with the money to pay in the ten per cent on the Wallace subscription. We thereupon proceeded to Windsor in order to meet Mr. Buchanan and ascertain the meaning of the telegraph. We met him there, when he proposed to advance the money on the Wallace subscription if we would guarantee the transfer of the stock from Mr. Wallace to him. We objected, and wanted to know his reasons for obtaining the stock, as we were suspicious that he wished to obtain possession of the charter for the purpose of transferring it to the Great Western Railway, and thereby defeat the construction of the road, as we imagined that it would be for the interest of the Great Western Railway to have no opposing line. Mr. Buchanan explained that the money was already subscribed in England for the benefit of a line of Railway from the Great Western road, and that the Canadian directors as well as shareholders in England had decided that it would be preferable and more for their interest to build the Southern line of railroad, which would be cheaper and of easier grade than a double track on their own road. We then asked him what guarantee he could give us that the road should be built as he represented. He said the best guarantee he could give, was the paying in of the ten per cent. We then asked him if Mr. Rankin's statement about the £18,000 is a fabrication?

A.—I had been informed so by Mr. Buchanan, and no such amount was ever passed by the board of directors or was ever spoken of.

Q—Who made the survey, and what amount has been paid by the Company for it?

A—Mr. Wallace made the survey, and was paid by Mr. Buchanan, who presented the account to the Company. I do not know the amount of it.

Q—Have you in any interview with Mr. Zimmerman advanced claims for yourself personally?

A—No.

Q—Where should the required deposit of ten per cent, to qualify shareholders to vote at the election of directors on the 7th August last, have been paid in?

A—In the Bank of Upper Canada.

Q—Have you ever considered the board of directors, of which Mr. Rankin is President, a legally constituted board?

A—Not being a Chancery lawyer, I can not say.

Q—Does not the legality of your own board depend upon the illegality of the other?

A—My answer to this question is the same as to the former.

EVIDENCE OF MR. J. G. KOLFAGE.

Q.—I am the provisional director of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company?

A—I am.

Q.—Were you present at a meeting of Directors held at St. Thomas on the 5th of July, 1856? If not, why not?

A—I was not present for the reason that I was never notified. I have been present at all meetings since the passing of the Act granting the charter, with the exception of the last one. At a former meeting held at St. Thomas, a resolution was passed, placing in my hands the Amhersburg stock book, for the purpose of obtaining subscriptions in which book the Municipality of Amherstburg by the Reeve subscribed for £20,000, and different individuals subscribed to the total amount of £7,000 up to the 30th September, 1855. The statement of Mr. Rankin as to the subscription in the Amherstburg book is incorrect, he showing that only about £1,300 had been subscribed up to the time when he saw the stock book which was on the day of the meeting at St Thomas, in September, 1855. The whole of the above sum of £7,000 was previous to that time with the exception of £375 subscribed by three persons, and the Wallace subscription at that meeting in September, 1855. There not being sufficient subscribed to form the Company, the book was transferred back to me to obtain further subscriptions.

Q—Did Mr. Rankin at any time, and when and where explain to you the reasons why you had not been notified of the meeting referred to, and what was the explanation?

A—On the Monday following the meeting at St. Thomas on the 5th of July, called by Mr. Rankin, and of which I had no notice, I met Mr. Rankin, who told me what had taken place, that he had allowed Mr. Zimmerman and his friends to take all the stock that was required to form the Company, and that he would choose his own directors. I then asked him why he did not notify Mr. McLeod and myself of the meeting called by him. He said he had not thought it necessary, and moreover that there was not sufficient time. I told him that he might have telegraphed to us. He answered that he did not know there was a telegraph to Amherstburg, at which I was very much surprised, as the telegraph wire from Windsor to Amherstburg passes directly over the gate leading to his house. I then asked him what guarantee he had got from Mr. Zimmerman that the terminus would be at Amherstburg. He said he had none, neither had he asked for any, as he well knew Mr. Zimmerman would give none. Upon my expressing great dissatisfaction, he answered that he did not care whether the people of Amherstburg were satisfied or not, that he had done the best he could, which last remark referred, I suppose, to the £25,000 agreement which he then had in his possession, but did not tell me of. He also said that the best thing the people of Amherstburg could do, would be to receive Mr. Zimmerman and his friends cordially on the 7th of August, and get up a good champagne dinner. A letter to the Railway Committee requesting that his name might be erased from the petition.

CROSS EXAMINATION OF MR. MCLEOD.

Q—Were you present when the agreement between the late Mr. Zimmerman, Mr. Merritt, Wythes and Mr. Buchanan was entered into at Liverpool.

A.—I was not.

Q—Have you seen that agreement?

A.—Mr. Radcliffe, junr, met me in Detroit during last winter, and showed me an agreement which he said had been entered into by English capitalists.

Q—What was the substance of the contract given Messrs O'Reilly and Wythes?

A.—That they were to finish the road by the first of July, 1859, for the sum of £1,125,000 sterling, subject to the arrangements existing in England between Messrs Buchanan, Wythes and Zimmerman.

Q—Have you at any time repudiated being a director of the board of which Mr. Rankin is President, or have you ever accepted such position; if so, why?

A.—I was never asked to repudiate my position as director, and was never called upon to accept such position until the 28th of April last, when the two boards met for the purpose of assimilating and amalgamating with the Woodstock and Lake Erie Board.

Q—Have you ever been notified to attend a meeting of Mr. Rankin's board before the death of Mr. Zimmerman; if so, did you attend; if not, why not?

A—I never was.

Q—Did you act as a member of the board of which you speak; if so, why?

A—I did, for the purpose of having the differences arranged and coming to a mutual settlement.

Q—Was you President of the antagonistic Board?

A—I was.

Q—Who paid the expenses on the bill drawn by Mr. Radcliffe on the Great Western Railway Company, in England, which were protested?

A—I cannot say; did not know that there was any protested drafts.

Q—How do you know that Mr. Rankin's statement about the £18,000 is a fabrication?

A—As aforesaid, in making a preliminary survey in order to obtain an approximation of the probable cost of the road Mr. Wallace asked me whether I would allow him to take the amount of stock necessary to form the company, which he would do in the same manner as he had done in commencing the Buffalo and Attica and other roads in the State of New York. He also asked if I would have any objection to his taking the stock book to Buffalo in order to induce capitalists to engage in the undertaking. I told him that I had no objection, provided Mr. Park would guarantee the return of the book to me that I might produce it at the next meeting of directors. Mr. Park did so, and Mr. Wallace took the book with him. Mr. Rankin in his evidence gives a copy of the Amhersburgh stock book, in which he endeavours to show that the Wallace subscription was made in such a manner that it might mean either £500 or £500,000, and that the thousands were put in the shilling column. This is easily explained, as the column for pounds is narrow for more than three figures could be inserted in it, which, of course, necessitated the putting of the thousand in the shilling column. This statement blows into the air the great objection which Mr. Rankin has made to the Wallace subscription.

A brief examination of Mr. Kolfage followed, which, however, elicited nothing new, except that the Wallace subscription was first made in pencil, and that he found it inked over when the book was returned to him.

EVIDENCE OF MR. MACBETH.

Q—Were you one of the provisional directors of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company? State how you became acquainted with the Company.

A—I was one of the directors having first become connected with the Company by my name being inserted in the Act of Incorporation.

Q—Did you subscribe stock in the company and for what amount? Had you any personal interest beyond your stock?

A—I subscribed stock to the amount of £1500, in the summer of 1855. I was present at the meeting of the provisional directors, held at St. Thomas, in July. I was interested in the construction of the road as a land owner, and also for my constituents, as the road runs for nearly sixty miles back through the country I represented. Beyond this I had no personal interest.

Q—Did you take any, and what part, in the proceedings of the Company, after your election or previous thereto?

A—I took no active part beyond the meeting at Amhersburg. I was then chosen as a director, and took the same post in the elected board as I had done in the provisional board.

Q—Has Mr. Rankin delayed or prevented the progress of the Company and its works since the death of Mr. Zimmerman?

A—Since Mr. Zimmerman's death, I have always counselled a forgetting of previous differences, and urged an amalgamation of the two charters and a combination of the various interests involved, believing that it would require our united strength to build the road. I had good grounds for believing that the amalgamation would take place, though aware that it was not easy to reconcile personal feeling and interests. Some time subsequent to Mr. Zimmerman's death, I learned, with surprise, that the amalgamation was delayed by an extraordinary claim made by the President of the board, Mr. Rankin. There were other demands, as I understood, but of less amount, and, in short, that no one, so far, could be found to assume Mr. Zimmerman's interests and engagements encumbered with so large an amount as £25,000, which I understood to be the sum claimed by Mr. Rankin for his services.

Q—Had you previous to this had communications with Mr. Rankin, and had he ever known Mr. Zimmerman, or that he had a personal interest in the Company or its contracts to the amount of £25,000, or any other amount, or did he assert the contrary, and say that he had no interest.

A—He had necessarily several verbal communications, being at the same Board and having worked together for the furtherance of the road. On no occasion did I get the slightest hint that he was personally interested in the company, beyond his position as representative of the County of Essex. He never mentioned on any occasion that he intended to have a personal interest. On the contrary, I have repeatedly heard him declare that he had no interest whatever, but the interest of his constituents. He spoke to me in Toronto, saying that he proposed introducing a Bill to confirm the Acts of what is called the Rankin Board, inasmuch as he believed that to be the legal Board, and to thereby defeat our opponents of the McLeod Board. He then assured me that his only object was to amalgamate the two Boards. I promised him my support, for I sympathized with him, and believed him to be injured politically, by a prominent member of that Board. And further, that were the Acts of the Rankin Board confirmed by Parliament, an amalgamation would have been more readily arrived at. But he never mentioned or hinted that he had any other desire or object of a personal nature, than proving to the world that his course was straightforward and honorable; and to maintain his position in the Board.

Q—If you had known that Mr. Rankin either had or intended to have any interest in the contracts or affairs of the Company to the amount of £25,000, or to any other amount, would you have voted for him, or allowed him to be President without remonstrating?

A—I cheerfully concurrred in the proposal to make Mr. Rankin President, but had I known that he had any such contract or agreement in his pocket, I would not have sat at the same Board with him.

Tuesday, May 13th.

The Railway Committee met this morning at eleven o'clock. The Counsel for the parties interested in the Bill for the incorporation of the Great Southern Railway Company, stated they had concluded the evidence on their part, whereupon it was resolved that after hearing counsel on each side, the further consideration of the bill should be postponed until a printed copy of all the evidence was placed in the hands of each member of the Committee.

Dr. Clark had been spoke for an hour and a half on the part of the opponents of the bill. He complained of the disadvantageous position in which he was placed in being compelled to state the grounds on which the opponents of the bill based their opposition, without being made aware of what the arguments which would be employed upon the other side. He first objected to the bill, that the parties to incorporate whom it was brought forward, were not named therein, as required by rules of the House. The bill presented Mr. Rankin with "A, B, C, D, &c." at his back, as the persons to whom the management of the road was to be entrusted. No evidence was presented to the committee that there was a solitary person in the country who would support Mr. Rankin and assume the carrying out of the project for which an Act of Incorporation was sought. This was contrary to the rules of the House by which it was made a part of the duty of the Committee to inquire into the character and standing of parties asking a charter, in order to ascertain whether they were able to carry out the enterprise which they proposed to undertake. This was particularly necessary in the present case, in which one of the four petitioners for the bill had withdrawn his name, and there is his examination that he had been induced by fraud and misrepresentation to sign the petition. He submitted to the Committee, whether the bill could be proceeded with until the rule was complied with.

Some discussion took place among members of the Committee upon this point.

Mr. Wilson thought that that the names of the persons should be required to be inserted in the Bill.

Sir Allan MacNab objected to giving an Act of Incorporation to "Mr. Et cetera."

Mr. Bellingham thought that the matter might be proceeded with, as the rule had been so far waived.

A Singular Case—Nearly Buried Alive.—A letter from Cleves, Hamilton County, Ohio, says: "Wat, Eckman, a well known man in this place, was taken violently ill on the morning of the 19th, and by having the prompt and kind services of two erudite Æsculapiuses, received his "quietus" at about 5 o'clock the same day. Next morning the defunct Eckman was kindly stowed away in his coffin, and toted to the market waggon to the Berea Church, a distance of two miles, where a funeral sermon was preached by the Rev. Wm. Lee. The solemn thing was about concluded, the last hymn was read, and the last choir was about to "strike up," when they were suddenly annoyed by discordant and very unmusical sounds and kick, which it seemed obvious were going on inside the coffin. You may possibly imagine there was some consternation in that meeting house about that time—well there was, and also for a few minutes. At least half of the congregation broke for the door, and the balance were about to "follow suit," when the Rev. Mr. Lee descended from the pulpit, and in a loud voice ordered the coffin to be speedily opened, which was done, when it was found that Watt was not only alive and kicking, but was struggling manfully to free himself from his—to him—mysterious confinement. The blood was flowing freely from his mouth and nose, but in a very few minutes he was able to speak. He was carried to the house of Abram Patterson, Esq., about two hundred yards from the church, and a physician sent for, who remained with him until the next morning, when he was able to walk about the room."

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The evidence has been closed before the Committee, and in this issue we give the remainder of the evidence affecting our portion of the line. A more thorough and complete system of rascality has been brought to light, than has ever before been attempted in this fair Province,—a system, if circumstances had not prevented its ripening, would have filled the pockets of many of the directors, at the expense of the shareholders. The preamble of the new Bill, which will have the effect of repealing all the old charters and establishing a new through route, has been passed in Committee, and in all probability will report favorably upon it. Whether a majority will be found when it comes up before the House to pass the Bill, it is difficult at present to say.

The birth day of our gracious Queen was celebrated in Sandwich, on Monday last, with the usual Militia Drill, under the command of the veteran Colonel Askin.— The Militia turned out in full force at an early hour, and after being put through a number of evolutions, were marched through the principal streets, and having given three cheers for the Queen, were dismissed.

The street's presented quite a gay appearance with the number of flags that were flying from almost every house top, producing an effect that was pleasing to the eye, and gratifying to all loyal subjects, inasmuch as it marked the respect with which our Gracious Sovereign is regarded in this loyal Town. In the evening, the inhabitants had an opportunity of witnessing a display of fireworks. A large bonfire was also lighted for the amusement of the juveniles, who appeared to enjoy the amusement amazingly. The quantity of fire balls which the youngsters kept rolling, presented a fine appearance, in contrast with the darkness of the evening.

Through the kindness of Mr. Lovell, publisher of the Canada Directory, we have been furnished with the address of the Hon. Mr. Justice Haliburton, delivered in Glasgow, upon the present condition, resources and prospects of British North America.— In speaking of the comparative productions of Grain in Canada, as compared with the United States, he says:—"In 1851, Upper Canada raised at the rate of 13½ bushels of wheat to each individual in it, while the United States in the same period gave but 4½ bushels. And in the ten years preceding 1855, the wheat crop of the United States increased 48 per cent; in Canada, in the same period, it increased 480 per cent. So in Indian Corn, the crop for ten years preceding 1851, increased 58 per cent; in Canada, 163 per cent. Her cereal exports have doubled every four years, and now equal half of those of all the United States. The total imports divided among the whole population, on the 1st July, 1854, amounted to £3 14s 10d to each individual; in the U. S., only to £2 7s. to each individual.— The total exports give to each individual £2 15s: in the United States, only £2 7s 2d FAMINE IN THE NORTH OF MICHIGAN.—We learn by the Detroit papers, that the greatest destitution prevails in parts of the State of Michigan. Many families are without a morsel of food, and are entirely dependent upon the contribution of friends and the liberality of the inhabitants of other parts of the State. The scarcity is not confined to individuals alone, for cattle are without food, and none can be had; and the lateness of the Spring has rendered it impossible for them to obtain green food from the fields. Accounts from the districts of scarcity show that before the crops will come in again, starvation will be inevitable, unless means are provided from the more wealthy portions of the State, to allay the distress that is now staring them in the face.

THE HOG CHOLERA.—The Montreal Commercial Advertiser says:—"We are informed that a disease resembling the Western Hog Cholera has broken out among the swine kept in this city, and has been in many instances suddenly fatal.— The unclean brutes are seized with a paralysis of the hind quarters, as though the back was broken, and die very shortly in great agony. The remedy is to cut their throats when first attacked, and convert them into sausages."

We have received the prospectus of the "Semi-Weekly Reporter" to be published in the town of Whitby, we always hail with pleasure such marks of enterprise and wish the proprietor every success.

☞ As we were just going to press, we learned by telegraph, from Mr. Woodbridge, at Toronto, that the Sandwich Incorporation Bill is secure, and will be passed; also that the Southern Railway Bill has passed in Committee, with the Town of Sandwich as one of the termini.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH.—We are gratified to see that the building of All Saints' Church has been recommenced, and, that it is being prosecuted with a vigor which promises a speedy completion of the work. During the past fortnight the walls have been rapidly rising, and are now completed with the exception of the west gable and the tower; in a few days the body of the church will be ready to receive the roof. As the building progresses, the exceeding beauty of the design becomes more apparent, and we are only expressing the opinion of every beholder when we assert that it will be one of the most beautiful churches of its size in Canada, and an honor as well as an ornament to our village.—Windsor Herald.

"An accident occurred on the River, on Wednesday last, by which two men lost their lives. Five men started in a boat, on a duck shooting excursion, and when returning the boat was overhaul ced by the parties crowding too much to one side, in consequence of which all were precipitated into the water. The Die Vernon, of Buffalo, lent its aid in endeavoring to rescue the men from the water, and succeeded in recovering four of the persons, one of whom died after his rescue. Mr. Bradshaw, saloon keeper, is missing, his body not having yet been recovered, and Mr. Allen, boarding-house keeper, died after he was taken out of the water.—Windsor Herald.

The use of Strychnine in the manufacture of Whiskey in Indiana, is henceforth to be punished as a felony in Ohio. By means of this drug, used in connection with tobacco, sharp distillers were making five gallons of whiskey from a bushel of grain, whereas the quantity obtained by the old process was but half so much. The topers never complained of the new liquid, but swallowed all they could get of it and smacked their lips for more; but the hogs not being so case-hardened, could not stand it, and died off by hundreds of what is called "Hog Cholera." The Ohio, which runs rivers into which the refuse of the distilleries was drained, began to die off in shoals; and a chemist reported that a barrel of this Strychnine Whiskey contained poison enough to kill twenty men. (So does a barrel of any whiskey, if administered to produce that result.) Ohio could not stand the loss of the quality of her poison distrusted and so has made the use of Strychnine in Whiskey a State Prison offence. Making the Whiskey without Strychnine is not even declared a misdemeanor as yet, but we are thankful for a beginning.—N. Y. Tribune.

The London Times of May 6th says persons in America directing letters for London should be careful to put the initial letters for the metropolitan district intended above the word "London," and not under it. A leading house in New York having transmitted bill for £70,000, in a letter directed "London, W. C.," it was carried to London Western Canada.

ELOPEMENT & SHARP PRACTICE.—A. de B. were neighbors in Riggold county, and B., taking a fancy to Mrs. A., an elopement was agreed on, condition that B. should convey to Mrs. A. a quarter-section of land in her own right, and the deed was accordingly executed, but there was a third party.— A.—who might possibly feel aggrieved by the transaction, it was arranged that he should be bought off, and the whole kept quiet. Accordingly, it was arranged that B. should convey to A. another quarter-section of land and a team of mules; the deed was accordingly executed, the mules drawn, delivered up, and all parties started on a trip of final separation. Arrived at Fairfield, B. and Mrs. A. took the stage east, while A., with his two mules and two children, took the road north to his father's in Washington county. While A. was busy making arrangement to suit his altered situation, and within less than a week after their separation, he was surprised—very agreeably, no doubt—by the return of his faithful, loving wife, and on Tuesday evening last they passed through this place with their children, returning to their old home in Riggold county, if not wiser and better than before, at least better off in the world.— Sigourney (Iowa) Life in the West.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

By a vote of 14 to 10, the Railway Committee have passed the preamble of Mr. Rankin's Southern Railway charter, which abolishes all the old Acts, and provides for the establishment of a new Company. After the exposure of Mr. Rankin's transactions, in connection with the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway, this proceeding will might be considered remarkable, could any proceeding of the present Parliament excite surprise. The subject will, of course, come before the House, and be fully discussed.— Globe.

By the Niagara.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Parliament was opened on Thursday, the 17th instant.

The following is the Queen's speech, read by Commission:—

My Lords and Gentlemen—We are commanded to inform you that Her Majesty has availed herself of the earliest moment of having recourse to your advice after the dissolution of the last Parliament. Her Majesty hopes that there will be found sufficient time during the present session to enable you satisfactorily to deal with various important matters, some of which occupied the attention of Parliament in the beginning of this year. We are commanded by her Majesty to inform you that the aspect of affairs in Europe afford a well-grounded confidence in the continuance of peace. All the main stipulations of the treaty of Paris have been carried into execution, and it is to be hoped that what remains to be done in regard to those matters will be speedily accomplished. The negotiations upon the subject of the differences which have arisen between the King of Prussia and the Swiss Confederation, with regard to the affairs of Neufchatel, are drawing to a close, and will, her Majesty trusts, be terminated by an arrangement satisfactory to all parties.

The negotiations in which her Majesty has been engaged with the government of Honduras, in regard to the affairs of Central America, have not yet been brought to a close.

Her Majesty commands us to express to you her regret that at the date of the latest advices from China, the differences which have arisen between the High Commissioner at Canton and her Majesty's civil and naval officers in China still remain unadjusted, but her Majesty had sent to China a Plenipotentiary fully instructed to deal with them, in all matters of difference, and that Plenipotentiary will be supported by an adequate military and naval force in the event of such assistance becoming necessary.

We are commanded by her Majesty to inform you that a treaty of peace between her Majesty and the Shah of Persia, was signed at Paris on the 4th of March, by her Majesty's Ambassador at Paris and the Ambassador of the Shah, and her Majesty will give directions that this treaty shall be laid before you as soon as the ratifications shall be exchanged.

We are commanded to inform you that her Majesty, in conjunction with several other European powers, has concluded a treaty with the King of Denmark for the redemption of the Sound Dues. This treaty, together with a separate Convention between her Majesty and the King of Denmark, completing the arrangement, will be laid before you, and her Majesty will cause the measures necessary for fulfilling the arrangements thereby contracted to be submitted for your consideration.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons —Her Majesty has directed that the estimates for the present year to be laid before you, and they have been prepared with a careful attention and with a due regard to the efficiency of the departments of the public service to which they severally relate.

My Lords and Gentlemen— Her Majesty commands us recommend to your earnest consideration the measures which will be proposed to you for the consideration and improvement of the law. Bills will also be submitted to you for improving the laws relative to the testamentary and matrimonial jurisdiction now exercised by the courts, and also for checking fradulent breaches of trust.

Her Majesty commands us to express to you her heart felt gratification at witnessing the continued well being and contentment of her people, and the progressive development of productive industry throughout her dominions.

Her Majesty confidently commits to your wisdom and care the great interests of her empire, and devoutly prays that the blessings of Almighty God may be vouchsafed to your deliberations, and may lead you to conclusions conducive to objects of her Majesty's constant solicitude, and to the happiness and welfare of her loyal and faithful people.

The Marquis of Townsend moved, and the Earl of Portsmouth seconded, the Address in the Lords.

Mr. Dodson moved, and Mr. Buchanan seconded it, in the Commons.

No opposition was made to it.

The London subscription for the Russian railway is closed, and is reported to be very unsuccessful, although the exact amount is not published.

A young woman, named Cummings, was sadly mutilated at Millgrove, Canada, on the 14th, in a very singular manner. She was looking at the operation of a shingle machine, when the strings of her bonnet accidently became entangled in the machine. Her head was instantly drawn to the knife, which it completely scalped, cutting off both ears. She was taken up alive, but probably cannot recover.

TORONTO, May 25, 1857.

Wheat—The demand still continues brisk and larger arrivals are noticeable. The quantity brought in to-day was about 4000 bu. Transactions were effected at 8s 9d a 9s 1½d per bushel, the ruling rate being about 9s. This shows a decline of 3d per bushel on yesterday's rate.

Flour—To day's demand was hardly so buoyant as that last noted, and but little business was done in the absence of anything like a supply. We quote superfine at $6 50 a $6 75 per bl, Fancy $7 a $7 25 and Extra $7 50a $8.

Spring Wheat is in demand at 6s 8d per bushel.

Barley is much enquired for at 6s 6d a 7s per bushel, the present supply being wholly inadequate to the demand.

Rye is held at 4s per bushel.

Peas sell at 5s 6d to 6s 3d per bushel.

Oats are still but sparingly supplied and command high rates. They now bring 4s per bushel wholesale, and 4s 3d retail.

Corn is nominally quotable at 4s 3d a 4s 6d per bushel.

Potatoes offer in much better supply, but still command very high rates. In market to-day they offered at 7s 6d a 9s per bushel.

Eggs are quite plentiful and sell at 11d and 1s per dozen.

Butter—Tub offered to-day at 1s 3d per lb; for best quality.

DETROIT, 24, 1857.

Flour—There is less activity in the market to-day, with prices unchanged. The stock of first quality flour has steadily diminished since the first inst., until it is reduced to nearly nothing. It is held at $7 50 and very few transactions limited to small lots for the home trade. Red wheat flour quiet at $6 76 a $7; sales mostly at the outside figure.

Wheat—Very scarce. A small lot of white, the only lot offered, was snapped up at $1 55, which is considerably below the market. It would no doubt bring $1 65. Corn—But little in market, and generally held at 90c. Sales 350 bu. at 85c. Inquiry brisk.

Oats—Very firm at 62½c. Sales 200 bu. at our quotations.

Potatoes—Scarce, and in good request at $1 06 a $1 12½c.

Butter—Roll is in good demand at 20 at 21c; firkin is quiet at 18c.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with corruption of the blood, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infectious or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or who are travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits, will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For that debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the invalid, however weakly from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy good delightful symptoms and a return to strong health, viz: good appetite sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

Caution to the Public.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting by Lawrence; also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York on each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom County Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

MAIL CONTRACT.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the Postmaster General, and Marked "Tender for Mail Service," will be received at Toronto until 12 o'clock, noon, on Saturday the 13th June 1857 for the conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails Three times per week each way between AMHERSTBURG and RONDEAU on and from the First day July next.

The conveyance to be made in a Two Horse Buggy, Waggon or Sleigh.

The computed distance between Amherstburg and Rondeau is 68 miles.

The rate of travel to be not less than Five Miles per hour, including stoppages for all purposes.

The days and hours of Arrival and Departure to be as follows, subject to a right of the Post Master General to alter the arrangement, on notice it advisable so to do, to leave Amherstburg every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and to leave Rondeau, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, at such hours as may be required, and to proceed direct through both ways—Serving the offices at Belle Ewart, Amherstburg, Mersea, Leamington, Gosfield, Kingsville, and Colchester.

The Contract, if satisfactorily executed, will continue in force for a term not exceeding four years; the Postmaster General reserving the right to terminate the agreement at any time previous to the expiration of the four years, should the public interest require it, upon giving the contractor three months previous notice of his intention.

All expenses on this route for Tolls, Ferries &c., must be defrayed by the contractor.

Each Tender must state the price asked in words at length, and to be accompanied by the written guarantee of two responsible parties undertaking that in the event of the Tender being accepted the contract shall be duly executed, by the party tendering, for the price demanded: undertaking also to become bound with the contractor in the sum of five hundred pounds for the due performance of the service.

Blank forms of Tender may be obtained at the Post Offices Amherstburg, Chatham, Rondeau and Mersea.

WINDSOR NURSERIES.

JUST PUBLISHED, a Descriptive Catalogue of the Fruit Trees for sale at the Windsor Nurseries, containing a more accurate description of a greater variety of Fruits, than can be found in any other Catalogue issued on this continent, the whole having been compiled by the undersigned, with great care, from personal inspection of the Fruit grown on his own ground. Directions for Planting, Cultivation, Pruning, &c., will be found in the Catalogue.

Also, in Press, and will be published in a few days, a Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Tulips, Peonias, &c., &c.

Catalogues will be sent gratis, on application, (if by letter post-paid), to the undersigned, at Windsor, C. W.

The stock of Fruit Trees, more especially Apples and Pears—both Standard and Dwarf—is extremely thrifty and well grown, and such as can be procured in no other Nursery. A large portion of them are just commencing to bear, and having been twice transplanted, can be removed with perfect success.

All orders promptly attended to, the Trees carefully packed so as to carry any distance with safety, and forwarded with despatch.

As the undersigned intends discontinuing the Nursery Business, those wishing considerable lots of Trees will find it for their interest to apply early.

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighboring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virtue of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless, tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influences

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Acorn Excrescences, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald Head, Nettle Rash, Scabies (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faulty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,
Lumbago,	Sores of all kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Sprains
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,
Ringworm,	Ulcers,
Salt Rheum,	Venereal Sores,
Scurvy,	Wounds of all kinds,

* * Sold at the Manufactory of Professor Holloway, 80, Maiden Lane, New York, & 244 Strand, London, by all respectable Druggists and dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in pots, at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each pot.

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Saturday, the

6th day of May next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex; and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

'Good and Better.'

A father sat by the chimney post
On a winter's day enjoying a roast;
By his side a maiden young and fair,
A girl with wealth of golden hair;
And she teased the father, stern and cold,
With a question of duty, trite and old,
'Say, father, what shall a maiden do
When a man of merit comes to woo?
And father what of this pain in my breast?
Married or single—which is the best?

Then the sire of the maiden young and fair,
The girl with the wealth of golden hair,
He answers as ever do fathers cold,
To the question of duty, trite and old:
'She who wedds keeps single to woo;
She who weds not, doeth better.'
Then meekly answered the maiden fair,
The girl with the wealth of golden hair:
'I will keep the sense of this Holy Letter,
Content to do well without doing better.'

—ooo—

An old Love Song.

This is the birth-day of my love;
Then vanish care and sorrow:
To-day shall mirth and pleasure ring
Though grief should come to-morrow;
My love draws near with airy tread,
And glances shy and sweet:
Sing, little Birds! above her head;
Bloom, flowers! beneath her feet.
The happy earth is once a year
Dreat out in Spring's array;
But, when my lady walks abroad
With me 'tis ever May.

AFFECTING STORY.—Thrilling accounts are given to the Marysville [California] papers of the chase of two lawyers, by an enraged third party, the parient, who, as we take up the story, was following them across the Yuba river—

Augustus saw the fury depicted in the old man's face, and deeming discretion the better part of valour, made a dead halt in the road, and concluded to surrender. Maria was frantic. Leaving suddenly from her horse, and walking around through mud three feet deep, she gathered her husband by the legs and dragged him to the ground. Then grasping him tightly around the neck, she shouted to her father, who was now in speaking distance,

"You shan't part us. Right here, up to our knees in mud, we will live and die together."

The old man started back in amazement.

"Yes," muttered the half used up Augustus; "we'll die right here in the mud."

"But, Maria, my child," groaned the old man, "are you not my daughter still?"

"Yes," was the reply, "and I'm his wife, too."

"And are you married?"

"We are," exclaimed both.

The old man looked daggers for a moment, closely scrutinized the couple as they clung together in the mud, and turning his horse's head towards the city, started off, saying,

"That's all I wanted to know. You can now get out of the mud and come home!"

AN ACCOMMODATING SPIRIT.—In a certain New England parish, a difficulty arose about the location of a new meeting-house, and the church was rent with the division. The pastor at length preached a melting sermon on the subject of union, and the congregation were dissolved in tears. The next morning Deacon Jones went over early to see his opponent Deacon Shaw, to make an earnest effort for peace, and the following conversation ensued:

"Deacon Shaw, I haven't slept a wink last night—and I've come over to see if we can't have peace on this subject of the meeting-house; we must settle the difficulty.

"Well, I'm very happy to hear you talk so for to tell the truth, I always thought you were a little set in your ways."

"Not at all—and as a proof that I am not, I've come this morning on purpose to see you. Now Deacon Shaw, we must settle this difficulty, and there is but one way to do it—you must give up for I can't."

"WATCHING FOR THE COMET."—One of the night police found a man lying on his back on Fourth-street, night before last, evidently in the last stage of intoxication. He endeavored to arouse him, when the following conversation ensued:

"Hello! wake up here old fellow."

Eh, (in a drunken growl,) what ye want? (hic) can't ye let a feller be, say I" (hic.)

"Get up, I say! you've got no business here at this time of night; get up, come along."

"No business? Well, I reckoned (hic) I have. You see my boy. I'm here for (hic) scientific purposes—I'm watching for the Comet!"—Cin. Enquirer.

A NEW GENERAL.—When the account of Bonsparte's extraordinary victories in Italy first reached London, a young nobleman one day remarked that he owed most of his success to some new generals he had created. "I know of no generals he has lately created," said George Colman, "but one —General Consternation."

IRISH WIT.—An Irish recruit who heard that a corporal was about to be dismissed from his regiment remarked: "Faith, I hope it's the most troublesome one we have —Corporal Punishment."

A person being asked why he had given his daughter in marriage to a man with whom he was at enmity, answered—"I did it out of pure revenge."

Muggins says he don't believe in the appearance of spirits in this world so strongly as he does in their disappearance. He lost a gallon of brandy and two baskets of champagne on the late election.

A man being asked by his neighbor how his wife did, made this answer; "Indeed, neighbor, this case is pitiful; my wife fears that she will die, and I fear she will not—which makes a disconsolate house

Reade, the author of "Peg Woffington," describes a great actress (Mrs. Oldfield) as a creature with the tongue of an angel, the principle of a weasel, and the passion of a fish."

At an inn in Sweden there was the following inscription, in English, on the wall: "You will find at Trolba, the most excelent broad, meat, and wine provided you bring them!

"What are wages here?" asked a labourer of a boy.

"Don't know, Sir."

"What does your father get on a Saturday night.

"Get!" said the boy, "why he gets as tight as a brick."

If a young man has black eyes and a pimple on his nose, how long will it take him to win the heart of his lady fair, supposing him to be addicted to stuttering!

Hints worth Reading.

Some of the following suggestions may be a little too late, but the lateness of the season may render them appropriate even yet.

1. Clean your cellars at some odd time soon. Look into your pork and beef tubs, and see that all is right. Sort out the bad potatoes and from fruit the good. Separate the different varieties, if they have mixed in any way. Remove from your cellar all decaying matter; and as soon as the weather becomes warm enough, give the cellar a thorough airing and white-wash its walls neatly. Do not, however, remove the winter embankments, till all severe frosts have passed.

2. Select if you have not done so, the best kinds of seed for sowing and planting; use your best judgment in this matter or take the advice of some competent and disinterested person. Provide now, for all you want this spring. A little care and expense in this line, will reward you well.

3. Repair your fences, or make new ones, when needful; the first is out, and the sooner this work is done, the better. Make all your permanent fences strong and durable, this is the only mode that will pay.

4. Keep your hogs out of all fields, except those you design for their range. Be especially careful that they do not get into your clover fields; they will do harm enough there in a day, to pay for putting up a good many fences.

5. If your land is sandy, or a heavy turf, you may plow, with safety, but if it is clayey, and has been plowed recently, wait till it is thoroughly dry; plowing it while wet or damp, will make it hard the whole season.

6. Your hens are laying, you have plenty of eggs; preserve those you don't want for cooking or for setting your hens: pack them in salt, with the little ends down, or keep them immersed in highly saturated lime-water. In either of these ways, eggs may be kept for months; if not for years.

7. By the way, if you have a warm place for nests, let two or three hens sit as soon as they please. A little care will preserve the brood you let hatch, and early chickens are delicious for the table, in the fall; or the pullets, if kept, will lay eggs next summer, if well cared for.

8. You may do certain work in your garden, as soon as the ground is dry enough to work safely. Parsnips, onions and early peas may be put as soon as you please. In clay soils, we repeat, never stir the soil when damp. Currant bushes may be transplanted, or new cuttings set. Manure may be prepared, and that which is well rotted, may be spread in. Mulching may be done, when you do not wish to stir the ground for some months.

9. Do not allow hay or straw to be wasted; preserve all that is not needed, for use at some future time; it will perhaps be needed when least expected.

10. When the ground is dry enough, transplant whatever trees need to be transplanted. Do this with the hardest trees, as soon as you can. Take great care in transplanting, to tear the roots as little as possible, and to do the work well. When you finish setting out a tree, mulch the ground well, with some coarse manure: this will prevent the effects of drought. When you buy trees for transplanting, be sure to get the kinds you wish. Nurserymen sometimes make loose statements. Deal only with responsible and reliable men.

HARD OR SOFT WATER IN COOKING.—Nearly every one knows that hard water is said, in consequence of its containing a small quantity of carbonate of lime, whereas soft water is ready pure. It may not have occurred to every one that this difference often becomes an important one in the daily process of cooking. When vegetables, are boiled in hard water, a deposit of this lime is made upon the surface of the vegetables, as peas, beans, corn, &c., by which process the food is not only not so throughly cooked in a given time, but even when done. It is always harder when cooked, and less healthy. The minute deposit of lime upon the surface of such vegetables, not only injures the taste and diminishes the softness of the food, but also acts unfavourably upon the digestion—an effect important to those in health, and doubly so to invalids. This subject might be expanded at some length, but we merely suggest it, and leave it for the reader's consideration, whether a pure soft water is not preferrable to hard, for all the ordinary processes of cooking.—J. E. S.

A FRENCH AGRICULTURAL INVENTION.—At the last sitting of the congress of the learned societies of the department, M. d'Illiers, of Orleans, gave the agricultural section some interesting details respecting the coating of corn, of which he is the inventor. This system consists in enveloping the grain, by means of some glutinous substance, with manure, such as animal black. The result of the experiment made in the Sologne, on land of so worthless a description as to be let at 3f, the hectare (2½ acres) have been, he states, of the most satisfactory description. The coating is effected by means of a cylinder, invented by M. d'Illiers, and the patent was disposed of by him to Messrs. Parker and Co. of London, corn factors, for a sum of £20,000. The expense of coating amounts to about 35f. per hectolitre of corn. This system may be employed in articles of garden produce, beetroots, &c. The congress was duly thanked M. d'Illiers for his communication.—Galignani's Messenger.

REMARKABLE HORSE.—there is at the present time to be seen working at Sandbeck, on the estate of the late Earl of Scarborough, a horse of the name of Shasper who has gained a period of twenty-four years of age, and is yet capable of much work. He has the enormous distance of 140,000 miles, or above the distance of four times round the globe. The Doncaster Gazette says: "This remarkable animal has, during that time, been solely driven by James Forshew, who has been a servant on the estate upward of twenty years, and never lost a single day. Since the demise of the late Earl these two faithful servants have been separated—Forshew having been discharged. This old and valuable servant was much grieved in parting with his companion in labour."

SODA CAKE.—2½ cups of sugar, 3 eggs, 1 cup sweet milk, a piece of Butter the size of a hen's egg, 1 heaping teaspoonful of cream of tartar & of a teaspoonful of soda and a little nutmeg.

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION

AND

DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,

IN THE BEAUTIFUL

TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about one and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On Lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 32 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Mill House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now threatening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be at, or close to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points east of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark their goods in the care of Messrs SEYMOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

WABASH VALLEY,
(New Propeller.)

Which will, during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week; and having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandise, via

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over FIVE THOUSAND TONS BURTHEN, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandise for the transport of Property.

Select Poetry.

To My Sister.

BY MARIE ALLEN.

My sister dear, tho' far from thee
My thoughts will often roam
To the fair spot where thou dost dwell,
And consecrate as "home."

I think of happy hours gone by,
Of dreams too bright to last;
Of scenes by memory brought to view,
Long buried with the past.

And blended with my thoughts of home
Is gratitude to thee,
For all the loving, tender care
So often shown to me.

When cast upon the wide, wide world
An orphan, and unloved,
Thy house and heart were opened wide—
'Twas then thy care I proved.

Thy kindness unto me hath strewn
My path with thornless flowers,
And day by day they blossomed on
Amid life's light and showers.

And gratitude with memory
Doth shed a holy light
O'er all my daily thoughts of thee,
And guides my dreams by night.

Dear Sister, may thy heart be free
From sorrow and from pain;
May pleasures shed their light for thee
Until we meet again!

The Great Modern Babylon.

[From Mr. Ritchie's Book, "The Night Side of London."]

Think of what London is! At the last census there were 2,362,236 persons in it; 1,106,558 males, of whom 146,449 under 5 years of age. The unmarried males were 670,380; ditto females, 735,871; the married men were 399,098; the wives, 409,731; the widowers were 37,089, the widows, 110,076.

On the night of the census there were 28,598 husbands whose wives were not with them, and 39,321 wives mourning their absent lords.

Last year the number of children born in London was 86,833. In the same period 56,786 persons died.

The Registrar-General assumes that with the additional births, and by the fact of soldiers and sailors returning from the seat of war, and of persons engaged in peaceful pursuits settling in the capital, sustenance, clothing, and house accommodation must now be found in London for above 60,000 inhabitants more than it contained at the end of 1855.

Think of that—the population of a large city absorbed in London, and no perceptible inconvenience occasioned by it! Houses are still to let; there are still the usual tickets hung up in the windows in quiet neighborhoods, intimating that apartments furnished for the use of single gentlemen can be had within; the country still supplies the town with meat and bread, and we hear of no starvation in consequence of deficient supply.

London is the healthiest city in the world.

During the last ten years the annual deaths have been on the average 25 to 1,000 of the population; in 1856 the proportion was 22 to 1,000; yet, in spite of this, half of the deaths that happen on an average in London, between the age of 20 and 40, are from consumption and diseases of the respiratory organs.

The Registrar traces this to the state of the streets. He says: There can be no doubt that the dirty dust suspended in the air that the people of London breathe, often excites diseases of the respiratory organs. The dirt of the streets is produced and ground down by innumerable horses, omnibuses and carriages, and then beat up in fine dust, which fills the mouth and inevitably enters the air passages in large quantities. The dust is not removed every day, but, saturated with water in the great thoroughfares, sometimes ferments in damp weather; and, at other times ascends again under the heat of the sun as atmospheric dust.

"London," says Henry Mayhew, "may be safely asserted to be the most densely populated city in all the world, containing one fourth more people than Pekin, and two thirds more than Paris, more than twice as many as Constantinople, four times as many as St. Petersburg, five times as many as Vienna, or New York, or Madrid, nearly seven times as many as Berlin, eight times as many as Amsterdam, nine times as many as Rome, fifteen times as many as Copenhagen, and seventeen times as many as Stockholm."

"London," says Horace Jay, "c'est une Province convertie de maisons."

It covers an area of 122 square miles in extent, or 78,029 statute acres, and contains 327,391 houses.

Annually 4,000 new houses are in course of erection for upwards of 40,000 new comers.

The continuous line of buildings stretching from Holloway to Camberwell is said to be twelve miles long.

It is computed that if the buildings were set in a row they would reach across the whole of England and France, from York to the Pyrenees.

London has 10,500 distinct streets, squares circuses, crescents, terraces, villas, rows, buildings, places, lanes, courts, alleys, mews, yards, and rents.

The paved streets of London, according to a return published in 1856, number over 5,000, and exceed 2,000 miles in length; the cost of this paved roading was £14,000,000, and the repairs cost £1,800,000 per annum.

London contains nineteen hundred miles of gas pipes, with a capital of nearly £4,000,000 spent in the preparation of gas.

The cost of gas lighting is half a million. It has 300,000 lights, and 13,000,000 cubic feet of gas are burned every night.

Last year along these streets the enormous quantity of upwards of 80,000,000 of gallons of water rushed for the supply of the inhabitants, being nearly double what it was in 1845.

Mr. Mayhew says: if the entire people of the capital were to be drawn up in marching order, two and two, the length of the great army of London would be no less than six hundred and seventy miles, and, supposing them to move at the rate of three miles an hour, it would require more than nine days and nights for the average population to pass by.

To accommodate this crowd, 125,000 vehicles pass through the thoroughfares in the course of 12 hours; 3,000 cabs, 1,000 omnibuses, 10,000 private job carriages and carts ply daily in the streets; 3,000 conveyances enter the metropolis daily from the surrounding country. Speaking generally, Tennyson tells us:

"Every minute dies a man,
Every minute one is born."

In London, Mr. Mayhew calculates, 169 people die daily, and a babe is born every five minutes. The number of persons, says the Registrar General, who died in 1856, in 116 public institutions, such as work-houses and hospitals, was 10,381.

It is really shocking to think, and a deep stigma on the people or on the artificial arrangements of society, by which so much poverty is perpetuated, that nearly one person out of five, who died last year, closed his days under a roof provided by law or public charity. It is calculated 500 people are drowned in the Thames every year. In the first week of the present year there were five deaths from intemperance alone. How much wretchedness lies in these two facts—for the deaths from actual intemperance bear but a small proportion to the deaths induced by the immediate use of intoxicating liquors; and of the 500 drowned, by far the larger class, we have every reason to believe, are of the number of whom Hood wrote:

"Mad with life's history,
Glad to death's mystery
Swift to be hurried,
Anywhere, anywhere,
Out of the world!"

According to the last reports, there were in London 143,000 vagrants admitted in one year into the casual wards of the workhouses.

Here we have always in our midst 107 burglars, 100 house breakers, 38 highway robbers, 773 pickpockets, 3,659 sneaksmen or common thieves, 11 horse stealers, 141 dog-stealers, 3 forgers, 28 coiners, 317 utterers of base coin, 141 swindlers, 182 cheats, 348 receivers of stolen goods, 2,768 habitual rioters, 1,205 vagrants, 50 begging-letter writers, 80 bearers of begging-letters, 6,371 prostitutes, besides 470 not otherwise described, making altogether a total of 16,000 criminals known to the police.

Those persons are known to make away with £42,000 per annum; the prison population at any particular time is 6,000, costing for the year £170,000. Our juvenile thieves cost us £200 a piece.

Mr. Timbs calculates the number of professional beggars in London at 35,000, two-thirds of whom are Irish. Thirty thousand men, women and children are employed in costermonger trade; besides, we have, according to Mr. Mayhew, 2,000 street sellers of green stuff, 4,000 street sellers of eatables and drinkables, 1,000 street sellers of stationery, 4000 street sellers of other articles, whose receipts are three millions sterling, and whose income may be put down at one million.

Let us extend our survey, and we shall not wonder that the public houses, and the gin-palaces, and the casines, and the theatres, and the penny gaffs, and the lowest and vilest places of resort in London are full. In Spitalfields there are 70,000 weavers, with but 10,000 work; there are 22,470 tailors, 30,805 shoemakers; 43,928 milliners; 21,210 seamstresses; 1,769 bonnet-makers, and 1,277 cap-makers.

What hard, wretched work is theirs!

There are two worlds in London, with a gulf between—the rich and the poor. We have glanced at the latter; for the sake of contrast, let us look at the former. Emerson says the wealth of London determines prices all over the globe. In 1847 the money coined in the Mint was £5,158,440 in gold, £125,730 in silver, and £9,960 in copper.

The business of the Bank of England is conducted by about 800 clerks, whose salaries amount to about £100,000. The Bank in 1850 had about twenty millions of bank-notes in circulation. In the same year there were about five millions deposited in the savings banks of the metropolis.

The gross customs revenue of the port of London in 1849 was £11,070,176; sixty-five millions is the estimate formed by Mr. McCulloch of the total value of produce conveyed into and from London. The gross rental, as assessed by the property and income tax, is twelve and a half millions.

The gross property is insured at £160,000,000 and only two-fifths of the houses are insured. The amount of capital at the command of the entire London Bankers may be estimated at 64 millions; the insurance companies have always 10 millions of deposits ready for investment; 73 millions are employed in discounts. In 1841, the transactions of one London house alone amounted to 30 millions. In 1839 the payments made in the clearing-house were 954 millions—an enormous sum, which will appear still greater when we remember that all sums under £100 are omitted from this statement. All this business cannot be carried on without considerable amount of eating and drinking. The population consumes annually 277,000 bullocks, 30,000 calves, 1,480,000 sheep, 34,000 pigs, 1,600,000 quarters of wheat, 310,460,000 pounds of potatoes, 89,672,000 cabbages. Of fish the returns are almost incredible. Besides, it eats 2,742,000 fowls, 1,281,000 game, exclusive of those brought from the different parts of the United Kingdom; from 70 to 75 millions of eggs are annually imported into London from France and other countries. About 13,000 cows are kept in the city and its environs for the supply of milk and cream; and if we add to their value that of the cheese and butter, and milk brought from the country into the city, the expenditure for produce daily must be enormous. Then London consumes 65,000 pipes of wine, 2,000,000 gallons of spirit, 42,200,000 gallons of porter and ale, and burns 3,000,000 tons of coals; and I have seen it estimated that one-fourth of the commerce of the nation is carried on in its port.

On boxing night it was estimated that 60,000 persons visited the various theatres and places of amusement in London.

In London in 1853, according to Sir R. Mayne there were 3,613 beer-shops, 5,279 public houses, and 13 wine-rooms.

And now, to guard all this wealth, to preserve all this mass of industry honest, and to keep down all this crime, what have we? 6, 397 police, costing £373,963; 13 police courts, costing 45,050; and about a dozen criminal prisons, 60 union relieving-officers, 316 officers of local boards, and 1,256 other local officers.

We have 35 weekly magazines, 9 daily newspapers, 3 evening, and 72 weekly ones. Independently of the mechanicks' institutions, colleges, and endowed schools, we have 14,000 children of both sexes clothed and educated gratis, in the National and British and foreign schools in all parts of London, and Sunday schools.

The more direct religious agency may be estimated as follows: In the "Hand-book to Places of Worship," published by Low in 1851, there is a list of 371 churches and chapels in connection with the Establishment; the number of church sittings according to Mr. Mann, is 400,184; the Independents have about 140 places of worship, and 100,436 sitting-; the Baptists, 130 chapels, and accommodation for 54,234; the Methodists, 154 chapels, 60,266 sittings; the Presbyterians, 23 chapels and 18,211 sittings; the Unitarians, 9 chapels and about 3,300 sittings; the Roman Catholics, 35 chapels and 35,994 sittings; 4 Quaker chapels, with sittings for 3,151; the Moravians have two chapels, with 1,100 sittings; the Jews have 11 synagogues and 3,692 sittings. There are 94 chapels belonging to the New Church, the Plymouth Brethren, the Irvingites, the Latter-day Saints, Sandemanians, Lutherans, French Protestants, Greeks, Germans, Italians, which chapels have sittings for 18,233.

We thus get 691,723 attendants on Divine exercises.

A Costly Kiss.

A PROUD MAN'S REVENGE.—The Count M——was one of the most accomplished and handsome young men in Vienna.—What is more, he was passionately in love with a girl of almost peerless beauty. She was the daughter of a man of great rank and influence at Court; and on these considerations, as well as regard to her charms, she was followed by a multitude of suitors. She was lively and amiable, and treated them all with an affability which still kept them in the train, although it was generally known that she had avowed a predilection for Count M——, and that preparations were making for their nuptials. The Count was of a refined mind and delicate sensibility. He loved her for herself alone—for the virtues he believed dwelt in her beautiful form; and like a lover of such perfections, he never sprouched her without timidity and when he touched her a fire shot through his veins that warned him not to invade the vermillion sanctuary of her lips. Such were wore his feelings, when one night at his intended father in law's, a party of young people were met to celebrate a certain festival. Several of the young lady's rejected suitors were present. Forfeits was one of the pastimes, and all went on with the greatest merriment till the Count was commanded by some witty mademoiselle to redeem his glove by saluting the cheek of his intended bride. The Count blushed, trembled, advanced to his mistress, retreated, advanced again—and at last, with a tremor that shook every fibre in his frame and with a modest grace he put the soft ringlet which played upon her cheek to his lips, and retired to demand his redeemed pledge in evident confusion. His mistress gaily smiled, and the play went on. One of her rejected suitors, light who was of a merry, unthinking disposition, was adjudged by the same indiscreet crier of the forfeits—"as his last treat before he was hanged himself," she said—to snatch a kiss from the lips of the object of his recent vows:—

"Lips whose broken sighs such fragrance fling,
As love had fanned them freshly with his wing!"

A lively contest ensued between the lady and the gentleman, lasting for a minute; but the lady yielded, though in the midst of a convulsive laugh, and the Count had the mortification, the agony, to see the lips, which his passionate and delicate love would not allow him to touch, kissed with roughness and repetition by another man, and one whom he despised. Without a word, he rose from his chair, left the room, and the house; and by that good-natured kiss, the fair beast of Vienna lost her husband and her lover. The Count never saw her more.

Miscellany.

The Great Eastern steamer, which is fitted to accommodate 4,000 passengers; or, if employed in the transport of troops, to carry 10,000 men, will be ready for launching early in August next, and able to take her first trial trip to America and back about the middle of that month. She is expected to realise a speed of at least twenty mile an hour, or to accomplish the voyage from England to Australia (between which countries she is to run) in thirty days. Reckoning the cost at so much per ton it is said to be one of the cheapest vessels yet constructed.

Two young men, named Pendleton and Drain, a short time since got into a dispute, in Winston, Maryland, which resulted in a challenge and an agreement to fight with Bowie knives, the parties to be nailed down by their pantaloons to a heavy plank with-in arms length of each other. This situated, they commenced the horrid butchery, and kept it up until Drain was mortally wounded, and Pendleton also so terribly injured that it is doubtful if he will recover.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Chronic Dyspepsia Cured.—Among the triumphs of this wonderful medicine over confirmed diseases of the stomach and epigastrium, the following is not the least remarkable. Edward Stillman, aged 51, residing at Hagerstown, Md., had been for eleven years a sufferer from indigestion and its painful concomitants. His appetite was irregular, his frame emaciated, his skin of a livid unhealthy hue, and he had a constant feeling of constriction at the pit of the stomach, as if a cord were being drawn tightly around it. He was continually in a state of great mental as well as bodily distress, and, to use his own expression, "life had become irksome to him." In the month of December last he commenced taking Holloway's PILLS. Within three weeks the thereafter all above symptoms had vanished. No relapse has since occurred, and he is now as robust and active as any man of his years in all Maryland. For disorder of the stomach, liver and bowels, the Pills are the only reliable remedy in existence.

LOW NECKED DRESSES.—In the early days of Pennsylvania there was a law which stated as follows:

"That if any white female of ten years or upward, would appear in any public street, lane, highway, church, court house, tavern, ball room, theatre, or any other place of public resort, with naked shoulders, (i. e., low necked dresses) being able to purchase necessary clothing, shall forfeit and pay a fine not less than one, nor more than two hundred dollars." The closing paragraph of the law, however permitted women of questionable character to bare their shoulders as a badge of distinction between the chaste and unchaste.

DISCOVERY FOR THE NERVES.—Persons, especially fine ladies who, in consequence of inactive or sedentary habits, the too frequent use of close carriages, and an over-refined and luxurious regimen, are afflicted with the distressing disorder termed Nervousness, will find their complaint effectually cured by six weeks' service at home as kitchen or chamber-maid.

A little child of Eben Payne, of Pawtucket, Mass., having swallowed half a tea spoonful of opium mixture from its mother's hand, the semblance of death ensued. The surface of the body became livid and cold; the pulse was gone and the breathing ceased. For eight hours unceasing efforts were made to restore life by means of the application of electricity and artificial respiration, and success finally ensued. The child is now as well as ever.

SELF-IMPROVEMENT.—Propose to yourself an object that is noble; pursue it from motives that are high. Let what is best in you take the mastery. You shall be ranked with the wise and good long before you are fully either. And as you go on in the course of improvement, the idea of your better self shall become more definite, and the life of this idea of wisdom and goodness shall be dearer and stronger in you. You shall be named after the idea of your life; you are wise, for you are becoming so. In all right courses of life, a man resolutely desirous of becoming a wiser, a better informed, better disciplined, more useful individual, will find his thoughts, both of the end and the way, get clearer as he proceeds in his work. He sees more fully and more brightly what it is he wants; he sees more fully the means for its attainment. And with better prospect both of the end and the way, there comes increased motive for the self-improving effort of the journey.—Lynch.

Washington seldom indulged in a joke or a sarcasm, but when he did he always made a decided hit. During the debate on the establishment of the Federal army, a member of Congress offered a resolution limiting it to 3000 men, to which Washington suggested an amendment, providing that "no enemy should ever invade the country with more than 2000 soldiers." The laughter which ensued smothered the resolution.

Provincial Parliament,

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

TUESDAY, May 26, 1857.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (from Legislative Assembly) to amend the Act authorizing the formation of Joint Stock Companies for construction of roads in Lower Canada. (Hon. Mr. Moore.)

Hon. Mr. Moore moved that the rule be discharged and taken first order of the day to-morrow.—Carried.

Bill to incorporate the village of Elora. Hon. Mr. Ferguson; read, and referred to a select Committee, composed of the Honourables Messrs. Hamilton, Ferrier, and the mover.

Bill to provide for the separation for judicial purposes of Cities and Counties in Upper Canada. (Hon. Mr. Simpson.)

Hon. Mr. Simpson explained its provisions and the reasons which have called for its introduction; after which he proposed its second reading, and stated that it was his intention to refer the Bill to a Select Committee of hon. gentlemen better acquainted with the subject than himself.

Hon. Col. Prince said he should like to be informed what necessity there was for the Bill? What city or county had petitioned for the Bill? A Bill which would entail the expense of the erection of new Court Houses, Gaols and other public buildings, besides throwing into the hands of the Government a large amount of patronage; and this latter he (Col. Prince) was especially opposed to, considering that they had far too much in their hands already. If it was to be laid down as a rule that because the population of cities had risen to twenty or twenty-five thousand they were to be separated from their counties, such rule would have been surely taken up in the old country, by such places as Gloucester, Bristol, &c., which with its county towns yet they had not desired such a change, when their population had increased: and why should the principle be sought to be established in this young colony? The fact was, there was a constant desire amongst her representatives to inflict upon her a superabundance of legislation, to constantly alter that which is fixed, and to tinker what it was out of their power to amend. He deprecated such a course, and it would be most unwise to break up the established institutions of this country merely for the sake of creating additional patronage. He would turn to his hon. friend on the right (Dr. Widmer) and to those other hon. gentlemen on the other hand, all old residents of Toronto, and ask them to state if they desired, or if they thought such a measure was generally desired by the inhabitants? It would be time enough to disturb these old institutions, when the population amounted to one hundred thousand. If the present business is too extensive other help could be called in, but those institutions of the city had worked well—she was a respectable city—and he felt friendly to her inhabitants. He liked them because the whole they were truly British; and he was farther attached to her from the manner in which her Law business was conducted; he would therefore move, that the Bill be not now read a second time, but that it be read that day six months.

Hon. Mr. De Blaquiere in seconding the amendment said he had the honour of presenting on Friday last, a petition from the citizens of Toronto against the Bill, and which petition he would send to the hon. friend. The hon. gentleman then contrasted the inefficient working of our Courts of Law when he first arrived in this Province, especially the arbitrary Courts of Requests, with the efficient working of our County Courts, which with the other municipal institutions, had been found to work well, and have gradually been improving in their practice; and such being the case it would be absurd to interfere with them, and the more especially as the measure had not been asked for. If such institution were to be respected it was requisite that they should preside over them who would command respect; and it was too often the case that such new appointments as were proposed by this Bill, were often made of parties who could not properly construe Acts of Parliament. The bother plan would be, if there were to be great a pressure of business, and detention of juries at the present Courts, to have assistant judges appointed, than to have the counties divided from the cities. He considered that the measure was quite uncalled for, and as such he should oppose it. If however, the House should think fit to pass the measure, he trusted that the Mayor and corporation of Toronto might be heard at the Bar of that House upon the measure.

Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet suggested that the Bill ought to be referred to a Select Committee, so that it could be matured Bill amended. He certainly could not agree to vote for three month's hoist.

Hon. Col. Prince expressed himself surprised that the President of the Council had not adduced some argument in support of the Bill, and to justify its being so hurried through the House at this late period of the session. He (Col. Prince) objected to the system which obtained, that after bills had been a considerable time before the other house, allowing ample time for the discussion of the principles embraced, they were hurried forward in this House as though hon. members could understand law by the bushel. It appeared a matter of mystery, that a Bill of such magnitude, and affecting all the cities and counties of Upper Canada, should be brought up, and so hurried through without time for consideration or reflection. He (Col. Prince) did not mean to set up his own opinion as infallible, far from it, nor would he desire to remain obdurate in enforcing a vote upon his amendment, but he should have preferred hearing some arguments from hon. gentlemen that would have justified him in withdrawing that amendment. He certainly did think that it was due to the House that some little more time should have been afforded, and that it was also due to the cities and municipalities affected, and that some little time should have been afforded them to make known by petition what their views were upon the subject.

Hon. Mr. Morris trusted that his hon. friend would consent to withdraw his amendment, when he was informed that this Bill had been petitioned for by the united counties of York and Peel, and when he found that the cost of those counties by the present system was £3,300 per annum, whilst all the city would agree to pay was £900 per annum, while the prisoners sent to Toronto gaol from the counties bore no proportion to those that were committed from the city. They stood thus—county prisoners, 2,906; city 42,266. Now he (Mr Morris) would ask hon. gentlemen if they did not think that the city should pay a fairer proportion of the expenses; he trusted he had said sufficient to induce his hon. friend to withdraw his amendment.

Hon. Mr. Ross condemned the Bill for pressing to be a general measure, and it was thus smuggled through Parliament without any petitions having been sent from the Municipality in its favour, or time afforded for sending in petitions against the principles of the bill. In fact, as had been truthfully remarked, it was merely a Bill to suit the views of some parties of the United Counties of York and Peel. If the Bill was to be confined to those Counties, he had no objection to its going to a second reading, but he should decidedly oppose the introduction of a Bill as a general measure, upon the bare evidence adduced from a particular case.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson was opposed to the Bill, which he said had come down upon the attention of the House like a thunderbolt. Such a measure was one of great and vital importance, and should be well considered before it was allowed to pass.—He had no objection to the second reading, with the understanding that both sides consented to the change contemplated.

Hon. Mr. Ferrier took a similar view, and suggested that the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee.

Hon. Mr. Simpson could not see why the inhabitants of York and Peel should be obliged to pay so large an amount of the expenses in comparison to the cases they had before the courts, and one part above all others ought to be weighed in favour of the Bill, that the courts have sometimes sat for as long as thirty to forty days, and he trusted the House would pass the Bill.

Hon. Mr. Patton said that after listening attentively to all the arguments used by hon. gentlemen in support of this Bill, he was more confirmed in urging upon his hon. friend not to withdraw his amendment. One very objectionable feature of the Bill was, that it did not provide for the conducting of the business of the counties, otherwise than in the city of Toronto, so that the very argument of his hon. friend (Simpson) quite fell to the ground. The Bill professed to be a general measure applicable to the whole Province, but it must be borne in mind, that there was no other city that, as to population, could come under the provisions of the Bill, and he had not learned that this Act had been petitioned for, and before passing such a general measure, it should be shown before that House, that the Bill was required, and also that it had been petioned for.

Hon. Hermanus Smith said he had presented a petition from the county of Wentworth, praying to be separated from the city of Hamilton, which only contributed £300 for the use of their county buildings. He had been away some days, and had not learned the provisions of the Bill, but would vote for its second reading.

Hon. Mr. Burwell would not perceive any great inconvenience which the counties were put to in coming to Toronto to try their causes. The proposed change would inflict a deep injury upon Toronto, but a point of greater importance than all was that it was too late in the session to pass a Bill of such magnitude.

Hon. Mr. Simpson remarked that Toronto had not contributed to half the expense of the erection of the public buildings.

Hon. Mr. Dorion regretted the hon. gentleman that he was labouring under a mistake. The buildings in question were erected when the whole were embraced in the "Home District," and the whole of the inhabitants were taxed for the erection. His hon. friend had another building in view.

Hon. Col. Prince urged upon his hon. friend the necessity of allowing the Bill to stand over until next session.

Hon. Mr. Simpson could not consent.

The Speaker then put the amendment, which was carried upon the following division:—

Contents.—Honbls. Messrs. DeBlaquiere Ferguson, Hamilton, Knowlton, Walker, Widmer, Boulton, Laterriere, Bourret, DeBeaujeau, Panet, Goodhue, Prince, Mason, Gordon, Moore, Mills, Ross, and Murney,—19.

Non-Contents.—Honbls. Messrs. Vankoughnet, Seymour, Duchesnay, Dr. Smith, Armstrong, Hollis Smith, Morris, Simpson, and Ferrie,—9

Hon. Mr. Murney again moved the second reading of the Bill for the Incorporation of the Village of Windsor.

The Hon. Col. Prince agreed to the motion, and told the House that he never intended to offer any objection to the Bill, but that he wished to arrest its progress for two or three days in order to obtain an object he had in view which had been accomplished. He should now give his cordial support to the Bill, and the object he wished for, namely, the incorporation of Sandwich (which had been unnecessarily and improperly opposed,) he desired Windsor to be also incorporated because the interests of Windsor required it, and because all factious opposition to Sandwich had been withdrawn. In fact he had never really intended to oppose the Bill, and, as he said before, would give it his best support. The hon. and gallant Colonel during the remarks he made, paid a very high compliment to the honour, skill, and enterprise of the Chief Magistrate of Windsor (Mr. Samuel Smith McDonnell, as we have since learned,) for his conduct as such, and to whom Windsor is mainly indebted for her prosperity and almost unexampled progress of late years.

Bill for establishing Prisons for young offenders.—Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet. Read and referred to Committee of the Whole to-morrow.

Bill to incorporate the Village of New Hamburgh.—Hon. Mr. Ferrier. Read, and referred to a select Committee, composed of Honbls. Messrs. Ferguson, Morris and the mover.

Bill to remedy abuses prejudicial to Agriculture. Hon. Mr. Armstrong. Bill read, referred to a Select Committee, Hon. Messrs. Duchesnay, Moore, Knowlton, Masson and Armstrong.

On Tuesday, the foundation stone of the New Anglican Cathedral, Montreal, was laid with impressive ceremonies, on the site, at the corner of St. Catharine Street and Union Avenue. The bishop of Montreal preached the sermon on the occasion.

SANDWICH, JUNE 4, 1857.

The subject of drainage is one, in which the inhabitants of the County of Essex are deeply interested, and it is therefore with great pleasure, that we now give insertion to a communication, from Mr. McClary, which is designed to give information upon the subject. Mr. McClary has, we are led to believe, taken some pains, to look into and study the requirement of this County in this respect, and from the very practical manner in which he has handled the subject, entitles his communication to some degree of respect. All that he states, in regard to the advantages which a thorough system of drainage would produce, any person at all acquainted with the County, will at once see, are not in the least overdrawn, and would be realized, could so happy an object be accomplished, of which he speaks. It is now time, that the different municipalities should take some steps in furtherence of this object, by petitioning the Legislature to amend the Municipal Law, so as to give to township councils the power, to raise by assesment, on particular lots, that will be most benefitted by the drainage, a sum for opening ditches of sufficient capacity to carry off the body of surface water, which lies upon the greater portion of the land in this county in the Spring and Fall, which is found to be a great detriment to the farmer, in carrying on the cultivation of the soil, and has been a source of great loss to many.

It is utterly impossible, in nine settlements such as we have in Essex, for individual farmers to drain his land, without having tap drains, into which he can convey, by side ditches the surface water. They must then look to the municipalities for assistance, and we cannot for a moment suppose that in this age of progress, they will be found to lack that spirit of improvement, which should dictate at once the propriety of taking immediate steps, to accomplish so desirable an object.

We therefore hope that no time will be lost in taking measures for advancing so important a public benefit, and upon the Reeves in particular, we impress the necessity of their entering into the matter, with spirit and energy.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf.

Sir,—

In the summer of 1852 I was employed to inspect a large quantity of Crown Lands, in the townships of East and West Tilbury, Romney and some other townships in the Counties of Kent and Essex.

As I was at that time over the greater part of those counties, I had an opportunity of ascertaining the general character of the land, the timber, soil and the general features of the country.

The land in those counties, in most of the Townships that I visited is very level and flat, being in a great measure, destitute of sufficient natural water courses, to carry off the surface water. It therefore lies upon the land, in most places, until it is absorbed by the heat of the sun.

It must therefore be obvious to every one, that in order to make those lands, what will render them productive and fit for desirable homes; that which nature has not done in furnishing natural drains, must be furnished or supplied by the skill and ingenuity of man.

I would therefore suggest, that in order to make the land generally valuable and productive, and such as contributes to make happy homes, there must be thorough system of drainage, adopted and efficiently carried out in those counties, in the townships were the land is wet, as the land in many places is very level and flat; and in order to drain it thoroughly, the drains must be cut a long distance. I do not think that those lands will be drained by the individual settlers.

I would therefore suggest to the municipalities or townships in those counties, the propriety of their undertaking the drainage of all those parts, or portions of the town hips, that may require drainage.

The main drains ought to be so laid out, that they could be sunk deep, and made wide, so as to serve the purpose of large creeks, in the discharge of the surface water. The small drains should be so located as to discharge their water into the main drains.

The position or locality of the main drains should be determined by running levels, accurately over the country, to ascertain where there is the greatest facility for them; taking into account or consideration, the cost of making, the fall to be had, and the convenience to be afforded to the landed proprietors.

The cost or expense of such drainage, to be paid by the proprietors of the land benefitted by the drainage, by a special rate to be levied on the lands, either equally or otherwise, as the municipality of any County or township may deem just.

The present Municipal Act, requires to be amended, so that a special rate may be imposed upon the land benefitted by drainage. The drainage to be proceeded with, either with or without the consent of the proprietors of the land of any neighborhood or locality, if the municipality are of the opinion that the drainage of certain lands or marsh, is for the general benefit, of that section or part of the township.

In conclusion, I would say that in my opinion a thorough system of drainage, adopted and efficiently carried out in those counties, would be of incalculable advantage. The land would become the most productive in the Province, and the ague and fever in a great measure disappear. There would therefore be a change for the better, and the inhabitants would not be inundated with water in the Spring and Autumn as heretofore, thus deterring many good farmers from settling in those townships. Without a system of drainage, those counties or townships will only progress very slowly, and the wet seasons will prevent the growing of good or abundant crops, and the farmers will be subject to uncertainties, which would be removed by or prevented by the thorough drainage of the land, which would very much improve or modify the climate, so that the crops are less liable to be injured by early frosts,

In order to carry out a system of drainage, on a large scale, a good deal of means or money must be raised, which could be met by the issue of debentures on Twenty years. The assesment for said drainage would then only be one twentieth part of the principal, with the interest, which would be more than repaid by the great increase in the crops, caused by the drainage.

It therefore seems to me that all in those townships or counties owning lands, in localities requiring drainage, should heartily co-operate in such a desirable undertaking or work, in fact it is indispensable for the effectual settlement of the wet townships, and for the general benefit of all. Therefore all that are interested should give the project a careful investigation or consideration and I fancy or think that all upon mature reflection, will feel inclined to co-operate in such a desirable work, which, if efficiently carried out, will so much benefit those resiling in the wet townships.

Yours truly,
WM. McCLARY.

London, May 30, 1857.

Sandwich has now become incorporated as a town, the bill for that purpose having passed both branches of the Legislature, after receiving more than an ordinary share of opposition; but thanks to the perseverance of some of our townsmen the difficulties have been overcome, and we are now placed in a position to manage our own affairs, without the dead weight of the township being a continual drag upon our resources.

Our position at present is a good one, and with proper management may be greatly improved. No town possesses more advantages than Sandwich, as regards a healthy and delightful situation, and being at all seasons of the year, from the nature of the soil clean and dry, is a most desirable residence. The frontage upon the Detroit River is the best upon the whole frontier for the erection of factories, and no place can be better adapted for them than Sandwich. There is no doubt, that so soon as the money market becomes easier, there will be many manufacturing establishments erected within our limits, with a few such and the introduction of a little capital we have no fear at all but that Sandwich will rival any town in Upper Canada.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf.

Dear Sir,

You will greatly oblige a friend by inserting the following:—

Noticing a communication in the Windsor Herald of the 29th ultimo, signed by "One of them," in which he attempts to stamp a club, called by him "The Sandwich Club," with Cowardice and crown himself with Victory; I deem it my duty as one of the old St. Patrick's Club, to make a few remarks in order to clear away the mystery, which seems to hang around the minds of the members of the self styled Windsor Victoria and Victorious club.

In the first place let me inform the Wind sor Victoria or rather Victorious Club (for I should be very sorry indeed to rob them of their very facetiously assumed title) that there exists no organized club whatever in Town, nor has there been any since the last contest, in which they were no doubt, very disagreeably defeated, or I may even say, there has hardly been one single game played since that time.

In conclusion let me remark, that it seems very difficult to tell, from what club the "taunting conduct and insolent remarks" could possibly proceed, or to whom the challenge was sent, as there existed no club in Town at the time; therefore I think Mr. Editor, that those statements were altogether unfounded and void of truth; and let me further state, that steps are being taken for organizing of a new club, which, if carried out, we shall be pleased to have a trial of their skill, and then if they fairly eclipse us, they may then use the title of "Victorious," which they have so very hurriedly laid claim to; let me also remind them of the old saying "self praise is no recommendation."

Excuse me for occupying so much of your valuable space.

I am,
Yours, &c.,
ONE OF THE OLD CLUB.

In last weeks paper, we omitted to notice the very creditable appearance, made by the Essex Volunteer Cavalry, when they turned out to drill, on the Queen's Birth Day in Kingsville, the troop mustered in full force and looked admirably.

Since the last time that they turned out, they have been provided with Swords and Revolvers which add materially to their soldier like appearance and the manner in which they have improved in their drill, is quite creditable and would do credit to troops that had been much longer in the service. The County of Essex have every reason to feel proud of having so fine and efficient a troop of cavalry.

We perceive by the Globe and Colonist that a number of petitions have been sent to Parliament, praying that Mr. Rankin be expelled the House, in consequence of the part he took in connection with the Southern Railway. We are unable this week, from the lateness of the hour to enter upon the subject, but will in our next.

Shocking Accident.

Steamer Inkerman blown up: 21 persons on board. Eight persons killed. Four more not expected to recover. Total wreck of the Steamer.

From the Toronto Globe we learn that, about half past three o'clock yesterday afternoon, the city was alarmed by the loud report of an explosion on the bay, and the intelligence that the boiler of the steamer Inkerman had exploded, and that many lives were lost. Proceeding to the scene of the disaster, we found the ill-fated craft lying about a hundred yards from the end of Upton & Browne's wharf, sunk to her guards, with the whole after-part blown away, and the forward portions wrecked and broken in a most extraordinary manner. The engine and boiler were gone, the smoke pipe lay among the wreck, the foremast, wheelhouse, and the forward promenade deck alone remained of all the upper works, and the planking of the bows was torn away from the stem. A great iron cable, which formed a portion of the cargo, had been blown high into the air, and in falling had caught on the fore-topmast, and hung there a monument of the force of the explosion. The Inkerman had been discharging her cargo of oats, at Upton & Browne's wharf during the day, and having some freight on board for St. Catherines steamer was got up, and all was made ready for departure for that place early in the afternoon. From some cause or other, a delay took place in starting, and it was observed by more than one bystander on the wharf, that she had been "blowing off" for half an hour, and that the steam was particularly dry, indicating, a want of water in the boiler. On first starting the engine was backed, a motion which does not work the pumps, but when it began to go forward, it is supposed that the pumps threw in a quantity of water, which falling on the overheated boiler, caused an instantaneous explosion. This is the general opinion of the cause of the accident among steamboat men, but it is only fair to add, that the engineers, who are saved, deny that there was any want of water. It will remain for the coroner's jury to give a decision upon the point.

The shock was tremendous, having the effect of an earthquake on the firmest buildings on the shore. The people on the wharf saw a column rising from the ill-fated boat, which broke and fell in scattered fragments over the surrounding waters. Many of the crew were thus thrown into the air, and yet, wonderful to say, escaped almost uninjured. The steward of the boat, Bryan O'Donnell, was lying reading in his berth and knew nothing of the explosion till struggling in the water. The Captain (McBrayon) was standing on the promenade deck, and was thrown six or seven feet into the air; in falling his foot struck a projection, and his leg was broken above the ankle.

The Great Eastern Steamship—one of the Wonders of the age.

The London Morning Journal furnishes the following description of the enormous vessel, The Eastern," intended for the Australian trade:—

She will carry 12,000 tons of coal, 8,000 tons of merchandize, and 4,000 passengers. The object of building so large vessel is the economy that will be effected by being able to stow sufficient coals to carry her entirely round the world. She will save about £9,000 per voyage to Australia in this item, by carrying sufficient to take her there and back, instead of having to coal at Australia. Owing to her length, she will not pitch, and will roll less than any ship that ever swam. She will be the strongest ship in existence, being built upon the principle of a hollow iron beam.

There are ten bulkhead or water-tight compartments; and there are longitudinal compartments, also water-tight. She is a double ship complete and perfect, the interual hull being supported by boiler plate stays three feet deep, and about the same distance apart, and rivetted with angle iron joints to the external hull, thus forming a cellular piece of work, similar to the top or roof of the Menai Bridge, and as strong as iron. This extends from the bottom of the ship, 30 feet up each side, until the first deck is reached. The lower decks serve as bridges or stays; and the main decks is similar to the hull—cellular in construction—being two parts braced together, making a fabric of immence strength. Were two of her water-tight compartments filled with water she would hardly be inconvenienced.

This noble vessel is 600 feet long, 83 feet broad, and 58 feet deep from her deck to the floor of her hull. Her tonnage 22,500 tons. She will be propelled by two paddles and a screw. The paddle wheels are 55 feet in diameter, and the screw is 24 feet in diameter. The four engines to propell the paddle wheels are equal to 1,350 horse power, and the four engines to propell the screw are equal to 1,7000 horse power. She will have five funnels connected to ten boilers, and six masts, which will carry acres of canvas.

Four of her masts will be of iron—the two next the stern and compass to the ship will be of wood. Her crew will consist of 500 seamen. How many boats she will have we cannot say; but she will have abaft her paddle box, on each side, a screw steamer 190 feet long. The whole ship will be lighted with gas. Her speed will be 15 knots, equal to 17½ miles per hour; and she will go to Port Philip in 66 days.

The vessel rests on two large cradles of wood, and will glide into the water sideways. She will be launched at high water, and will draw when light, 16 feet; when laden 36 feet. She will be launched in August. Although this noble monument of human skill was built for the requirement of commerce and peace, she might prove if need be, a powerful engine of war.

Her immense capacity (22,000 tons,) her own weight (12,000 tons,) driven at the rate of nearly 20 miles an hour (the speed of a railway train,) her bows as sharp as a knife, would cut through the most formidable war ship afloat, if run into her. She could not be caught and run down any ship, and biding her time, could demolish a fleet.

Ecclesiastical Tyranny.

The Correspondent of the Boston Traveller, writing from St. John's, C. E., says:—

Our naturally peaceful community is now in a state of great excitement, caused by the excommunication of Reverend Father C. Chiniquy from the pale of the Roman Catholic Church by the Bishops of Chicago, Montreal and St. Hyacinthe, for having refused to obey the orders of those Bishops. Father Chiniquy has always been favorably known in Canada as the great Apostle of Temperance; and like the late Father Matthew, he has been instrumental in the good accomplished many thousands of his fellow countrymen from the vice of intemperance. His appeals to the people in Canada, on the subject of temperance, were always eloquently and forcibly delivered to great crowds, and were followed by with unparalleled success. In the month of September, 1851, he left Canada for St. Anne, Kangaroo co., in the State of Illinois.

His object in removing there was to favor and assist the tide of immigration in that direction, and he succeeded in establishing at St. Anne, not far from Chicago, a thriving village of about 5,000 inhabitants, all French Canadians. His, with his own money, built there a church, a convent, an academy, and various other public institutions. Shortly afterwards he received a visit from the Bishop, (O'Regan of Chicago,) who requested him to give up his rights as proprietor of these various buildings to him, as being his superior in religious matters. Father Chiniquy refused to obey Bishop O'Regan's orders and on account of that pretended disobedience to his ecclesiastical superior, he was excommunicated by Bishop O'Regan, and declared to be eternally damned. The 5,000 French Canadians who had emigrated to the State of Illinois, because partizans of Father Chiniquy, and strongly adhered to him as their friend and pastor.

In the meantime, the French population in Canada became aware of Father Chiniquy's excommunication, and began to show sympathy with him. In order to stifle public opinion on the matter, the Bishop of Montreal wrote a pastoral letter on the 19th March last, corroborating the statement of Bishop O'Regan, and representing Father Chiniquy as one who had disobeyed the orders of the Church, and concluding by excommunicating and damning Father Chiniquy. The other Bishops of Quebec and St. Hyacinthe, have followed in the same strain. This has caused all over Canada East and West, much excitement, and the French newspapers have taken up the cudgels pro and con. The French paper called "L'Avenir," and published in Montreal, has become a strong friend to Father Chiniquy, and supports him in all his acts; whilst other newspapers are supporting the Bishops.—Public meetings have been held, and further trouble is anticipated.

Wardsville Station Burnt.

Immediately on the arrival of the lightning express at Wardsville Station, on Monday evening, a dense black smoke was observed issuing from the western end of the Station House, which was used for storing purposes, but before any person was able to reach the spot, the whole end of the building, with the roof, was enveloped in flames. Such was the rapidity with which the fire spread, that it was with great difficulty the two freight cars contiguous to the store house were pushed away by the passengers and saved. In about two minutes from the time the smoke made its first appearance, the station house, woodsheds, platform and the western end of a pile of wood amounting to some five hundred cords were in flames. Owing to the combustible character of the timber laying around the station and to a smart western breeze, the flames spread with wonderful rapidity. There were no means available to stay its progress with water. The villagers at first gazed upon the scene with consternation, and did not as much as seize a bucket of water to save the property, or move an inch to roll away a number of cars that stood in imminent danger and assuming that nearly the whole village was destined to ruin, they commenced to drag away their household furniture and store goods, —in which occupation they were employed when the writer left with the lightening express. A piece of the size of Newbury should never be without its fire brigade and fire engine. It was supposed that the fire originated in the lamp room, where a person had been engaged a short time previously in trimming the lamps. The loss to the Company must be considerable.—Hamilton Banner.

Despondency.

This is a strange word we locate at the head of our editorial jottings this morning; nevertheless, we opine, that even a few words on "despondency" may not at all times prove out of place. When, for instance, cash becomes as scarce as "angel's visits" and times as hard as "a diamond of the first water," people are very apt to despond. Men are strange animals, for the most part possessing little patience and less hope—hence each tiny cloud that chances to obtrude into their accustomed atmosphere of prosperity, is looked upon as an unconquerable obstacle forever calculated to exclude the smiling beams of progress and to destroy. Away, with such childish shortsightedness —such ill founded despondency. What if there be a season of bad crops and a consequent spell of hard times, a few smashes and an occasional absconder—what of it? Has there not been seven years of famine in England, and did not prosperity again return? "It becomes men," says a noble Roman, "to bear up bravely the weight of temporary adversity rather than childishly fall under its transient power?" We agree with the famous Cicero, and we trust that all who may be found exclaiming, "Oh! what hard times!" "Alas! it is in vain to hope for better,"—that all these and all despondent spirits akin to these, will in future learn look not alone upon the dark side of the picture; but as well remember that a sombre cloud may be but gauze curtain over a lovely sunshine.

If countries or men had the power to retain a perpetual tide of prosperity, and for no dark hours ever came, then, we would be entirely incapable of appreciating the blessings of peace and plenty. Or if of happiness we must at least have glanced at adversity—nothing improves our powers of perception more than scenes of contrast.—Post.

Mrs. Cunningham to be Presented with a Service of Plate.—An Heir. A New York city paper, speaking of the acquittal of Mrs. Cunningham, says:—

'Now let twelve hundred citizens meet together and start something that will in part repay this lady for the injury she has received at the hands of the city. She has been an object of suspicion and prejudice and has been locked up for 120 days and nights. One hundred dollars per day is a small reparation for this imprisonment. Let the twelve hundred name the sum, the only ten dollar subscribe, and will amount to $12,000. With this amount let us purchase from Ball, Black & Co., a gold or silver tea coffee or dinner service, have it properly inscribed and presented to Mrs. Cunningham on some public occasion.'

Mrs. Cunningham should give her child an heir to the Doctor's estate, (as is said to be not improbable,) the property which would go to the two would console her widowhood, though probably she would accept the plate, also, as an additional consolation."

The Globe says a despatch has been received by his Excellency intimating that at a meeting of the Privy Council on the 6th instant, Her Majesty were pleased to confirm and ratify the Act of the Provincial Legislature which enable the members of the United Church of England and Ireland in Canada to meet in Synod.

In the House of Commons, on the 12th of May, a committee was appointed to investigate the affairs of the Hudson's Bay Company. The members of the committee are, Mr. Secretary Labouchere, Sir John Pakington, Lord John Russell, Mr. Gladstone, Lord Stanley, Mr. Roebuck, Mr. R. Ellice, Mr. Adderley, Mr. Lowe, Viscount Seymour, Mr. Cardwell, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Gregson, Mr. Blackburn, Mr. Charles Fitzwilliam, Mr. Alexander Matheson, Mr. Gurney, Mr. Percy Herbert, and Viscount Goderich.

New York, May 28.

The Illinois arrived at four o'clock, bringing 800 passengers and 176,000 specie.—Drexel & Co., 300,000; Wells, Fargo and Co., 300,000; Duncan Sherman, 200,000 among the consignments. Left Aspinall on the 19th. General Henningsen and Colonel Titus were passengers. She connected with the Golden Gate, which brought down nearly 2½ millions, and California mails of the 5th. Rivas was evacuated, May 1st, by Walker, he having capitulated to the Costa Ricans. The remnant of his army was sent down in the steamer Panama.

Appalling Accident.—The Dundas Warder contains the particulars of a painful accident that occurred in the village of Millgrove, on the 14th inst., to a young woman named Cummings. She was looking at the operation of a shingle machine, when the string of her bonnet became entangled in the machine, thereby jerking her head violently against a knife, and in the twinkling of an eye it completely severed her, cut off a portion of her foot—she was then thrown on the ground senseless, but wonderful to say, alive. Medical aid was immediately procured, but we learn that the poor young woman is not likely to recover.

Townsand Positively Indentified.—The London Free Press of the 19th inst., says:—We are informed on credible authority that a telegraph was yesterday received from the Police authorities at Cleveland to the effect that the notorious Townsend is at length identified, and that the necessary papers are being made out at Washington to enable him to be handed over to the authorities of this country. We may soon expect that he will be tried for the horrid crimes of which he has been the perpetrator.

ROUTED AT LAST.—The fillbuster Walker and his horde of lawless adventurers have been compelled at last to abandon the soil of Central America, as the following will show:—

New Orleans, May 27.

The steamship Empire City, is coming up the river. Among the passengers on board the Empire City, are Gen. Walker and staff, who have abandoned the field of operations in Central America. Gen. Walker capitulated on the 1st of May to Capt. Davis of the U. S. Sloop of war St. Mary's, and with his staff and 200 men the remains of his army were brought to Panama by the St. Mary's. The Costa Ricans were not known in the articles of capitulation.

Arrival of the Canadian.

QUEBEC, 1st June, 1857.

The mail steamer Canadian, Liverpool 20th, passed Riviere Du Loup, 8.10. P. M., Sunday.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

BREADSTUFF.—Wheat—American White 58s a 65s; Red 54s a 60s.

Flour—American sour 24s a 27s; Flour sweet 30 a 32s.

Consols for money 93⅜; for account 94¼. British news unimportant.

FRANCE.

A telegraph despatch received from Paris 18th, states that the King of Bavaria arrived at Fontainbleau.

SUNDAY EVENING, May 17.

The Paris Correspondent of the Times, in a letter dated Sunday evening, says the Moniteur publishes a despatch from Constantinople of the 16th announcing that the Treaty of Peace between Great Britain and Persia was ratified at Teheran on the 14th of April and was despatched to Bagdad on the 17th of April.

Accounts from the agricultural districts concur in describing the appearance of the grain crop as magnificent. Wheat and flour declining in all the French markets. The imports are extremely favorable as to wheat.

Rye has been injured in some places from dry and cold weather. The meadows and oats require rain, but in both north and south an abundant harvest is promised. The uneasiness respecting the vintage has entirely ceased, but holders remain firm.

A rumor has been put in circulation that the Bank of France has entered into a new contract for gold. A considerable portion of gold will go to the continant by the America and Oriental.

The accounts regarding the progress of the silk crop continue on the whole satisfactory.

PRUSSIA.

The marriage of the Prince of Prussia with the Princess Royal of England is being popular and the question of a public demonstration is already under consideration. The Gazette of last evening contains an announcement on the subject as follows:—At the Court at Osborne House, the 10th of May, present, the Queen's most excellent Majesty in Council, was very much pleased to declare her consent to a contract of matrimony between his Royal Highness Prince Frederick William of Prussia, which consent her Majesty has also caused to be signified under the Great Seal.

TORONTO, May 30.

The supplies of produce continue to be larger than before noted, they are still inadequate to the demand,—and prices, with one or two exceptions, retain their firmness. The present is not a very busy season with farmers. The roads are in excellent condition, and it is to be hoped that the deliveries of farm produce will increase. There is, unquestionably, but little in the country to dispose of, and there is every probability of a continuance of the present high rates until after harvest.

WHEAT.—The wheat market is steady, with moderate supplies and an active demand. Prices to-day range 8s 9d to 9s 1d —one or two loads only moving off at the latter figure. The greater part of the day's purchases were between 8s 10s and 9s. The receipts for the day amounted to about 2,000 bushels. The competition between buyers was hardly as keen as usual, but loads moved off without delay.

FLOUR.—We note a sale of 500 bbls of Extra at $7 75. The demand is less urgent, and some difficulty is found in disposing of lots. Superfine is held at $6 75. Fancy is worth $7 a $7 50, and Extra $7 75 a $8 per bbl.

SPRING WHEAT 6s a 6s 3d per bushel.

BARLEY not in demand and prices cover say 5s a 6s 3d per bushel.

NEW-YORK, May 30.

FLOUR quiet—Canadian firm; sales, 400 bbls. at $6 75 a $6 85 for superfine; $7 15 a $8 75 for extra.

GRAIN.—Wheat dull; sales, 500 bushels at $1 50 a $1 62 for Canadian club; $1 80 a $1 85 for white Canadian. Rye firm at $1 25 a $1 30. Corn market drooping; sales 10,000 bushels old mixed western, in store, at 90c a 100c. Oats nominally the same, at 66c a 72c for Canadian, state, and western.

PROVISIONS.—Pork is easier at sales 800 bbls.; $23 85 a $23 90 for mess; $18 20 a $19 40 for prime. Beef steady; sales 400 bbls. Cut meats, sales better; shoulders, $10, and hams at $11 a $11¼. Lard firm at 14¼a 14¾c.

Died.

At Amherstburg on the 26th instant, Anna Margaret, infant daughter of Dr. James Miller, aged 11 days.

At Windsor, on Friday last, Eliza, wife of William Bampton, aged, 39 years.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with congestion of the Liver, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infectious or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or who are travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For that debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the invalid, however weakly from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy these delightful symptoms of returning strength, viz: good appetite sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting by Lawrence; also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York on each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the large sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

WINDSOR NURSERIES.

JUST PUBLISHED, a DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE of the Fruit Trees for sale at the Windsor Nurseries, containing a more accurate description of a greater variety of Fruits, than can be found in any other Catalogue issued on this continent, the whole having been compiled by the undersigned, with great care, from personal inspection of the Fruits growing on his own ground. Directions for Planting, Cultivation, Pruning, &c., will be found in the Catalogue.

Also, in Press, and will be published in a few days, a Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Tulips, Peonias, &c., &c.

Catalogues will be sent gratis, on application, (if by letter post-paid), to the undersigned, at Windsor, C. W.

The stock of Fruit Trees, more especially Apples and Pears—both Standard and Dwarf—is extremely thrifty and well grown, and such as can be procured in no other Nursery. A large portion of them are just commencing to bear, and having been twice transplanted, can be removed with perfect success.

All orders promptly attended to, the Trees carefully packed so as to carry any distance with safety, and forwarded with despatch.

As the undersigned intends discontinuing the Nursery Business, those wishing considerable lots of Trees will find it for their interest to apply early.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,
Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supportedhim ance his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

Farmers

Call at the Great Western Boot store, where you will find every article in the Boot and Shoe trade to suit you.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give tone to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Constipation,	Liver Complaints,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhœa	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds,

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

☞CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or cake. The same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Saturday, the

6th day of May next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the Town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 37, 38, 39, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

The Girl with the Calico Dress.

A fig for your upper-ten girls,
With their velvets and satins and laces,
Their diamonds and rubies and pearls,
And their milliner figures and faces;
They may shine at a party or ball,
Emblazoned in half they possess,
But give me in place of them all,
My girl with the calico dress.

She's as plump as a partridge, and fair
As the rose in its earliest bloom;
Her teeth will with ivory compare,
And her breath with the clover perfume.
Her step is as free and as light
As the fawns whom the hunters hard press,
And her eye is as soft and as bright,
My girl with the calico dress.

Your dandies and foplings may sneer
At her simple and modest attire,
But the charms she permits to appear
Would set a whole iceberg on fire.
She can dance—but she never allows
The hugging, the squeeze and caress,
She is saving all those for her spouse,
My girl with the calico dress.

She is cheerful, warm-hearted and true,
And kind to her father and mother;
She studies how much she can do
For her sweet little sisters and brother.
If you want a companion for life,
To comfort, enliven and bless,
She is just the right sort for a wife,
My girl with the calico dress.

HEN PERSUADERS.—The Springfield Republican, in speaking of a new invention for a hen's nest, whereby the eggs drop through a trap door, and so deceives the hen that she keeps on laying, is responsible for the following.

Blobbs met with a loss, however, with one of the persuaders. Blobbs had a lovely young Shanghai pullet of boundless ambition. Blobbs bought a persuader, and his lovely Shanghai used it. She went upon the nest, in the morning. Blobbs saw her go, and his heart bounded within him! Alas! her never saw her come off again. At night he visited the persuader. In the upper compartment was a handful of feathers, a few toe nails, and a bill. In the lower compartment were three dozen and eleven eggs! Blobbs saw it all! Her delicate constitution had been unequal to the effort; and fired by young ambition, she had laid herself all away."

A PUZZLED IRISHMAN.—Mr. O'Flaherty undertook to tell how many there were at a party: "The two Grogans were one, myself was two, Mike Finn was three, and—and—who in the mischief was the fourth? Let me see," counting his fingers, "The two Grogans was one, Mike Finn was two, meself was three, and—be dad! there was four of us; but St. Patrick couldn't tell the name of the other. Now it's meself that has it. Mike Finn was one, the two Grogan's was two, meself was three, and—and—be the powers I think there was but three of us after all."

IN Egypt, a young gentleman got a vixon for a wife and carried her home, when the old folks turned upon him. He asked the Kadee of the village what he should do, who advised him to watch his chance when the old folks were out of the way, take a stick as big as his two fingers, and beat her well. The bridegroom did as he was advised, and having nearly committed murder, was acknowledged as lord paramount: and when the parents came back they found their daughter humble as a dove, with cast eye beaming love, and other bound up with a rag!

TAKING IT IN TURN.—A clerk was assisting a clergyman to robe before the service commenced, and said to him. "Please, sir, I'm deaf." "Indeed my good man," says the curate, "then how do you manage to follow me during the service?" "Why, sir," says the clerk, "I looks up, and when you shut your mouth, I open mine."

Here is the last "good thing" about the hoops:

Little Boy. "Ma what is hush?"

Mother. "Why, my dear? why do you ask."

Little Boy. "Because I asked sister Jane yesterday what made her dress stick out so, she said "hush

A lady who had spent most of her time in running from neighbor's to neighbor's, was suddenly taken ill at home, and in great alarm sent her husband for a physician.—The good man after hastening on his way a few rods, returned to the house and naively asked his wife, "My dear, where shall I and the doctor find you, on my return?"

THE RIGHTS OF WOMAN.—The following may be adduced as just a few of the privileged Rights of Woman—to wit:—A gentleman's Right arm, the Right-hand side of a carriage, and always the Right side of an argument. To the above may be thrown in as peculiar Rights that Woman perhaps undestands, and decidedly adorns, a thousand times better than Man, viz.: the Rites of Hospitality and the Rites of Hymen. Though to speak impartially, the Wrongs of Hymen (as witness our police reports) fall to poor Woman's share almost as frequently as the Rites.

A KNOT EASILY UNTIED.—A young lady engaged to be married, and getting sick of her bargain, applied to a friend to help her to untie the knot before it was too late.—"Oh, certainly," he replied; "it's very easy to untie it now, while it is only a beau knot."

FORENSIC ELOQUENCE.—"May it please the honorable court and gentlemen of the jury, the defendant in this case, willfully and maliciously, with all the fury of a flood, emerged from the wilderness, with all the terrific frenzy of a roaring lion, and with his gigantic strength did then and there seize my inoffensive client by the collar—and tore his shirt."

A lady in this city told a freshly imported servant-maid to cut off 'ten yards" of a piece of muslin just brought home, while she (the lady) attended a visitor. On returning to the sitting room, she found that the girl had cut off 'ten yards' sure enough, and each yard in a separate piece. The same girl, on being told by the family physician (to whom her mistress had sent her for a prescription) to get a portion of saltpetre, got a lot of torpedos, which she told her mistress were to be taken three times a day.

"No admittance, except on business," as needle said to the thread.

[From the Journal and Express.

Between the physical science and the arts of life there subsists a constant mutual interchange of good offices, and no considerable progress can be made in the one, without of necessity, giving rise to corresponding steps in the other. On the one hand every art is in some measure based upon, and more entirely, dependent on those very powers and qualities of the material world, which it is the object of physical inquiry to investigate and explain.—Hunt.

CANADA is essentially an agricultural country, and hence that species of information which has a direct bearing on the development of its agricultural resources must always be the most acceptable to the farmer. Fifteen years ago, Agricultural Chemistry was a science unknown in this Province.—During that interval, however, thanks to Doctor Ryerson and the Governers of Toronto University, it has become part and parcel of our national system of education. It is true that little of it is yet taught in our country schools, but this defect will, we trust, soon be remedied.

In order to teach Agricultural Chemistry in a successful manner, an apparatus, worth, probably, from $5 to $10 is necessary.—This may be had in Toronto, as also a suitable text book on the subject. Norton's is cheap, and its style is familiar; and what is better, it is adapted to this country. Were the sons of farmers at the country schools in winter, to devote a small portion of their time, say half an hour of each day, to the acquisition of useful agricultural knowledge, it is impossible to calculate the benefits that would accrue to the country in a few years. When entering on the duties of life, they would have imbibed a love for their profession and be enabled to draw from the soil the greatest quantity of produce with the least possible expenditure. Farming, instead of being a perpetual drudgery, would become a pleasant, profitable and intellectual exercise.

Of the importance of agriculture it were useless to say much—every one is willing to acknowledge it. That art (to use the words of a distinguished writer) on which a thousand millions of men are dependent for their very sustenance, in the prosecution of which nine-tenths of the fixed capital of all civilized nations is embarked—and probably two hundred millions of men expend their daily toil—that art must confessedly be the most important of all, the parent and precursor of all other arts. In every country, then, and at every period, the investigation of the principles on which the rational practice of this art is founded, ought to have commanded the principal attention of the greatest minds. To what other object could they have been more beneficially directed? Under a proper system of cultivation, this peninsula might easily be made to produce ten-fold more than its present returns. Indeed, the example of the Chinese shows us what the productive powers of the soil are not to be readily estimated. Nothing repays the labors of the husbandman more fully than the willing soil; nothing is more grateful for his attention, or offers surer rewards to patient industry, or to renewed attempts at improvement.

Experience and example, then, encourage us to look forward to still further improvements in the arts of culture, and independent of such as may be derived from purely mechanical principles, theoretical chemistry seems to point out the direction in which important advances in another direction and of another kind may be reasonably anticipated. The researches of Liebig and others within the last ten years have shed a new light on this branch of industry, by pointing out its almost inexhaustible resources.

We feel confident that the character which Liebig gives his German countrymen will not apply to the farmers of Canada.—"What can be expected (he says) from the present generation of farmers, which recoils with seeming distrust and aversion from all the means of assistance afforded it by chemistry, and which does not understand the art of making a rational application of chemical discoveries." The Canadian yeomanry, blessed with plenty and prosperity, are a superior race, and would be a credit to any country. They should do no time, however, in turning their attention to the Science of Agriculture, and procuring for their sons that instruction which will make them truly "Lords of the Soil." Every facility is afforded them. A chair of Agriculture has been established in the University college, Toronto, and a model farm connected therewith. Of these privileges they should not be backward to avail themselves, by sending their sons to attend the lectures, while, at the same time, they may be acquiring a knowledge of the Greek and Roman authors, some of whom, by the way, we Collumello, wrote largely on Agriculture. Should they neglect the opportunity, they have themselves to blame.

CHEAP PAINT.—If any of your readers wish to use a very cheap and substantial paint, of a drab color without lustre, let them mix water-lime with skimmed milk, to a proper thickness to apply with a brush, and it is ready to use. It is too cheap almost to estimate, and any one can put it on with a common whitewash brush. It will adhere well to wood, whether smooth or rough—to brick, stone or mortar, where oil paint has not been used, in which case it will cleave to some extent, and form a very hard substance, as durable as the best oil paint.—J. M. CLARK. Throopsville.

HOW TO DO UP SHIRT BOSOMS.—We have often been requested by lady correspondents to state by what process the glossy new linens, shirt bosoms, &c., is produced and in order to gratify them, we subjoin the following receipt:—"Take two ounces of fine white gum arabic powder, put it in a pitcher, and pour on a pint or more of boiling water, according to the degree of strength you desire; and then having covered it, let it stand all night; in the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle, cork it; and keep it for use. A tablespoonful of gum water stirred in a pint of starch, made in the usual manner, would give to linen, either white or printed, a look of newness, when nothing else can restore them after they have been washed.

SETTING BLOOD.—Remedy for spitting of blood: infusion of red roses, five ounces and a half; syrup of poppies, half an ounce; diluted sulphuric acid, twenty drops. Mix. One or two tablespoonfuls four times a day.

For Sale!!!
A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about 1 One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Mills House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form the line for the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.
WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays
MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandize with greater despatch Pass has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Stetson, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

Select Poetry.

The Comet.

BY C. W. HOLMES.

The Comet! He is on his way,
And singing as he flies;
The whizzing planets sink before
The spectre of the skies!
Ah! well may regal orbs burn blue,
And statellites turn pale,
Ten million cubic miles or head,
Ten billion leagues of tail!

On by whistling spheres of light,
He flashes and he flames;
He turns not, to the left or right,
He asks them not their names:
One spurn from his domestic heel,—
Away, away, they fly,
Where darkness might be bottled up
And sold for "Tyrian dye."

And what would happen to the land,
And how would look the sea,
If in the beamed devils path,
Our earth should chance to be?
Full hot and high the sea would boil,
Full red the forests glow;
Methought I saw and heard it all
In a dyspeptic dream.

I saw a tutor take his tube
The Comet's course to spy;
I heard a scream—the gathered rays
Had stewed the tutor's eye;
I saw a fortress soldiers all
Were armed with goggles green;
Pop cracked the guns! whiz flew the balls!
Bang went the magazine.

I saw a poet dip a scroll
Each moment in a tub,
I read upon the warping back,
"The dream of Belzebub;"
He could not see his verses burn,
Although his brains was fried,
And over and anon he bent
To wet them as they dried.

I saw the scalding pitch run down
The crackling, sweating pines,
And streams of smoke, like water-spouts
Burst through the rumbling mines;
I asked the firemen why they made
Such noise about the town;
They answered not, but all the while
The brakes cut up and down.

Upon a baking egg;
I saw a cripple scortch his hand
While turning up his leg;
I saw nine geese upon the wing
Towards the frozen pole,
And every mother's gosling fell
Crisped to a crackling coal.

I saw the ox that browsed the grass
Within in the blistering rays,
The herring in his shrinking jaws
Was all a fiery blaze;
I saw huge fishes boiled to rags,
Bob through the bubbling brine;
And thoughts of supper crossed my soul;
I had been rash at mine.

Strange sights! strange sights! O fearful dream!
Its memory haunts me still.
The streaming sea, the crimson glare,
That wreathed each wooded hill;
Stranger! if through thy reeling brain
Such midnight visions sweep,
Spare, spare, O spare thine evening meal,
And sweet shall be thy sleep!

Brown's Last Ascent to the Clouds.

One fine summer morning, a few years since, there was wonderful excitement in the Irish village of Ballydooley. All the idle men, women, and children in the neighborhood—comprehending about nine tenths of the population—were assembled on the large level common which served as a race-course and galling green; and all thronged towards some object in the centre, which formed the nucleus of the crowd.

"Yea, then, what's the name of it at all, at all?" demanded one ragged gossoon.

"Is it tied to the tail of it he's going to go up?" asked another.

"Ah, don't be foolish!" exclaimed an old man, tha, 'senee carrier' of the district; "don't ye see the long rope he's going to hould on by?"

"Well, well!" groaned an old woman, taking her dudeen, or short black pipe, out of her mouth, and sticking it, lighted as it was, within the folds of her cross barred cotton mockobid; "them English are mighty quare people. I'm sure, when we heard that this Mr. Brown, with his sacks of goold, was coming to Ritclarm, after buying out the rale ould stock of the Dessys, we thought he'd have carriages and horses galore, and maybe a fine yacht in the harbour; but it never entered the heads of any of us that nothing less would serve him than going coorsing through the air, like a wild goose, at the tail of a balloon, or whatsomever they call it.'

For some time past the process of inflating the balloon had been going on; and now the greatly gaily-painted orb towered tremulously above the heads of the gaping spectators, and pressing against the cords by which it was held down, it seemed only to await the arrival of the bold aeronaut to dart upwards on its way.

Here he is!" exclaimed some of the outward stragglers of the crowd; and presently a carriage drew up, and out stepped Mr. Brown the English millionaire, who had lately become an Irish landed proprietor.—Mr. Brown was a little dapper man, whom a very small amount of pugilistic force would have sufficed to lay level with the soil of his adoption. He was one of those unlucky individuals who meet an accident at every turn —who, in entering a room, invariably slip, tumble, knock down some piece of furniture, or sit down beside their chair instead of upon it. He seldom escaped upsetting his inkstand; sending his meat and drink the 'wrong way,' and then coughing and choking for half an hour; cutting his fingers, tearing his coat, or knocking his forehead against a door, so that he rarely appeared in society without scars, plasters, or bandages. In practising gymnastics, he had knocked out three teeth; in yachting at Cowes, he had been four times nearly drowned; in shooting on the moors in Scotland, he had left the grouse unharmed, but had blown off two of his own fingers. A taste for pyrotechny had singed handsomely his eyebrows, hair, and whiskers; and as to railway travelling, his half-breadth scapes and moving accidents, and collisions, upsets, and explosions, would have served to fill two or three handsome orange-colored volumes of the English Railway Library, or the French Bibliotheque des Chemins de Fer.

At length, having tried the three elements of earth, water, and fire, it occurred to Mr. Brown that the remsing one of air, as a medium of locomotion, might be more agreeable, and could not be more perilous, than the others. He accordingly, the year before, when residing on his estate in Devonshire, had purchased an excellent balloon, and, strange to say, had made several ascents and come down again in perfect safety. On this occasion, he meditated a flight over the Green Isle, and intended to come down at Belfast; but the best informed members of the crowd asserted that he was going 'every step of the way to Amerikky.'

A London friend, who had come to Ireland on a fishing excusion, had promised to join Mr. Brown in his flight; but, as it would seem, his courage failed, and he came not. In nowise discouraged, however, Mr. Brown was just about to step into his aerial car, when a tall small built man suddenly stepped forward, and politely saluting the aeronaut, said:

'May I ask you a question sir?'

'Certainly.'

'Is it true that you are going to America?'

'No; merely to Belfast, wind and weather permitting.'

'Belfast' repeated the stranger in a sweeting manner peculiar to poor Mr. Brown that is just the direction towards which I want to go, and I hate land-travelling. Will you, sir, accept me as a companion?'

Mr. Brown hesitated for a moment; but as he really wished for some one to accompany him, he saw no serious objection to the plan, and accordingly signified his acquiescence, merely remarking to the stranger, that his costume seemed too light for the regions of cold air which they would have to traverse.

'Bah!' was the reply, 'I have passed through more changes of climate than that, and I am happily very robust.'

'Well,' said Mr. Brown, looking at the massive frame of the unknown, 'my car is large enough. Come in the name of Providence!' So they took their places, and the word was given: 'Let go!'

The fifteen men whose hands were severely pressed by the straining cords, desired nothing better, and in a moment the 'freed balloon began to shoot majestically. The crowd shouted and clapped their hands.

'Ah!' cried Mr. Brown 'this is delightful! Don't you think so?' Not receiving any answer, he turned and looked at his travelling companion. There he was, lying almost flat on his face and hands, with his head over the side of the car: his eyes were fixed, and his hair bristling.

'Are you afraid?' asked Mr. Brown.

No answer. The balloon ascended rapidly, and erelong arrived at the region of clouds. Turning once more to his unmovable companion, Mr. Brown shook him slightly by the arm, and said: 'Are you ill?' Still no reply, but a fixed solid stare. They were now at a great elevation; clouds lay beneath their feet, above their heads a burning sun, and infinite space around them.

Suddenly the stranger stood upright, his face pallid as that of a corpse.

'Faster! faster!' he exclaimed in a tone of authority; and seizing in succession three of the bags of sand which served as ballast, he flung them out of the car, at the same time laughing in a strange wild manner.

'Ha! ha! cried, 'that's the way to travel! We shall distance the swallow, we shall tower above the eagle. When I was in the Abruzzi with my rifle in my hand, watching for stray travellers, I never felt so excited as I do now. Then their lives were in danger, now is my own.'

Very pleasant! thought the owner of the balloon. I have picked up some rascally Italian brigand.

'Better to fight with the elements than with custom-house officers!' continued his companion. The balloon ascended at a terrific rate. In his turn Mr. Brown stood up, and laying his hand on the stranger's arm, said:

'For Heaven's sake, don't stir! Our lives are at stake. I must allow some of the gas to escape, in order to repair your imprudence.'

'How do you do it?'

'I have only to draw this string, which is connected with the valve.'

'And if you had not that resource, what would be the consequence?'

'We should continue to ascend, until everything would burst from excessive dilation.' The man continued for a few moments in deep thought; then suddenly drawing out a knife, he cut the cord as high up as he could reach.

'Faster! faster!' he reiterated. The stranger was a giant compared with Mr. Brown, who, perceiving that he could obtain nothing by force, began to try conciliation.

'Sir,' said he in a soothing tone, 'you are a Christian, I make no doubt. Well, our religion forbids homicide!'

'Faster shouted the giant, and seizing the remaining sacks of sand he scattered their contents to the clouds. Mr. Brown fell on his knees.

'Ah!' he exclaimed, 'if you have no regard for your own life, at least have some pity on mine. I am young, rich, happy; I have a mother and a sister: in their name, I conjure you to stretch your hand up to the valve, and save us from a dreadful death, by allowing some gas to escape.'

Shaking his wild locks, the stranger drew off his coat, and exclaiming: 'We are not ascending!' flung it out.

"Your turn now!" he continued; and without the smallest ceremony, he despoiled the unfortunate Brown of his paletot, and threw it over.

The balloon pursued its wild career without stop or stay.

"Ha! ha!" said the stranger: "while we're thus climbing so pleasantly towards the sky, I'll tell you a story—shall I?" His unhappy companion did not stir. Already, from the extreme rarity of the air, the blood was gushing from his eyes and ears. "Listen! Three years ago, I livid in Madrid. I was a widower, with one little daughter, a gentle, bright-eyed angel: her long curling hair is waving this moment before my eyes. One day, I went out early, and did not return until late; my child, my beautiful Emma, was gone; banditi had come and stolen her from me. But, my friend, have you a cannon here?" Mr. Brown made mechanically a sign in the negative. "What a pity!—I would have bombarded Spain! Ever since, I have searched for my child in every country of Europe, but in vain. Now I think she may be in the north of Ireland. Have you a lucifer-match here?" Mr. Brown made no reply, but shook his head. "You have not? Ah! if I could get one, I would set the balloon on fire; and then when reduced to ashes, I would be much lighter! When you first saw me this morning, I was examining the stupid faces of you crowd, to see if the dark foreign one of my Emma's ravishers were among them. It was evident to poor Mr. Brown that his traveling-companion was a confirmed lunatic. A sudden idea struck him.

"What is your name?" he asked.

"Gerald Annesley."

"The very same!"

"What mean you?"

"I know where the wretch lives who stole your child; we are now just above the spot. Draw the valve, Mr. Annesley, and in a short time you will embrace your Emma!"

"No, no, you are deceiving me. My Emma is not on earth; she is in heaven. Last night, she appeared to me in a dream, and told me so! That's the reason I want to ascend higher and higher. Come my friend, help me: let us blow as hard as we can on the balloon. As we are beneath, our breath must help it to rise. Blow! blow!" Mr. Brown, moved by terror, tried to obey.

"It does not stir! Come, mount on my shoulders, and push the balloon!" And without consulting him any further the giant hoisted him up, as if he had been a feather, and held him above his head, saying: "Now, push the balloon!" The unlucky victim tried to obey, but the blood blinded his eyes. There was a horrible buzzing in his ears, and lights flashed before him. For a moment, he thought of throwing himself over, in order to end his torments.

"Ha!" shouted the madman, "it does not go!" At that moment the trembling hand of Mr. Brown touched accidently the cord of the safety-valve. He made it play, and the collapsing orb began to descend rapidly. Through the clouds it darted downwards, and the earth reappeared.

"Ah!" cried Annesley, "instead of pushing the balloon, as I told you, you draw it downwards. Push upwards!—push I say!"

"You see that I am pushing as hard as I can."

"No; for here is the earth!"

"It is only that the clouds are rising towards the upper regions."

"Well, let us do the same. Let us throw out all our ballast."

"We have no more ballast, you say!" he asked, looking fixedly at him.

"No more."

"How much do you weigh!" This question fell on poor Brown like a stunning blow. "How much do you weigh!" repeated the companion in a louder tone.

"Ah, very little—nothing that could make the slightest difference—a mere trifle."

"A mere trifle! Well, even that will make some difference." The imminence of the peril gave our aeronaut presence of mind.

"My friend," said he, "your child is not dead. I saw her last week near Belfast. She is living with a family who love her, and treat her as their own. In a very short time, if you will allow us to descend, you will meet her." The madman looked at him with a wild doubting gaze.

"Yes," continued Brown eagerly, anxious to confirm the impression he had made; "you will see her, your darling little Emma, running to meet you with outstretched arms, and her fair golden curls waving in the wind."——

"You lie! you lie! Emma's hair was as black as jet! Man! you never saw her! How much do you weigh?"

"Ah! a mere nothing—only a few pounds!" Gerald Annesley seized Brown with both hands, and held him suspended over the side of the car. In another moment, he would have dropped him into the abyss of space.

"Annesley!" exclaimed the poor man, "you want to mount higher?"

"Yes! yes!"

"Your only wish is to lighten the balloon?"

"Ay!"

"Then, how much do you weigh yourself?"

"Two hundred pounds."

"Well, if you were to throw yourself over, the balloon, lightened of such a great weight, would dart upwards with inconceivable rapidity." The madman reflected for a moment.

"True!" he said; "you are right!" He laid Mr. Brown in the bottom of the car, and stared wildly around.

"My Maker!" he cried, 'I go to meet Thee; I go to embrace my child, my Emma!" And flinging himself over, he disappeared.

The balloon and its owner reached the earth in safety: the latter, however, lay for many weeks raving in brain-fever. When he recovered, he gave order to have his perilous plaything sold at any sacrifice, and soon afterwards provided himself with an excellent cars taker in the shape of a pretty young wife, and under whose tutelage "The mastber," as his Irish valet remarks, 'is growing a dail more handy in himself." So this was Mr Brown's last ascent to the cloud.

The number of Post Offices in England Scotland, and Ireland is 10,865, of which, 368 were established during the last year. Of the above number 845 are head Post Offices, and the rest sub-offices. The number of letters delivered in the United Kingdom during the last year was 478,000,000, it being in the proportion of 20 letters to each person in England, 16 in Scotland, and 7 in Ireland.

LOVE OF THE DEAD.—To have laid a strong affection down among the dead may be a great sorrow, but it is not a real misfortune. Whatever one's aftergoings may be, there is a deposit for the future life, a stake in the better country' a part for the heart which the grave keeps holy, in spite of "evil that is in the world." The living change to us, or we to them; sin may divide, strife may come between us, but through all times and fortunes the dead remain the same to memories and our love. The child taken from us long ago is still innocent lamb that was not for our folding. The early lost friend or lover is still the blessed of our youth—a hope not to be broken, a possession wherein there is no disappointment.

Provincial Parliament,

Petitions to Legislative Assembly.

The following petitions have been forwarded from Mr. Rankin's constituents, in the county of Essex, and from Howard in the County of Kent, to the House of Assembly, in reference to that hon. member's proceedings connected with the Great Southern Railway:

TO THE HONORABLE THE LEGISLATIVE-ASSEMBLY OF THE PROVINCE OF CANADA, IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

THE PETITION OF THE COUNTY OF ESSEX, HUMBLY SHEWETH—

That the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company was incorporated by an act of your Honourable House, and that Arthur Rankin Esq., (member for the County of Essex) one of the members of your Honorable House, was named as one of the Provisional Directors of the said Company by the said act:

That the said Arthur Rankin, while a member of Your Honorable House and also a Provisional Director of the said Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, did as your petitioners are informed and verily believe, on or about the third day of July, A. D. 1856, corruptly enter into an agreement with the late Samuel Zimmerman, by which he was to receive £25,000, or a contract worth that amount, at least for his services in procuring a contract for the construction of the road for the late Samuel Zimmerman, and for his using his position as a member of your Honorable House in favor of the said Samuel Zimmerman, and your petitioners believe that the said Arthur Rankin did, while a member of Your Honorable House and a member of the Provisional Board of Directors of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, corruptly and improperly, and to the great scandal of Your Honorable House, agree to sell his position and influence, both as a member of the said Board of Provisional Directors, for money or for its equivalent;

Your petitioners further state that after the said Arthur Rankin had entered into the said agreement with the said Samuel Zimmerman, sometime about the month of July last, he opened up negotiations with Mr. Isaac Buchanan, and offered to sell himself and his influence in his position as a member of Your Honorable House and of the said Railway Company to the said Isaac Buchanan for money or other considerations;

Your Petitioners further state, that after the death of the said Samuel Zimmerman, the said Arthur Rankin, then being President of one of the Boards of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, and also a member of Your Honorable House, offered, upon having his agreement with the said Samuel Zimmerman carried out, by which he was to receive at least £25,000, to assist in so bringing about the proposed amalgamation between the Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway and Harbour Company, and the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company, and to agree to the existing combinations under Mr. Buchanan, by resigning at the same time his position, this claim was secured he would use his position as a member of Your Honorable House to defeat Mr. Buchanan's scheme;

Your Petitioners further state that they verily believe, that through the claims made by Mr. Arthur Rankin on the estate of the late Samuel Zimmerman and which in fact, if paid, must be paid, by the two railway companies and form a charge on the scheme, and from his having introduced a bill into Your Honorable House to incorporate a company to construct a southern railway, independent of the existing lines, by the amalgamation of which alone the road can in the opinion of your Petitioners, be constructed, the money invested by the Corporation of Woodstock and the other municipalities will in all probability be lost and Your Petitioners seriously injured;

Your Petitioners further state that the said Arthur Rankin is selling his influence and position both as a member of your Honorable House and of the Provisional Board of directors, to procure a contract for Mr. Samuel Zimmerman, for a money consideration or its equivalent, and his offer of similar influence to Mr. Isaac Buchanan, for a like consideration, made this month, to Mr. Isaac Buchanan; and his subsequent negotiations, through Mr. Vansittart: and his threats to prevent the carrying out of the road, if his claims were not paid, is unworthy of any member of your Honorable Body, and will greatly tend to lessen the confidence of the people of this Province in your Honorable House, unless a thorough investigation is made into the conduct of the said Arthur Rankin; and if the charges made are fully substantiated, as your Petitioners verily believe they will be, he will be suitably dealt with by your honorable House;

Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly pray that the said Arthur Rankin may be put upon his trial, with a view to his immediate expulsion from your honourable House, if found guilty of the said corrupt practices.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

County of Essex, 26th May, 1857.

TO THE HONORABLE THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF THE PROVINCE OF CANADA, IN PARLIAMENT ASSEMBLED.

The Petition of the undersigned inhabitants of the Township of Howard, in the County of Kent.

HUMBLY SHEWETH:—

That your Petitioners residing along and near the line of Railway, as projecting between the Towns of St. Thomas and Amhersburg, have observed with great concern and regret, that hitherto every measure tending to thwart through the contrivance and intrigue of a party, headed by the Honorable Member for Essex, who though having no rightful interest, whatever in its progress has interfered from time to time, and at all times during the last year, and intrigued so as to obtain over it an almost entire control to the detriment of the extensive part of the country through which said road is to pass, to the demoralization of the public and the promotion of the present pecuniary gains of him he said member for Essex, extolling his personal and parliamentary influence and offering the same for sale at various prices, bids and bribes. Your petitioners humbly submit that the construction of said Railway should no longer be permitted to remain in abeyance to suit the selfish designs of the party so headed by the said Member for Essex.

Your petitioners have observed with great alarm that the said Member for Essex has introduced into your Honorable House a Bill, having for its object, as your petitioners verily believe, the embarrassment to its interest of the already existing charters for a line of connecting Railways from the Essex Frontier to the River Detroit, of which said line the St. Thomas and Amhersburg Railway form a link, and further to enable the said member for Essex to sell such charter, so sought to be obtained as aforesaid, together with his Parliamentary influence to any party as unscrupulous as himself.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that your Honorable House will not pass the Bill introduced by the said [member for Essex] entitled the Southern Railway Bill, as it would embarrass, as aforesaid the completion of the said St. Thomas and Amhersburg Railway, and give effect to and countenance the most shameless bribery and corruption ever brought to the knowledge of your petitioners as having been attempted and unlikely knowledge in any constitution all governed country, and your petitioners will ever pray.

GREAT SOUTHERN RAILWAY

Messrs. LARWILL and FREEMAN presented petitions setting forth facts in connection with the Amhersburg and St. Thomas and Woodstock and Lake Erie Railway Companies, and praying that Arthur Rankin may be committed to the Bar of this House, upon his trial for acts connected with those Companies, and, if found guilty of misconduct, expelled.

Mr. MATHESON moved that when the order of the day for the House to go into Committee upon the Bill to incorporate the Great Southern Railway Company is taken up, that the County Council of the county of Oxford be heard at the Bar of this House, by counsel, against the passage of the Bill.

Messrs. POWELL and CASSELS opposed the motion, on the ground that it would be a useless waste of time.

Mr. WILSON was surprised that members should object to allowing time for hearing parties whose most important private rights were at stake. Hon. gentlemen forgot the history of the Bill; it had been brought in without notice and carried to its present stage almost without notice. No one who regarded the position of the House before the country could object to allowing counsel to be heard.

Mr. MACKENZIE wished to have the evidence taken before the Committee, before counsel were heard.

Mr. POWELL said that every member of the House had probably read the evidence taken and the speeches of counsel, and had made up his mind already upon the subject. He looked upon the motion as one intended to delay the Bill.

Mr. FOLEY said that the County Council which prayed to be heard had no interest whatever in the Great Southern Road, as it was clear that it would pass through a portion of their limits. He could not see what claim they had to a hearing.

Mr. CAMERON spoke in favor of the motion. If a matter involving but £25 was presented by Counsel before the Courts, why should not the municipalities which are deeply interested in this enterprise be heard before the House, which is the highest Court of the land. That it was late in the session when the question came under consideration, was owing to the length of the testimony submitted to the Committee by the contending parties, who had now agreed upon the Bill reported to the House.

After some remarks by Messrs. Papin and and Mongenais in opposition to the motion a division was taken. Yeas 30, Nays 74.

YEAS—Messrs. Bell, Benjamin, Bigger, Bourrassa, Brown, Cameron, Chaffers, Chisholm, Church, Conger, Cook, Chas. Daoust, J. B. Daoust, Delong, Desaulniers, J. B. Dorion, Dostaler, Dufresne, Ferguson, Ferrie Thomas Foster Freeman, Gamble, Gendron, Gillie, Guevremont, Hartman, Hunt, Jackson, Labelle, Laberge, Larwill, Lumsden, R. McDonald, Masson, Matheson, Mattice, Meagher, Merrit, Mongenais, A. Morrison, Munro, Niles, Patrick, Pouliot, Scatchered, Sinnett, Thos. Smith, Thibaudeau, Wilson, and Wright—50.

NAYS—Messrs. Alleyn, Bowes, Brodeur, Atty Gen. Cartier, Cassault, Christie, Evantural, Fellowes, Foley, O. C. Fortier, Frazer Gill, Holton, Laporte, Attorney Gen. Macdonald, Papin, Pelletz, Powell, Solicitor Gen. Ross, Shaw, Stuart, Supple, Terrill, and Valois—24.

MR. FOLEY moved that the municipality of Simcoe in the county of Norfolk, be heard at the bar by their Counsel in favour of the Bill. The motion was carried.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

From the proceedings of the Legislative Council we clip the following notices of motions by the Honorable Mr. Prince,—

That he will enquire of the Ministry whether any, and if so, what action has been taken by the Government upon a statement submitted to them more than six months ago, of a Mr. Hammond, who is a gentleman employed to collect certain Timber Duties from persons cutting Timber upon Public Lands, having erroneously demanded and taken from a Mr. Carrier, the sum of £75 for such duties, whereas the timber was cut upon private property, and therefore not liable to any such duties.

By the Honorable Mr. PRINCE,—

That he will enquire of the Ministry whether any, and if so, what action has been taken by the Government upon a statement submitted to them more than two months ago, that Pierre Desjardins of Tilbury West, is a Justice of the Peace for the County of Essex, not being a Coroner, had thought fit to assume the duties of a Coroner, by holding illegally an inquest upon the body of a person killed at the Great Western Railway, and causing the same body to be interred without instituting a proper enquiry into the cause of death.

By the Honorable Mr. Prince,—

For an humble address to His Excellency the Governor General to restore to the Commission of the Peace for the County of Essex in Canada West, John Alexander Wilkinson and Thomas Woodbridge, Esquires, of the Town of Sandwich in that County, pursuant to a Memorial of the inhabitants of Sandwich and others to that effect.

SANDWICH, JUNE 11, 1857.

AMHERSTBURG.

It being understood that Messrs. McLeod and Park would arrive here on Tuesday morning last from Toronto where they have been lobbying in the House for the last two months, against Mr. Rankin's G. S. W. R. Bill, the Town's people determined to give them a hearty welcome home—The people of Amhersburg have attentively watched the progress of Rankin's bill through the House, and have often been disheartened by the prospect of its becoming Law, the ultimate success however of Messrs. McLeod and Park's lobbying in defeating the bill has made them once more sanguine of getting a Railway and give them unbounded confidence in those two gentlemen. On Tuesday morning, about 10 o'clock the Fire Companies Nos. 1 and 2 and the Hook and Ladder Company turned out in full uniform with flags, music, &c., Marshalled by Chief Engineer Mr. Kolfage, who knows how to do things up 'Brown'. When the 'Bay City' hove in sight, the three Companies marched down to the wharf, the rear ranks then took more order and kept about forming a passage extending from the wharf to Dalhousie street. On the steamer touching the wharf Mr. Leggatt the Reeve of the town received Mr. McLeod on the landing and marched up with him through the passage made by the Fire Companies, the Band leading the way to the Salmoni House (others of the committee taking charge of Mr. Park in the same way) when the following address was read by Mr. Leggatt.

To Messrs John McLeod and Theodore J. Park:

GENTLEMEN,

We the Committee appointed to wait upon you on your arrival after the long contest you have so nobly and successfully maintained against Rankin's nefarious Bill have much pleasure in welcoming you home.

The inhabitants of the town have anxiously watched the progress through the House of Parliament of the Bill which our unworthy member introduced solely with a view as they firmly believe to deprive them of their Railway and noticed with pleasure the efforts made by you to defeat it.

The people of Amhersburg are of opinion that they would be wanting in gratitude did they not express to you publicly how fully they appreciate the firmness, perseverance, and tact with which you opposed the G. S. W. R. Bill, and made patent the corrupt and treacherous conduct and foul designs of Mr. Rankin, sacrificing as you did your private affairs and wealth for the benefit of the Municipality and County at large.—

The Committee are happy to state that the confidence which the Town reposed in you from the commencement of the Railway undertaking has not been misplaced, and they are confident that the work you have so ably aided will be carried out by you to its completion, and Amhersburg through your efforts may yet boast of a Railway.

REPLY.

To Thomas Paxton and others, the Committee &c.

GENTLEMEN,

The cordial manner in which we have been welcomed home by the inhabitants of Amhersburg, rewards in a measure all the trials we have had to undergo.

The consciousness of our having the sympathies of the people of this town throughout the whole of the contest has often gird, ed our loins to continue the fight, and infused new energy into our efforts.

We trust that while we have heretofore shown that we are worthy of your confidence you will never have cause to withdraw it; and that the object of all our hopes will eventually be attained.

JOHN McLEOD.
THEO J. PARK.

Messrs. McLeod and Park were loudly cheered by the Crowd, which was immense and after the delivery of their address the Reeve led them to a carriage in waiting-to which the Fire Companies attached themselves and conveyed them to their respective residences.

The Southern Railway.

The Bill for the incorporation of the Southern Railway introduced by Mr. Rankin has at length been disposed of, by being withdrawn from the House, this was the only course that could be pursued without involving a thorough defeat as members had fully made up their minds, not to entertain the measure. The various speeches made on the occasion were able and that made by Mr. Brown was particularly so, we will endeavor in next weeks issue to give a portion of them and at present we must content ourselves with the remarks made in the Globe.

Mr. Rankin had an opportunity last evening of making his long-promised defence, and spoke for nearly two hours, the House listening with exemplary patience to his not very pleasant harangue. It was certainly a strange defence, but possibly was the best, nay, the only one that a man so situated could make. Convicted by his own evidence of acts which men think dishonourable, the member for Essex would venture to deny that he had committed these acts. He admitted them over and over again, but he pleaded that in his apprehension, they were not wrong, that they were harmless, nay, in some respects, praiseworthy. There was nothing amiss in his opinion to making a secret bargain with Mr. Zimmerman, while a provisional director of the Amhersburg and St. Thomas Railway Company; there was nothing wrong in leading on Mr. Buchanan to offer larger bribes; there was nothing wrong in agreeing with Mr. Vansittart to abandon his bill for a consideration. In doing all this, he (Mr. Rankin) was actuated by the purest motives of patriotism, "In fact," exclaimed the honourable gentleman, "I stand here a monument of injured innocence," and he folded his arms and struck an attitude which would have brought down the gallery" in any theatre in the world. It is possible that this defence is a good one, and that Mr. Rankin is really not conscious that he has done anything wrong. If this is so, however, it just proves him to be afflicted with the new disease which has lately been made common, we mean "moral insanity." If he spoke the truth last night, the sooner he is treated as an irresponsible being and properly watched the better for himself and society. In any case, he is unworthy of any further notice from us.

The speech which followed from Attorney General Macdonald was more worthy of notice. It was an elaborate attempt to injure the prospects of the existing Company, which are soon to be amalgamated; to make it appear that they are unworthy the confidence of capitalists, and that the road cannot be built without the aid of Parliament. His assertions were all vague; he mentioned nothing which showed flaws in the old charters; he contented himself with a general allegation that they could not be worked. The people along the line of the Southern Railway will appreciate its true value this effort of the Attorney General to prevent their road being built for another year, to throw the whole subject again before Parliament next session, and have it again fought over by contending factions, with probably the same result as we have seen this session. The motive for this course is obvious enough to those who have watched the proceedings of Mr. Macdonald in reference to this railway. He has been as deeply engaged in promoting Mr. Rankin's scheme as any one, and he still has hopes that gentlemen and his confederates, Clarke, Bowes, Burton and others of the Conservative supporters of the Government, may succeed next year in obtaining that which has now been taken from between their teeth. It remains for the people along the line of road to counteract the schemes of these jobbers. The old charters give them the necessary powers, according to the opinion of men better skilled in railway matters and more disinterested than Mr. John A. Macdonald. Let them go to work in earnest; place their scheme fairly and honestly before the English public, and there is no doubt of the money being raised for so profible a line, even in the present state of the money market.

The latter part of Mr. Macdonald's speech consisted of an attempt to lay a coat of whitewash on the monument of injured innocence." The Attorney General could not see anything wrong in a director becoming a party to a contract, he could see nothing wrong in Mr. Rankin, as a member of the House, agreeing to withdraw a certain bill, in consideration of receiving a share in a contract to the extent of £50,000 profit.—Not he; these were perfectly legitimate transactions. He did think it "unwise," of Mr Rankin to lead Mr. Buchanan on to offer larger and larger bribes. Yes, absolute ly, the Attorney General went the length of calling it "unwise" but "then" said he "there was nothing dishonourable nor dishonest about it." While the Attorney General, the leader of the Government, speaks thus, who shall hope for any improvement of the House of Assembly.

The Amhersburg & St. Thomas Railway.

At a Meeting of the Shareholders of the above company held at the Companies Office in Amhersburg on Tuesday last, for the purpose of Electing Directors under the statute; the following were duly elected for the year 1857. Messrs. Issac Buchanan, Thomas G. Ridout, John McLeod, Theodore Park, John McKay, Colin Munro, Wm. J. White, Charles J. Hope, and Adam Hope.

There is every prospect that the Road will be gone on with immediately,—The directors are determined to lose no time in prosecuting the works in order to have the Railway completed at as early a date as possible.

Parliament Adjourned.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL CHAMBER

TORONTO, June 10th 1857.

This day at 4 o'clock P. M. His Excellency the Gov. General proceeded in state to the Chamber of the Legislative Council in the Parliament Buildings. The members of the Legislative Council being assembled, His Excellency was pleased to command the attendence of the Legislative Assembly, and that House being present 149 Bills were assented to, in Her Majesty's name by His Excellency the Governor General, after which His Excellency was pleased to close the 3rd session of the 5th Parliament.

The prospect for a very heavy fruit crop was never better in the county of Essex, than at present, although the season is somewhat backward and the trees late in blossom, there can now be little fear entertained from frosts. The Apple orchards were covered with blossoms, and from the short crop last season there will be a tremendeous yield this. Peach trees that were not destroyed with the severe frosts of the winter of 1855 will yield abundantly. Of Cherries there will also be a great abundance, and in fact all other kinds of fruit trees make a promising show of an enormous crop.

We are happy to say that the fall wheat also looks well, in most of the townships and it is believed the yield will be far above the average. Barley looks well, and there has been more planted this spring than was ever before in this county, no doubt this was caused by the great demand and high price paid for that grain during the last winter.

There are favorable reports from all parts of the province of a large harvest.

CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST.

The June number of this highly interesting paper is again before us, and is filled with an extraordinary amount of useful and interesting matter for this particular season of the year, (Spring) this No. alone is worth more than the whole year's subscription, viz. 50 cents; who would be without it?

Great Riot in Washington—Six Persons Killed and 30 Wounded.

The telegraph is dum as an adder in relation to a large, serious and fatal riot which took place on election day in Washington city, on Monday last. The New York papers of yesterday bring us the first intelligences, but will not learn that any thing more than killed and a large number wounded:

Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 1.

Our city to-day has been the scene of the most intense excitement, riot and bloodshed.

A gang of organized desperated rowdies, some fifty in number, called the "Plug Uglies," arrived here this morning from Baltimore, for the purpose of defeating the Democratic ticket, and stamping intimidated citizens from the polls. They divided their forces, and part of them made a demonstration at the First Precinct of the Fourth ward, and another on the Second Ward polls. At the latter place their interference soon caused a fight, and some 15 or 20 shots were fired. A young man named John Ongley was shot in the knee. The citizens of this ward then turned out with arms and drove the rioters off.

At this time a desperate row had commenced at the First Precinct of the Fourth ward. The "Plugs" being reinforced by the "Rip Raps" and "Chunkers" of the city a terrible attack was made on the Anti Know Nothing voters with pistols, bowie knives and stones, many of them were driven from the polls. R. B. Owens, one of the Commissioner, had his hand shattered by a pistol shot. A. Klofer received a spent ball in his forehead. An Irishman was dreadfully beaten, so that his features could not be recognized, and several others received slight pistol-shot wounds.

Capt. Goddard, of the Police, had a strong force on the ground, but was driven back. The Mayor called on the President for a military force.

The "Plug-Uglies" repaired to the engine-house of the Annacostia Company, near the Navy-Yard, procured a small cannon or swivel, and marched to the battle ground. They passed by two companies of U. S. Marines, under Capt. Tyler, also marching to the scene of riot, who were hailed with hoots. The "Plug-Uglies" drew up with their cannon in front of the market-house on K. Street, fronting Seventh street. The Marines formed in on Seventh street. The Mayor addressed the crowd, and ordered it to disperse. Word was sent to him that if the Marines did not leave the ground, a difficulty would take place. An order was then given to charge, and the Marines took the cannon, amid a volley of pistol shots from the "Ping Uglies"—The Marines returned the fire, principally directed to the north west corner of the market-house. Five were killed and seventeen wounded. Mr. Alston, a grocer, was shot dead. P. F. Yell was shot badly in the leg. Col. Williams, of the Land Office, was shot in the arm. Col. Deems, of the Land Office, was mortally wounded. An old man, name unknown, was shot through the head and fell dead. An Irishman, name unknown, was mortally wounded in the abdomen. The cannon was captured, and the Marines then marched to the City Hall. Some thirty-five musket shots cut back and ball were counted on the northeast corner of the building, and on the dry goods store adjoining, some as high as the second story. The streets were all closed on Seventh street, for six squares. Twenty or thirty of the "Plug Uglies," escaped on the 8 P. M. train for Baltimore, and quiet was restored. It was then rumoured that the "Ping Uglies" had telegraphed to the chief to send reinforcements, when Col. Cooper, the Adjutant General telegraphed for the Flying Artillery at Fort McHenry.

Eight o'clock P. M.—The Baltimore train is in. The Marines marched to the depot to receive the "Ping Uglies," when it was ascertained that fifty had started, but had not arrived, owing to a want of finances. The Marines returned, and will remain under guard all night. The city is now quiet. UNO.

Prince Albert's Election—The Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston.

BOSTON, June 1, 1857.

The two hundred and nineteenth anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery, Hon. Marshal P. Wilder, commanding, was celebrated to-day with the usual military and social exercises.

At the dinner in Faneuil Hall a communication was read from Lord Palmerston, giving the history of the parent corps in London, of which Prince Albert is now commander.

Prince Albert was chosen an honorary member of the London company amid much enthusiasm, the band playing "God Save the Queen," and winding up with "Yankee Doodle."

Speeches following by ex-President Pierce, Gov. Gardner, Mayor Rice, Collector Austin, Ben Perley Poore, Josiah Quincy, Jr., Gen. John S. Tyler, and other distinguished citizens.

The principal officers commissioned for the ensuing year are Col. Thomas Chickering, Captain; Col. W. W. Bullock, First Lieutenant; and Capt. Charles A. Kimball, Second Lieutenant.

THE FIRES IN THE WOODS.—That ample cause existed for the smoke which prevaded the atmosphere around Kingston last Tuesday, we have further evidence besides that contained in Saturday's News. The Ogdensburg papers say that fires were raging last week in many parts of St. Lawrence County, by which some houses, barns, fuel, wood and other property were consumed.—At Potsdam, a dwelling house, barn and cooper shop were destroyed; and the Prescott Messenger of Friday, communicates the intelligence that the iron works of J. W. Skinner, at Brasher, in the same county, and every house in the village, save four or five, were burned on Thursday, and portions of the St. Lawrence Railway were burnt. A special despatch was received from Beauharnois, stating that a serious fire raged in the woods at that place, during Thursday night, and destroyed a considerable amount of property.—Kingston News.

AN IMPORTANT RAILROAD MOVEMENT.—We learn from the Niagara Falls Gazette that the Canandaigua and Niagara Falls Railroad was purchased at its recent sale by the English land-holders, and in fact the line is taked of connection with the Great Western Railway at Suspensnio Bridge is to be made immediately. An agent of the English Company is now in this country perfecting arrangements, and they will be prosecuted to an early completion. This looks as if a Great West was coming for this heretofore embarrassed road. The Great Western Railway can turn much of its travel that way by a little effort.—Lockport Courier.

The Planet says, of the coming Episcopal Election, that the period appointed for the election of a Bishop for the Western Diocese is rapidly drawing near, and the respective claims of the merits of the different candidates are daily being discussed more warmly than heretofore. The election comes off at London on the 8th of July, in St. Paul's Church. The Free Press of that city, in its issue of Friday last says it is expected that no interesting an occasion will attract a large number of strangers, and that the demand for seats from which to witness the interesting ceremony of the democratic appointment of a Bishop will far exceed those at the disposal of the Church-wardens. Admission will be by tickets.

We learn by the Chatham Planet the Bill empowering the formation of a Company for the construction of a Ship Canal from Chatham to the Road Erie Road—passing through the Town of Chatham—was read a third time and finally passed in the Legislative Council on Friday last the 6th of June.

Now it becomes the duty of the Provisional Committee to report in their Report —which is in course of preparation by Messrs Parkinson & Smith, of Buffalo, and thus place before the country the payability, the feasibility and the utility, of the immediate consummation of this splendid enterprise. There is no relaxation of energy now. A few more energetic moves, and we certainly will have the Canal in earnest.

Hard-up for a Hero.

General Walker, as the telegraph informed us on Saturday, and as the New York papers of Friday give us full accounts, landed at New Orleans, and was received with considerable marks of favour. Speaking of the scene, the New York Tribune does itself much credit by saying:—"General William Walker capitulated on the 1st inst., with all his forces, to Captain Davis, of the United States ship of war St. Mary's, by whom he was brought to this place, where, we are told, he was held a close prisoner by the Commodore. The next thing we hear of him he arrives at New Orleans in the Empire City, not as a prisoner of war, nor as a fugitive from justice, nor as a person held in waiver for piracy, robbery and murder committed abroad against citizens of the United States, but as a passenger; and on his arrival he would seem to have been received and welcomed by crowds as a patriot and a hero. The crowds should flock to see Walker, just as every great criminal always draws a crowd in his train, we can well understand; but that anybody should have for him any admiration or respect, or should view him in any other light than that of a poor creature, as destitute of ability as he is of honesty or humanity, we cannot very well understand."

The American papers devote a great deal of their space to a history of his achievements; but the Tribune, from which we have quoted, says that beyond murders plunder, and villany, there is little else to chronicle in his history. He will, however, be a vulgar hero for a day, and then will settle down as a pound keeper, or a killer of rabid dogs at the usual price of twenty-five cents a head.—Colonist.

The Brockville Monitor of Saturday thus alludes to the serpent in the St Lawrence:—Some time since we published a letter from a correspondent in Mallory town, relative to an enormous water serpent, seen at different times in that locality. A similar, or probably the same serpent, has been seen within the past few days, about three miles above Brockville by Mr. L. Parker of Three-mile Bay and D. Ladd. They both agreed it raised its body some 16 feet out of the water; and pursued their boat till it got within a few rods, compelling them to make for the shore as rapidly as possible. They describe the serpent as being over 30 feet long and of a lightish color. It was also seen at a distance by the crew of the. Protection.

The Delaware City Kansas correspondent of the Sun, who has conversed with Judge Stiles, Surveyor-General Burr, and others, from Utah, says the Mormons laugh at the idea of executive and companies of federal troops to enforce the obedience of the people in Utah. They express their determination to resist such an assumption of authority by the Government. Brigham Young, with 350 followers, left Salt Lake City April 20, to visit and treat with the Indians in the northern part of his territory—the Bannoko Flat Heaps and Nez Perces. It is supposed that the object of the mission is for the purpose of uniting the Indians in a war with Mormon forces, in preparation of a war with the United States, determined, if the war does commence, to secure possession of the country thereabouts, and put a stop to the emigration across the plains.

The Mormons claim that they number 75,000 souls in Utah alone. Gen. Burr thinks their population will not exceed half that number.—Every man and boy able to shoulder a musket is a soldier and required to perform military duty almost daily. They are thoroughly acquainted with the country and all of the mountain passes, and in case of a rupture with the U. S. troops they would be a very efficient force, and the war would require a large army to conquer.

A FINE THOUGHT HAPPILY EXPRESSED—Mr. Winthrop in his address before the Boston Music Association, made the following allusion to the Atlantic Telegraph:

"That Gigantic Ocean Harp, which is at this moment in process of being strung, whose deep diapason is destined to produce a more magical music on the sea, than old mythology or modern fable ever ascribed to siren, mermaid or Arion."

TORONTO June 6,

The supplies of produce to-day were light, and all offering moved off readily at full prices.

WHEAT—the transaction amounted to about 1,500 bushels,—being much less than on any other day during the week. Prices were better, ranging from 8s 9s 4d per bushel,—the part moving of at from 9s to 9s 3d. The advance is caused principally by the desire of buyers to complete cargos, and to induce a large supply.

FLOUR continues depressed with a limited enquiry.—Nominal quotation are, Superfine $6,35 @ $6.50; Fancy $7 @ $7,25; Extra $7,50 @ $8.—We doubt much if any of these outside figures could be realized.

SPRING WHEAT is wanted at 7s @ 7s 3d.

RYE is said to be worth 6s @6s 3d,

BARLEY is scarce and brings 8s.

OATS—The quantity of Oats in store here is about 20,000 bushels, with several cargoes afloat, amounting fully to 18,000 bushels. Under this heavy supply prices tend downward, and offers were made to day for lots over 1,000 bushels, at 3s 6d. The retail price is now 3s 9d @3s 10d.

POTATOES—Offered here and held firmly at 5s 6d @ 9s per bushel according to quality.

DETROIT, June 6.

FLOUR—"Order reigns in Warsaw." The transactions amount to nothing, in which the former quotations are fully maintained.

WHEAT—One of our millers this morning secured 100 bushels white at 1 75, and has contracted for 400 bu more at the same figure, This is the higest price paid by any parties this season.

CORN—Receipts heavy, and transactions limited. The would be a fair quotation,

OATS—Going at a little more readily at former quotations. A lot of 5000 bu sold at 52½c.

POTATOES—Inactive at 1@1 06.

PROVISIONS—15 bbls mess pork at $25. Mess beef held at 13. Hams held firmly at 14c.

FISH—Demand fair—kegs white at 10 75 for whole, and 5 75 for halves. Trout dull.

BUTTER—Market stagnant at previous quotations. Buyers seem to be waiting for a still further decline.

EGGS—Livery. Sales 10 bbls at 12½.

Married,

At the City of Detroit on the 7th of June inst., Mr. James Mercer of Sandwich, to Miss Grace Hill of Detroit.

At the City of Detroit on the 11th June inst., Johnson Richardson Esquire, in Her Majesty's Customs, to Miss Sarah Mercer, both of Sandwich.

Chinese Printing.

According to the best authorities, the art of Printing was known in China upwards of 900 years ago. In the time of Confucius B. C. 500, books were formed of slips of Bamboo; and about 150 years after Christ, paper was first made. A. D. 143, books were bound into leaves A. D. 900, printing was in general use. The process of printing is simple. The materials consist of a graver, blocks of wood, and a brush, which the printers carry with them from place to place, without wheel, or wedge or screw, a printer will throw off more than 2,500 impressions in one day. The paper — thin — can be bought for one fourth the price in China that it can in any other country. The works of Confucius six volumes, 400 leaves octavo, can be bought for nine pence—eighteen cents.

The Affidavit of the World.

It was a saying of the first Napoleon that there was no such word as impossible in the vocabulary of a great man. Difficulties which appal a mediocre intellect only stimulate the energies of a powerful mind. Mewton conceived the idea of mapping the skies and measuring the distance from planet to planet, from sun to system, and lived to execute it. The godlike Washington, determined in the name of Liberty and Justice, to resist the mightiest and the wealthiest government in the world—and we are free. Others have made successful war on the common enemy, DISEASE; and in the foremost rank of these champions of humanity we place Professor HOLLOWAY. Happily, we live in an age which does not delegate to posterity the duty of appreciating and rewarding its master minds. They carry with them the applause and gratitude of millions. So it has been with this extraordinary man. He has heard with his own ears the voice of approval which is to vibrate through the future. He has been the architect of his own fame, as well as future, and has seen with his own eyes the fabric which is to be his monument.

No remedies for the various disorders which afflict mankind have been so extensively used, so universally popular as Holloway's Pills and Ointment. It may, perhaps, be said, that the newspaper press of the day affords vast facilities for giving publicity to new inventions and discoveries. We admit it, but it must be also remembered that the same medium which affords this opportunities to the discoverer and inventor is open to all who may challenge the correctness of his theory or impugn the value of its practical results. HOLLOWAY'S Remedies for internal and external diseases stand before the world unattacked. The conclusion is irresistible. But this is not all. Their efficacy is not merely undenied, it is conceded by men of science, by incorporated institutions jealous of all innovations upon all rules and precedents, by governments watchful of the public interests and conservators of the public health. Even this is not the strongest evidence in their favor. The press may err, men of science may be mistaken, institutions may be deceived, governments may act hastily, but universal experiment is infallible.

Preparations that have been tested by millions of people, civilized, semi-civilized and savage, in every quarter of the globe, and that have NEVER FAILED to produce the promised results, have received the highest sanction which any invention is capable of receiving. In fact, it may almost be said of Holloway's Ointment and Pills, that they have been authenticated by the AFFIDAVIT OF MANKIND.—N. Y. Sunday Times.

Most of the brass mills in Connecticut, United States, are busy preparing the brass hoops which ladies wear in their skirts. The Winstead Herald says that the brass mills in Plymouth, United States, are engaged upon an order for 10,000 lbs of these styles of brass, and that an average of 700 lbs daily is sent to New York by railroad. The Waterbury mills are also manufacturing brass hoops. The ladies say however, that the steel hoops are the best, as they do not bend or break so easily as the brass ones.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with congestion of the Liver, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infections or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or where travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits. will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For that debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the invalid, however weakly from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy those delightful symptoms of a return to strong health, viz: good appetite sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting by Lawrence; also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York on each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,
Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, theliver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they never gripe the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are remedied or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dysentery,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhœa	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds.

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. 1f443

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Wednesday the

1st day of July next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 15, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Townsaip of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

The Curculio.

A gentleman from the County of Oxford informs us that the depredations of the Curculio have been absolutely prevented, and the plum crop secured from injury from that source, during the past two years, in his neighborhood by adopting the following plan:—The trunk of the tree should, before the branches is girdled with a coating of tar a few inches in breadth, on which wool is stuck, so as to form a complete woolly barrier. Beyond this neither curculio or caterpillar will ever pass, and as the insect seeks the branches only by climbing, not by flying the fruit is consequently saved.

If this remedy is as effectual as stated, and Mr. Moore, of Norwich, the gentleman alluded to, assures us that it has been attended with complete success, it is of the greatest importance to fruit growers, as from its simplicity it can be practised by every one, we hope our readers will give it a trial. The cultivation of the plum, although one of our best fruits, has almost been given up in despair during the past few years, from the ravages of the curculio, and we are therefore happy to have it in our power to give publicity to this simple, yet certain, nostrum to have been an original invention of some residents in Norwich, and the knowledge of it to have been hitherto confined to that quarter.

Food for Cows.

Dairymen state that on an average, the season through, the cream of fourteen quarts of milk is required to make a pound of Butter. Those who feeds pumpkins to his dairy cows claims that with this food nine quarts of milk will yield a pound of butter. Farmers and Dairymen who have tried pumpkin food state that their is invariably a large increase in butter and cheese.

As pumpkins can be raised at small expense, there is no reason why they should not become a profitable article of food for cows.

Woman in the Garden.—The Ohio Valley Farmer is in favor of a sphere in the Garden for Females. The opinion is well expressed thus:

"Much in these days is said about the sphere of woman. Of this vexed question we have nothing now to say. The culture of soil, the body and soul are our themes, rich soils, healthy bodies, pure, cultivated souls, these things are what we are aiming at. And to this end we recommend that every country woman have a garden that she keeps and dresses with her own hand, or at least that she supervises and manages.

The culture of strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, currants and garden vegetables are as delightful and profitable as anything in which woman can engage. She may sprinkle her garden well with flowers. All the better for that. A snowball in this corner, a rose in that, a dahlia bed there and a moss border here will not be out of place. Only let the substantial and useful constitute the chief part. A touch of the ornate like a ribbon on a good bonnet is not in the least objectionable.

In all the schools the girls study botany. In all families the women ought to practice botany. It is healthful, pleasing and useful. The principles of horticulture are the principles of botany put into practice. Farmers study agriculture, why should not their wives and daughters study horticulture? If any is better than this, we know it not. It is pleasurable none can be more so than this.

A rich bed of strawberries, a bush of blackberries or currants, a border of flowers produced by ones own hand, what can well afford a more rational satisfaction? We say have a garden, if it is only a small one, and do your best with it. Plant it with what pleases you best with a good variety, and see what you can do with it. What woman cannot have beets, tomatoes melons, onions, and furnish her own table with them?

What woman cannot plant a strawberry or currant or gooseberry, and tend it well? Come good woman study your health, your usefulness and happiness and your children's also.

Common Soap Suds—Are invaluable to every person who has a garden. Barrels of it are thrown foolishly away when it might be turned to golden account. Sprinkled judiciously on plants that have just appeared above ground, it effectually disgusts those hundred and one little insects that are bent on destroying the gardener's 'pets' in the tenderest and most important stage of their growth. Nothing could be better for destroying the insects that attack cabbages from the time they are transplanted until they are filling up. They also enrich the ground: the writer had, last year, a few hills of cucumbers and tomatoes, planted under very unfavorable circumstances, and from which a poor crop was anticipated; but by applying the sads in small quantities every evening they bore abundantly; the cucumbers at the rate of 50 or 60 every two days, which they kept up until cut off by frost in autumn, and the tomatoes, that were expected to die of sheer poverty, being treated in same manner, yielded a splendid supply of fruit. Save every gallon of soap suds that can, and if you never tried it before, don't allow the present spring to pass away without doing so.

Safety during Thunder Storms.—Many persons suffer greatly from fear of lightning during thunder storms; to such we say that thus far since steamboats have been in use, no cases of loss of life by lightning has occured in a steamboat or ocean steamer, in a period of fifty years or more, and no case of loss of life by lightning has ever been known in a railroad car. This wonderful exemption when it is considered that tens of millions of passengers have been conveyed by these two facilities, is extraordinary, and should cause a feeling of the timid during thunder storms, while in steamboats ocean steamers or railroad cars. No case of loss of life by lightning has been known in an iron ship or iron building—this fact, with those stated in the foregoing should effecually dispel the too prevalent belief that metals are dangerous, from an erroneously supposed attraction for lightning—metals conduct lightning, but the attractive power probably does not extend over a great amount of surface.—Vessels furnished with lightning conductors have never suffered injury from lightning if the conductors were up and the continuity uninterrupted to the water; nor has death by lightning ever been known on board of vessels thus furnished.—Scientific American.

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION

AND

DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,

IN THE BEAUTIFUL

TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, fifty minutes' walk or two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation for miles around, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of $25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 25 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c., a Brick Mill House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected necessary for the use and comfort of a family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, Cash, or approved Notes and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays,
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The fastest steamers on the lakes, and possessing of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points West of Buffalo to Chicago, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should have packages directed care of Messrs. Seymour, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to care of John Hosmer, agent, Detroit.

WABASH VALLEY,
(New Propeller,)

Which will run during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as speed facilities as those of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week, (Sundays excepted) Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable Route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandize, via

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over FIVE THOUSAND TONS BURTHEN, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandize for the transport of Property.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - - $25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches Pertaining Mercantile, has been greatly enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the United States.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable Practical Accountants of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, making the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to master the various notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions known to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition to the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, Practical and Ornamental, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DIAL LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the best location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

Trying to Please Everybody

One reader cries, your strain's too grave,
Too much morality you have,
Too much about religion;
Give me some witch or hazard tales,
Of slip-shod ghosts with fins and scales,
And feathers like a pigeon.

I love to read, another cries,
Those monstrous fashionable lies—
In other words, those novels,
Composed of kings, and priests, and lords,
Of border wars, and gothic hordes,
That used to live in hovels.

The man of dull scholastic lore
Would like to see a little more
Of first rate scraps of latin;
The grocer fain would learn the price
Of tea and sugar, fruit and rice:
The draper, silk and satin.

Another cries, we want more fun;
A wity anecdote or pun,
A rebus or a riddle:
Some wish for Parliamentary news.
And some perhaps of wiser views,
Would rather hear a fiddle.

A critic too, of classic skill,
Must dip in gall his gander-quill
And scrawl against the paper,
Of all the literary tools
Bred in our colleges and schools,
He cut the greatest caper.

Another cries, I want to see
A Jumbled up varity,
Variety in all things—
A miscellaneous hodge-podge print,
Composed (I only give the hint,)
Of multifarious small things.

I want some marriage news, says miss,
It constitutes my highest bliss,
To hear of weddings plenty,
For in a time of general rain
None suffer from drought, 'tis plain,
At least not one in twenty.

I want to hear of deaths, says one,
Of people totally undone
By losses, fire, or fever.
Another answer, full as wise,
I'd rather have the fall and rise
Or raccoon skins and beaver.

Some signify a secret wish
[illegible] IT WON'T
Of politics to suit them;
But here we rest at perfect ease,
For should they swear the moon was cheese
We never should confute them.

Or grave, or humorous, wild or tame,
Lofty or low, 'tis all the same,
To haughty or to humble;
So brother editor pursue
The path that seems the best to you,
And let the grumblers grumble.

An Adventure on Beechy Head.

In the line of lofty cliffs of chalk which forms the south-eastern boundary of England, the bold promontory, known as Beechey Head, is one of the most remarkable. Its elevation from the level of the sea, when it lies calm in the sunshine at its base, is five hundred and eighty eight feet; and as the situation of the cliff is one of the most exposed along the whole line of coast, it follows that a moderate breeze suffices to send the waters chafing and foaming up its rugged face. It will readily be believed, therefore, that in a south-westerly gale gigantic waves come rolling in with indescribable fury, bursting in thunder against the stupendous wall of chalk rock, and throwing sheets of foam half-way up its entire height.

It was on a fine afternoon in September in the year 1855, that three friends, young men, set out from the village of Eastbourne to walk to Beechy Head, the distance being about a mile and a half. One of the three was a collector of fossils, and he took with him the little hammer which he commonly used for breaking the lumps of chalk which so often contained specimens of antediluvian sharks' teeth, echini, and shells. Arriving on the beech below the cliff, they found the sea almost calm, and wandered about for some time searching for agates and pebbles; and one of the three—the fossil hunter—found among the shingles a large spike-nail, a relic, perhaps, of one of those fearful wrecks which are not uncommon at this awful point. Perhaps he held the superstitious opinion that it is lucky to pick up and preserve any pieces of old iron. At all events the spike nail was safely deposited in his pocket, and he wandered on intently searching for fossils along the base of the cliff, which frowned above his head. Presently he came to that spot where a portion of the topmost strata of chalk had crumbled away and fallen like an avalanche upon the beach below, forming a sloping rugged wall, to the height of about four hundred feet, with numerous crags and fissures, which might tempt a chamois or a hunted fox to search for a path-way, but which offered no likelihood of a hold for human feet. The fossil hunter was well, perhaps, proceed more easily and naturally in the language of the adventurer himself:

'I was so occupied with my search among the masses of chalk which lay at the foot of the cliff, that I had for a full half hour parted from my companions, and when I raised myself from my stooping posture to look for them I was surprised to find that I had gradually climbed a good way up a narrow shelving track, which seemed to present no obstacle to my further progress. My friends were not in sight; they had probably gone along the beach beyond the projection of the headland. It was of no consequence; I should see them presently; and so I continued my ascent, finding from time to time specimens which absorbed my attention, and made me quite regardless of the increasing difficulties of my path. On a sudden, however, I was startled by the scream of a sea-gull, and, looking up, was at once aware that I had reached a point of considerable danger—that, in fact, it would be quite impossible to retrace my steps for the last twenty or thirty feet that I had mounted and that I had no alternative but to proceed onward in hope of finding a track by which I could descend. In this situation I shouted to my companions; but they were not in sight nor could I perceive any moving object on the beach, which lay far below, or on the expanse of sea, over which the sun now glared through a rising fog-bank in the west—a blood red disk resting on the horizon. No time was to be lost; it would soon be dusk, and the peril of my path would be increased. At every step my foot becoming more and more insecure: and when my hand or foot loosened a fragment of chalk, down it went rushing and bounding, and disturbing any projection in its course, till I heard the sullen distant crash as they fell upon the beach below, and read in that sound a warning of my inevitable fate if I should lose my hold.

'But to retreat was impossible. I had now arrived at a point where the cliff rose perpendicularly overhead. About twelve or fifteen feet up was a fringe of grass, which gave me hope that there must be a ledge of rock, which would afford me a better footing. But how to reach it? How was it possible I could climb that wall? And should I fail? It was an awful moment. We talk of fervent prayer, and sometimes, when ensconsed in our cushioned pew at church we think that we are praying earnestly for blessings to be bestowed or dangers to be averted, but ah! how dull and languid are such prayers compared with the aspirations of him who is standing on the brink of destruction, alone, as it were with God while death hovers over him in the gathering shades of night! At such a time he does indeed feel his entire dependence on the sustaining power of Him who is 'mighty to save;' and his heart is strengthened and his nerves are braced while he remembers that 'the Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him in truth.'

'My situation was becoming desperate, and I recollected the spike nail I had found [illegible] IT WON'T pocket. With the hammer I dug out little hollows in the chalk for my feet, and then, driving in my spike above, I held it till I cut the next, and thus I proceeded in my slow and most hazardous task, till at the end of an hour, as nearly as I could guess, and just as the dim twilight deepened into night's darkness, I succeeded in clambering up the grassy ledge. Success was it! I was at a height of four hundred feet, at least, and above me the cliff rose nearly two hundred feet more—its bald and rugged top rather overhanging the narrow shelf on which I was crouching, so that to climb it, even if I had nerves of iron, would have been entirely hopeless.

'At this moment my hammer which had rendered me such good service, slipped and fell. I dared not watch its fall down that frightful precipice; but I heard the clinking sound as it struck two or three times against projections in its course, and it sounded on my ear like a funeral knell.

'It was now nearly dark, but I could just perceive two or three moving figures on the beach, and I shouted to them with all my might, but the distance was great, and the noise of the waves upon the shingles must have drowned my voice. I saw them walk leisurely away, and, commending myself to the providential care of Him who had preserved me thus far, I made up my mind to the necessity of spending the night where I was, with the faint hope that at daylight I might be able, by hoisting a signal of distress, to obtain assistance.

'But now a new difficulty began to press upon me; hunger thirst, and fatigue were taking hold of me; my hands swollen and wounded, and my finger nails worn down by grappling with the rock, caused excessive pain. Yet, in spite of all this, I began to feel a drowsiness which I dared not indulge; for there was no friendly branch or twig to which I could fasten myself, and to fall asleep on that narrow shelf of rock would be to fall into the sleep of death.

'From this imminent peril I was preserved in a manner which, while I live, will, I trust, ever dwell in my memory, and serve to raise my aspirations of gratitude to Him, whose merciful providence is over all his creatures, and who in the hour of my misery and distress sent me help in the form of a friendly sea-bird. A scream, and then the flapping of a sea-gull's wing, roused me from my stupor. It came and went as the bird wheeled around me, and sailed away far far below. Another came and went, and came again; and thus the pair hovered about me in the darkness, through the weary hours of that fearful night, and their screaming notes, and the flapping of their long wings, so near my head, were sounds which, perhaps, no music in my ears, bidding me to look up to him who alone had the power to save me from destruction. No doubt the poor birds had their nest in some crevice near me, and their natural efforts to scare away an invader of their territory proved the means of safety to me. I looked wistfully towards the east, and longed—O, how earnestly!—for the day.

'At length the first streak of light appeared, and from that moment my eyes were turned constantly to the beach below, in the hope of descrying some fisherman, for I knew they were often early at their work. the light gradually increased, and I was just beginning to be enabled to observe some objects at a distance, when to my great joy I saw a man close to the water's edge. Happily there was little or no wind, and I had the better chance of making myself heard. I waved my hat and my white handkerchief, using my hands as a speaking trumpet; presently the man stopped, and turning slowly round, stood gazing at me. I renewed my shouts, and was answered. The sound of his voice rose distinctly to my ear, backed as I was by the reverberating rock.

'Hold on a bit,' he said 'and I'll tell the coast guard people.'

Here was a ray of hope; but how could they help me? There was but one way that appeared possible—they might lower ropes from the top of the cliff, but should I have the courage or strength required for the ascent? Yes, if it comes to that, I must find resolution to meet a danger which scarcely equalled that to which I had been already exposed. I knew not how long a time elapsed; but it seemed hours before I saw or heard anything of the promised assistance. At last I heard through the still morning air, a voice above my head, and looking up, saw the heads of two men projecting over the edge of the cliff: they were lying on their faces and were lowering a rope; it looked but a thread as it swung gently backward and forward in the morning breeze, and when at last it reached the place where I stood, it was a swinging more than a yard from me, because the edge of the cliff projected so much. It was shaken, however, by the men, and still swinging backward and forward. Watching my opportunity, I caught the end and drew it towards me. It had a loop tied in sailors' fashion, and I knew that could not slip; but alas! the line was but small, and I much doubted if it could bear my weight—perhaps the men had underrated that—for I was near six feet high, and weighed nearly two hundred pounds.

'Will it bear me?'

'Ay, ay,' was the answer, 'have you any pluck?'

'Ay, I hope so,' was my reply.

'Then make it fast around your body, and swing yourself quietly off—steady, now.'

I question whether any criminal when submitting his neck to the gentle attentions of the hangman, ever experienced a more [illegible] than I stood on my brow, and my heart beat audibly as I passed the cord around my chest, and secured it in front with the best knot I was master of. Then I kneeled and looked up to the clear sky, and in a few fervent words commended myself to the Divine protection.

'Say when you are ready!—

I looked up, waved my hand, and cried—

'Now!' and feeling the rope tightening and lifting me, swung myself from the ledge, keeping my eyes fixed on the cliff as I found myself slowly rising. Presently there was a stop, and looking up, I found that I was still about a hundred feet from the top. I could see but one of the men's heads, and he was in the act of removing a large fragment of chalk which had been disturbed by the friction of the rope, and which, if it had fallen on my head, must have killed me instantly. It did succeed in removing it, but, as I afterward learned, I was held by his one companion alone while his hands were so occupied. Again I began to ascend, and hope returned. I heard the voice of my deliverers as they gave each other the word to haul together; and I rose, and rose, and at last felt my wrists seized by a friendly grasp, and fell stretched out upon the turf. I just heard the hurrah that was uttered, and for a time lost all consciousness.

When I revived, I found myself in bed at a little inn, where by the aid of kind and watchful care, such as English hearts and hands are ever ready to bestow. I recovered in a few hours from the effects of my perilous adventure.

A Temperance Story.

I was in the medical staff of the army during the revolutionary war. I was rather young to be there. My constitution was one of the best. Had it been otherwise I should no doubt have fallen a victim to the habits which I contracted in early life. My tendencies were convivial; temptation to intemperate drinking and gambling were always present, and importunate; we were a clique by ourselves, with no one to molest or make afraid; and no one thought himself degraded by being drunk.

I married very early in life when I was little better than a boy. The girl that I married was thought to be a great deal too good for me by everybody but herself. I, was not intemperate then; and for a time my wife and our little home seemed all the world to me. She had a little property, and in about a year after our marriage she gave birth to a daughter. Bad habits soon got the mastery of my better feelings. The attractions of the gay circle at tavern, or the quarter of some comrade became irresistible, and the very consciousness of the neglect to which I was subjecting the woman whom I had promised to love and to cherish, began to make her presence undesirable, and home a place of mental and moral punishment. Qualms and struggles, and gnawing of the worm that dies not, doubtless there were, but I was not far between, but were irresistible. I was lost. I knew it.

'The details of a thousand cases are much the same. The little modicum of property that my wife brought me dwindled away, piece after piece. Where had it gone? Down my insatiable throat! I had swallowed it or gambled it away! No memorial remained but rags and tatters! We were very poor. A more uncomplaining woman God never made. She struggled to hide even her tears, to save me from pain on her account.

Let me pass over some three years of misery, and come at the conclusion of the whole matter. One bleak December morning I was about going forth, as usual, from my wretched habitation, when my wife put her hand upon my shoulders, and pointing first to our sick child, and then to a few brands upon the hearth, reminded me that those were the last, and that it was bitter cold. As I turned away, I promised to send her some fuel immediately.

I soon met some of my comrades, and resorting to the tavern, we passed the hours as usual drinking and revelry, until near midnight, when I staggered homeward. It was piercing cold. I reached my door-step and placed my hand upon the latch—then it first occured to me that I had wholly forgotten my promise—I had sent home no fuel! I entered the apartment. A light was still burning. The hearth was still cold. My wife sat rocking her sick child in the cradle. She turned her eyes upon mine The last I saw streaming down her shivering cheeks. "Wife," said I, "for Heaven's sake, when will you leave off crying.' "Dear husband," said she, "when you leave off drinking." "God help me," I exclaimed, as I put my arm around her neck, for the appeal was irresistible, "God help me, and I will never touch another drop."

By God's help, I never have to the present hour; and from the date of that resolution the days of our uninterrupted happiness began.—Boston Traveller.

ANECDOTE OF REV. DR. BARNES.—Being somewhat (as even younger men might be) inclined to sleep a little during the sermon a friend who was with him in his pew one Sunday, lately having joked him on his having nodded now and then, Barnes insisted that he had been awake all the time." Well then," said his friend, "can you tell me what the sermon was about?" "Yes I can," he answered; "it was about an hour and a half too long."

"What dogs are these, Sandy," inquired a gentleman the other day, of a Scotch lad who was dragging a couple of waspish looking curs along a street in Jersey City, near the depot. "I dinna ken, sir," replied the urchin, "they cam' wi' the railway, and they ate the direction, and dinna ken what to gang."

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT.—A clergyman, engaged in catechising a village school, asked a young ster "what godfather and godmothers did for him?" "I don't know what they mean to do, please your reverence," rejoined the lad "they've done nothing for me yet."

VIVA VOCE.—a green member of the Nebraska Legislature, when the election of the Assistant Clerk came up, called out" Mr. Speaker, I move we vote vice versa." The whole house burst into a roar, and not knowing what it meant, greeny asked his right hand man if it was not in order, adding that he "didn't know any thing about these d—d parliamentary rules!"

A SEAMAN having his leg shattered by a ball during an engagement underwent amputation with the greatest indifference to pain. When the limb was off, it was of course immediately thrown overboard upon which Jack called out to the man who had performed the last office for his departed leg: "I'll complain of you to the captain. Although you were ordered to throw my leg overboard, you had no right to throw my shoe with it!"

A HINT IN SEASON.—At a banquet when solving enigmas was one of the diversions, Alexander said to his courtiers: "What is that which did not come last year; has not come this year, and will not come next year? A distressed officer, starting up said: "It certainly must be our arrears of pay." The king was so diverted, that he commanded him to be paid up, and also increased his salary.

"My son, what did you bite your brother for? Now I shall have to whip you. Don't you remember the "Golden Rule' I taught you? If you wouldn't like to have your brother bite you, you shouldn't bite him." "Ho mother—get out with your whipping! Remember the "Golden Rule' yourself. If you wouldn't like me to whip you, 'taint right for you to whip me!"

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Extraordinary Cure of Erysipelas.—Mrs. Emma Rowcroft, aged 42, of St. Paul, Minnesota Territory, suffered severely from periodical attacks of erysipelas in the face, to which she appeared to have a constitutional predisposition. In July last she had a return of the complaint, with unusually violent and dangerous symptoms, and under the advice of a friend from New York, obtained a lot of Holloway's Ointment, and applied it according to the directions. The result amazed as well as delighted the unfortunate sufferer and her family. The inflammatory symptoms subsided; the redness faded in the course of a few days to a yellowish hue, and the cuticle, or scarf skin, on the parts affected, came off in the form of a whitish scurf. A second box completed the cure, leaving neither scar nor blemish on the face. The Pills are as efficacious in subduing internal disease, as the Ointment is in removing all external disorders.

It is very well that the youth of our country should get high, but they should do so just as the oaks do by drinking water.

Delivery of Townsend, the notorious Robber and Assassin, to the Canadian Authorities

It is pretty well known that Townsend has for some time been confined in Cleveland Jail, having been identified by Mr. Iles, lately of this city but now of Cleveland, as the notorious robber and murderer. The United States authorities applied to the Canadian Government to know if they should deliver him up, and after the certain identity of the prisoner had been established, this has been done. He has been brought to Canada under a "letter of Extradition," under the authority of the Ashburton treaty. The order for his delivery was signed by Lord Napier, the British Minister at Washington. At an early hour on Tuesday, the 9th inst., Townsend was brought from Cleveland to Port Stanley in the steamer Telegraph, by Mr. Trotter, the Sheriff of this district in which the arrest took place, assisted by officers Spangler and Tupper of the Cleveland Police, and also accompanied by Mr. Iles, who had procured his arrest. The prisoner was securely manacled both hands and feet. His appearance, taking into consideration the crimes for which he was arrested, does not betray those ferocious traits which we should look for in his countenance. In person Townsend is about 5 feet seven inches high, muscular frame, but not fleshy. His face was pale and haggard, doubtles caused by his confinement in jail, and attendant anxieties. He wore a rowdy hat, pepper and salt shooting coat' Canadian grey trousers. His whole manner shewed an affected, jaunty air. He smoked his cigar, chatted, played tunes with his manacles, and put on an indifference which was well assumed.

On his arrival at Port Stanley, Townsend and the party were met by Mr. Vanvalkenburgh, the chief of the London police. The cars were then taken for London, where the party arrived by the first train. We should not omit to state, however, that a close watch was kept on the prisoner by the officers in charge, as from his manner on board the steamer, it was thought he contemplated suicide by jumping over the side of the vessel. On alighting from the Port Stanley cars, Townsend was conveyed in a cab to the Great Western Railway station, where he was put on board the 10.10 train going east, on his way to Cayuga, the scene of his murders, to wait his trial. A large number of people were assembled at the Port, St. Thomas, and London, to catch a glimpse of the notable culprit. He was placed in the baggage car to avoid the undue crowding of the curious.

The principal crimes for which Townsend is called upon to answer—for there is no longer any doubt that the man is he—are, the murder of Mr. Nelles, merchant, of Cayuga, during the fall of 1854, and the shooting of the constable Ritchie, when the latter arrested him about a fortnight after at Port Robinson. The first murder arose as follows:—He presented himself at the store of Mr. Nelles, who was, by the way, related to Dr. Nelles, coroner of this city, and Mr. Nelles, of the "One Horse Tavern," at about ten o'clock at night, demanding his money. Mr. Nelles, who was a powerful man shut the door, and grappled with the robber, when a struggle ensued, and both fell on the floor. While in this position, Townsend drew his revolver, and shot Mr. Nelles in the abdomen, the ball taking an upward direction through his bowels. The effect of the wound was not instant death, Mr. Nelles living some hours afterwards. After Townsend had released himself from the grasp of Mr. Nelles, he escaped, and all traces of him were for some time lost, till Mr. Ritchie a constable saw him at Port Robinson, and placing his hand on his shoulder, said, "Townsend, you are my prisoner." To this Townsend replied "take your hand off me," which Ritchie not doing, the former drew a pistol, and passing his wrist over his shoulder, shot Ritchie in the throat as he was standing behind him. A second time he made his escape, and remained at large for three years, till recently apprehended. During this time, several people have been apprehended on suspicion of being Townsend but it remained for Mr. Iles to secure the real villian. There now remains little doubt that Townsend will speedily meet with that reward he so richly deserves.

Virtue of a Note of Hand. — Our readers, says the London Free Press, should bear in mind that a very important modification of the law respecting Bills of Exchange has taken place this Session, which will shortly come into operation. The new law gives power to the holder of a note of hand or Bill of Exchange to go before a County or other Judge, and obtain a summary judgment against the acceptor, unless it appears to the Judge that the defence is one that requires more formal trial. After judgment, execution is to go in fifteen days instead of in the succeeding term after judgment as is the rule at present. It often happens that a note is given to oblige the grantee, and not in accordance with the terms of sale. Under the new law a note assumes a form of little else than a 'confession of judgment,' as execution can be levied on the acceptor within fifteen days after a failure to meet the note. It will not be to the interest of traders therefore to accept notes to oblige creditors, as it places a powerful instrument in their hands which can be used most disasterously. No doubt the effect of the Act will be to limit credit to a very great extent, and drive out of use a large number of bills of exchange which take the place at present of a circulating medium. While the Usury Laws are driving capital away from the country, the Banks at this time having a circulation of £1,500,000 less than that of six months since, the recent enactment will fall with peculiar severity on trade, A person will now reflect that upon signing a note, he is making a stick wherewith to break his own back, unless indeed he can so calculate upon receipts, that the note is sure to be met. In these times, however, when receipts are uncertain—so 'few and far between'—such calculations are not arrived at with any amount of certainty.

The Belleville Intelligencer says; On the 25th inst., some five or six men were returning from training on the east side of the river, in the township of Hungerford, and stopped at a store kept by H. O'Donnell, in Stoco Village, where a fight ensued between them and a number of persons who were there, which resulted in the the death of Mr James Charlton.

His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to close the third session of the fifth Provincial Parliament with the following

SPEECH:

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

When I opened this session of the Legislature I recommended to your especial consideration certain subjects, on which, in your addresses, you assured me you were ready to deliberate. On the present occasion at the close of the session, it was my welcome duty to thank you for the manner in which you have fulfilled these assurances, and for the labour which you have bestowed on the general business of the Province.

Every one of the matters which I ventured to submit to you have been dealt with by the wisdom of Parliament.

The state of our Prisons and Lunatic Asylum—the Administration of the Law in Lower Canada the improved organization of the Civil Service—the encouragement of Arts and Agriculture—and the welfare of the Indian tribes—all these have become the sbuject matter of fresh legislation.

You have not failed to show your impartial zeal for the progress, of the Province, and for the increase of settlement in every direction. The valleys of the Ottawa and the St. Maurice, and our western frontiers towards the territory of the Hudson's Bay Company, have alko received consideration at your hands.

I earnestly hope that our efforts on all these important subjects may be crowned with success, and that the measures devised by your wisdom will be promptly and effectually carried out by the agency of the servants of the Queen.

In submitting to the decision of her most Gracious Majesty the final choice of a Seat of Government for Canada, you have done that which, without derogating from the rights of the Colonial Parliament, will remove from its walls a constant source of hart burning and local jealousy.

By generously postponing your line on the Grand Trunk Railway, you will, I conceive, infuse new vigour into an association the interests of which are inseparably connected with those of United Canada; I, myself, view with much satisfaction the complete separation of the Executive Government from the direction of the commercial body.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

In the Queen's name I thank you for the supplies which you have liberally granted for her service.

The additional appropriation for the Ocean Steamers, will give a fresh impulse to the trade of the St. Lawrence, and the power given me to meet the overtures of the Imperial Government for the better lighting of the Gulf will tend to promote the same important object.

By your votes in aid of the Militia you have responded to the zeal and loyalty of the people, and you appear to admit the fact that the growing importance of Canada demands a military organization of your own, in some degree at least corresponding to the position which you hold.

I rejoice that you have repealed the anomalous tax for the support of the Lunatic Asylum in Upper Canada, and that you have appropriated a sum which may be applied for improving our communications with the Red River.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen:

I am bold enough to believe that the experience of the present session in the working of the Legislative Council, composed, as it now is, partly of those named by the Crown, and partly those chosen by the people, gives strong assurance of ultimate success. The test is, I know, as yet imperfect, but from what I already see, I anticipate with confidence the continued action among you of a second Legislative body capable in itself of calm deliberation, firm in its loyalty to our Sovereign, and strong in the consciousness of popular support.

My earnest prayer is that Providence may bless the produce of your lands and the increase of your trade, and that our people, whilst rejoicing in the full measure of prosperity, may be kept from those snares of rash speculation and improvidence, which sometimes attend on such a state of things.

Once more, I thank you for your diligence in the work of Legislation, and I release you from such work for the present by proroguing the Parliament.

The Speaker of the Legislative Council then said:

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council and of the Legislative Assembly:

It is his Excellency the Governor General's will and pleasure, that this Provincial Parliament be prorogued until Monday the Twentieth day of July next, to be here held, and this Provincial Parliament is accordingly prorogued until Monday, the Twentieth day of July next.

The whole ceremony occupied about two hours.

Marriage of Eminent Persons.—People about to marry, who wish to know the proper age, are referred to the following precedents:—

Adam and Eve	0	Luther	42
Addison	44	Mozart	25
Aristotle	37	Old Parr, last time	120
Ben Johnson	21	Penn	28
Burke	26	Peel	32
Brahe	27	Shakspeare	18
Byron	27	Scott	26
Burns	30	Sterne	28
Bonaparte	27	Sir Wm. Jones	37

Linnæus	39

If Adam and Eve, got married before they were a year old, and the veteran Parr buckled to a widow at 120, bachelors and spinisters may wed at any age they like, and find shelter under great names for early marriages or late.

The Election of a Bishop to the new Diocese of London, will take place in London on the 8th of July. Archdeacon Bethune and Dr. Cronyn, Rector of London, are the candidates for the fat berth, and just now a warm newspaper discussion is being carried on upon the merits of the two rev. gentlemen.

The Admission of Jews to Parliament.

Lord Palmerston has in very deed introduced a measure for modifying the oath to be taken by members of Parliament, with a view to remove the obstacle now existing to the admission of Jews to seats in the Commons House. The Premier made a handsome apology to Lord John Russell for taking the matter out of his hands, which Lord John Russell as handsomely accepted, frankly stating that so long as the object was accomplished he cared not who had the honour of it. The new oath is simple in form. It does not appear that the word 'swear' applies to any part of it but that in which it strengthens the "promise" of fidelity to the reigning Sovereign.—The persons who take these obligations, "will do their utmost endeavors to disclose" conspiracies, 'faithfully promising' to maintain the succession, 'utterly renouncing and abjuring' all unfounded claims and pretensions and 'declaring' that no other prince, person, prelate, &c., than the legitimate monarch, has, or ought to have, spiritual power with the realm. Neither the formula, 'So help me God,' nor the words, 'On the true faith of a Christian,' appended to the proposed oath. In asserting the particular claims of the Jews whom the omission of the last words admits, the noble viscount remarked that, though he had heard of many Jews becoming Christians, he had not heard of one Christian becoming a Jew—a remark which he reduced into a general truth by enunciating the principle, that "the progress of mankind is governed by laws which admit of no retrogression." The Premier builds his hopes of carrying the point on this foundation—that the House of Lords, as he phrases it, "may give away to an impulse proceeding from a new House of Commons." Neither its newness, however, nor the largeness of the majority which it is doubtless prepared to give the ministry, discourages Sir Frederick Thesiger from threatening strenuous opposition. A stiff debate, therefore, will precede a strong division, the bill standing for the second reading on the 8th of June.

SANDWICH, JUNE 18, 1857.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY JOBBING AGAIN.

We have been informed that it has been stated by Mr. Rankin that an offer of £25,000 has been made him, by Mr. Buchanan for the purpose of inducing Mr. Rankin to withdraw any opposition to the present Board of directors, of the Amherstburg and St. Thomas Railway and to use what influance he may pessess, to enable them at once to proceed with the Road. Coming from this particular quuarter, we are of course unable to state whether such be the case or not. His answer to the proposition is certainly appropriate, as coming from "The victim of injured innocence" which in his own words would read as nearly as possible, thus; That he would rather earn his living as a shoe black than accept the bribe that he was yet determined to defeat the old charter and obtain one over which he will have the entire control. Now is not this patriotic, in the extreme and will not the member for Essex, go through the County with this scarecrow to induce his constituants to believe him the same "victim" of injured innocence" and that he was only working the County's good when he was willing to accept from Mr. Zimmerman the £25,000 which he now spurns so indignantly from him! times indeed have changed, and so have men! Will the Electors of Essex believe in this trash and again be deceived, we trow not.

FIREMAN'S JOURNAL.

We have received a number of the Fireman's Journal published in Detroit and from the manner in which it is got up, gives it quite the appearance of a spicy sheet. All matters relating to firemen are ably dealt with, and many subjects of particular interest to them will appear from time to time, and as a family paper is equal to any published.

A communication from Mr. Weaver upon the subject of drainage will appear in our next.

The Crops.

PROSPECT IN CANADA AND THE STATES

At this moment the prospect of the approaching harvest from an absorbing topic with all classes of the community. From our exchanges we select the following information as to the state of the crops in various localities:—

IN CANADA.

The following has been received from the township of Metcalf:—The fall wheat crop in this section of the county will not be an average one; but there is a great quantity of spring wheat sown, which, with a favourable season, may make up the wheat crop to an ordinary one; I think, on the whole, there is not more lan1 in wheat this year than was in 1856, It is just begining to grow nicely now, owing to the late splendid spring weather we have had, but it is too early in the season to give a decided opinion on the matter, while the crops are at least two weeks later than usual, owing, I suppose, to the cold, wet spring. With other spring crops I think there will not be the usual quantity put in this spring, a general want of seed being felt, and that, together with the high prices it has been sold at, has prevented many from exceeding, and others from coming up to their usual quantity of oats, peas, potatoes, &c. All these crops that are over ground are promising, but are late. The meadows are also looking well, and the fruit trees promise a bountiful supply at present.—London Prototype.

We understand from the farmers of this neighborhood, that the crops are all in a promising condition, and they anticipate that if the weather proves favourable there can be no doubt of a very heavy crop this season. A farmer from Mornington the other day told us that he believed the crops were more promising in that township than in some of the older townships.—Stratford Beacon.

Owing to the sterile changeable weather during the past spring, the wheat has suffered severely in exposed situations; indeed, to such an extent has this been the case, that in a number of instances the ground has been re-sown with Spring grain. The somewhat more propitious weather which we have had recently, has much improved its appearance; yet, when closely examined, the extreme thinness of the plant does not warrant the conclusion that an average yield will be realized. Past experience has invariably proved, that when the plant is thin it grows too luxurious, does not ripen regalarly, and seldom escapes the rust. The excessive severity of the winter has materially damaged the Clover plant, which will to some extent effect the Hay crop. Farmers should, if possible, make up for this deficiency by sowing a greater breadth of that very useful, but hitherto much neglected root, the Sweedish Turnip. The appearance of spring grain in general is very promising, although in some cases, where it was sown in a cold wet "seed bed," it is otherwise. However, should the weather now set in warm, with frequent showers. "Our Agricultural Prospects" would very much improve; and from the great increase in the breadth sown, the yield may equal by gone easons.—Guelph Advertiser.

In no part of the country do the looks of things wear a more promising aspect than in Lincoln County, and especially so in Grantham township. The previous rains and the intervening fine weather following, together with the recent rain of yesterday, performed an incalculable amount of good and improved the appearance of things wonderfully. The fruit trees have all the signs of vigor, the blossom's being fair, full and rich looking. Judging from the present thriving condition of the peach trees, we can see nothing apparent as yet to prevent the gathering of a heavy crop, as not the least perceptible indication of disease, which at other seasons many have discovered even thus early, have been observed in the tree or blossoms. As might be expected, the meadows and pastures are brilliantly green and heavy, the effect, of which are easily perceivable in the rounding out and vastly improved condition of cattle, who had suffered greatly from the protracted severity of last winter. The wheat looks favourable every where, the spring crop exceedingly so, and farmers confidently assert that better looking wheat symptons were never seen in his country, and that nothing can prevent good times next fall unless drought, or the midge, whose depredations cannot be perceived until the wheat comes to a head.—Grain of every description is in the same hopeful condition, The farmers in this and other localities, have certainly obtained some agricultural wisdom, and are proving it not only by the quantity, but by the variety of seed they have sown this season. They have put in a little of everything. with plenty of buckwheat, corn, oats, beans, turnips, carrots, in fact a general assortment. This is a wise precaution, and well calculated to prevent occuring again the serious consequences, arising from putting in too little seed last spring, the product of which being principally wheat, hay corn and potatoes, were either cut off by the midge, drought or by frost, which materially damaged the latter two in the month of August.—St. Catherines Post.

The fall wheat throughout this county, except on hilly and heavy clay land, on some of which there will not be half of the usual yield, has a very promising appearance, though of course, the harvest will be late.—Spring wheat, indeed all kinds of spring crops everywhere look remarkably well, and promise an abundant yield. The lateness of the spring has been exceedingly favourable for all kinds of fruit.—Brantford Expositor.

Death from the Bite of a Spider—A large framed, muscular man, thirty years of age, named Hartshorn, of Newton, Upper Falls, was awakened last Saturday morning by a stinging pain just above his right elbow, radiating from a small red spot. On searching the bed, a small black spider was discovered where his arm had rested. The swelling rapidly extended down the arm during the day; on Sunday he vomitted nearly all day; on Monday he was seized with pain in his bowels, which continued with frightful severity until he died, at 5 o'clock.—Walthman, (Mass.) Sentinel.

HEAD QUARTERS.
TORONTO, 4th June 1857.

MILITIA GENERAL ORDERS.

ACTIVE FORCE.

No. 1.—His Excellency the Governor General and Commonder in Chief, desires that no Man shall be enrolled as a Volunteer in any Corps of the Active Force of the Province who has served in another Corps, except such Volunteer shall have been legally discharged from the Corps he has previously served in, and Officers Commanding Corps of the Active Force shall enquire from every Volunteer offering to enter the Corps under their Command, whether such Volunteer has previously served in another Corps, and if so, shall satisfy themselves that he has been legally discharged before they enter him on the Service Roll of the Battery, Troop or Company.

No. 2. His Excellency the Commander in Chief desires to draw the particular attention of all Officers commanding Corps of the Active Force, to the necessity of forwarding their Quarterly Returns as soon as they are due, according to the printed instructions on the first page of the Return, as much inconvenience and correspondence is caused by their non-compliance with the Order on the subject.

New Conterfeits on Canada Banks.—We give below all the bad notes in circulation on the Canada banks, at least all we have ever seen:—

Zimmerman Bank. 5s and 10s. altered from 1s. Vignette of genuine 1s., female, anvil, hammer, Clifton House on left; the other denominations are different.

Bank of Montreal. 5s. Vig. cattle on left end; eagle between the signatures; steamer on upper corner; shading on back ground of vignettes, coarse.

10s. Vig. Britannia with spear and shield. Parliament is spelt without the "a"—on left side of note.

Bank of Upper Canada. 10s. Letter C—an excellent imitation. Engraving looks rather dark, especially the X at the bottom.

20s. All we have seen of this class are old style of plates, and dated 1818.

City Bank of Montreal. 10s. British coat of arms, male bust on left end. Has rather a bluish tint. Parliament spelt without an "a."

Commercial Bank, Midland District, Kingston. 10s. Vig. Mercury in the clouds, with 10 and scalds each side, X. Roses and thistles on the left. The whole appearance is too dark.

1s, 2s, 4s, 5s, and 10s altered from the Foreign and Domestic Exchange Company of New York. See name of bank and town to detect.

Gore Bank, Hamilton. 10s and 50s. altered from a broken Michigan Bank. See title of bank pasted on.

Niagara District Bank. Several altered bills have appeared, changed from the smaller to higher denominations; mostly 1s made into 5s and 10s.

Quebec Bank. 10s. Vig. male and female; also female on each end. Very imperfect.

The Globe says, we have a report from Great Salt Lake that the schism in the Mormon church has assumed a formidable character. Bringham Young is said to have deserted the Tabernacle and remains shut up in his own house, guarded night and day by his friends. He is afraid to show himself in public.

The Decimal Currency.—The Bankers of the Province have resolved to adopt in their accounts the computation of dollars and cents, from the first of January next, and advise all parties thereof for their guidance in relation to the drawing of bills, &c.

The Montreal Witness states that crowds of French Canadian young men are leaving that city and Lower Canada this season for California, and Minnesota, and other points of the Great West. As many as one hundred and fifty have gone in a single company.

Hurrah for Canada.—It will be seen that the Canadian steamer North American and the famed New York Commodore's crack boat, the Vanderbilt, sailed from England on the same day—the 3rd inst.—and that the North American won the race by nearly a day, having anchored in the River on Saturday night.

The Canada Lead-Pipe Company.—We are very glad to learn that a company from Scotland have determined to establish in this city a factory for the manufacture of lead pipes. We believe it will be the first of the kind in this city or Province. There can hardly be a subject in which the public have deeper interest than the establishing of such manufactures among us. They contribute to the national prosperity in many ways. Lead pipes are now consumed in large quantities in this Province, and the prospect is that the demand will increase. The new factory promises to be an important addition to the manufactures of Montreal. We wish it every success.—Mont. Gazette.

Self Starvation.—The Chicago Journal publishes a most mysterious and astounding case of self-starvation by an old lady 55 years of age, in that city, of respectable connections, who became a victim of the spiritual humbug a MEDIUM and a speaker. She declared that through the medium of the spirits she had received commands from Heaven to eat or drink no more, and accordingly partook of neither food nor drink for some three weeks, at the end of which time she died. It is a most melancholy case of superstition, weakmindedness and death.

Printers in Pennsylvania.—It is a singular fact that not only the two United States Senators from Pennsylvania and the State Supreme Judges, but the present Speaker, Clerk, and Assistant Clerk of the House, the Clerk of the Senate of Pennsylvania, and the Democratic candidates for Governor and Canal Commissioner, are all practical Printers.

A Curiosity.—A live seal was caught yesterday in Plymouth harbor, and brought to this city. He was very young and very singular, apparently not more than a week old, and made a most piteous moaning like a young calf. His face was very intelligent, and handsomer than a dog, and he was as soft as velvet. Some old salts who inspected the odd animal at the Fairhaven Ferry, agreed that they had never seen such a prodigious curiosity.—N. B. Mercury.

Why Filbuster Walker went to Washington.

It is a matter of some surprise that Gen. Walker should take the earliest opportunity to visit Washington, where he has now arrived, but if we may rely upon the following, which we find in the New Orleans Delta, the act is not at all suprising:

Some such considerations as these have, perhaps had weight with the Government, for it is understood that the rigid anti-Nicaragua policy heretofore adopted, has been abandoned, and that the President regards with considerable favor the efforts of those who desire to redeem and regenerate, in fine, to Americanize the country. Our countrymen once firmly established in Nicaragua, the future of all Central America is palpable to other than to prophetic eyes.

We need scarcely say that such a result would redound to the interest and promote the stability of the institutions of the South. That is patent enough, and hence every friend of the South is also the friend of Nicaragua. The North felt that the South would be strengthened by the success of Gen. Walker, and hence the fanatical apposition to the chivalrous effort to beat back the enemies to American republicanism. In any future well organized and laudable attempt to regain Nicaragua by the brave spirits who have just left it, every true hearted and whole-souled Southerner should cry: The sword of the Lord and of Gideon go with them.

The above was written at the time Gen. Walker was in New Orleans, and is probably the retailing of a conversation held with him, and he goes to Washington relying upon the smiles of the Administration. Can this be true? Is Walker's success in Nicaragua to be a preliminary step to the acquisition of Cuba?

John B. Gough, the famous Temperance orator, says the New York Tribune of Friday—being about leaving this country for a three year's lecturing tour in Europe, was by the invitation of prominent temperance men in this city, induced last night, once more to address his friends. The City Assembly Rooms were densely crowded, and the audience manifested as much enthusiasm, and listened with as much interest, as though it was Mr. Gough's first' instead of his 104th appearance before a New York assemblage. Ex-Mayor Harper presided, and introduced the Speaker. Mr. Gough said he had come to tell the same old story; but he told it with a force and freshness peculiar to himself, that at the close of the evening it was doubtful which was the most delighted, the orator with his reception or the audience with his eloquence. Mr. Gough will leave for England in the steamer of the 1st of July.

Santa Anna, the ex-Dictator of Mexico is evidently engaged in an attempt to get up another revolution in that republic. From his present retreat in Carthagena, he has issued a manifesto for private circulation among his adherents, partizans and revolutionist generally, in Mexico, Cuba and elsewhere denouncing the present government of Comonfort, the new constitution, the laws affecting the property and privileges of the clergy, &c., and announcing that there must be another sanguinary revolution, even though half the territory of the republic should have to be sold to supply the sinews of war.

Printing.—The art of printing has, perhaps, contributed more essentially to the welfare of Mankind, to the advancement of society, and to the promotion and diffusion of political, physical and ethical truths, than all the arts beside. It is in fact an art that is 'a preservative of other arts.' Wherever it is known and encouraged, the progressive improvement society is certain and the march of mind secure and unembarrassed. But where the press has never shed its light, or dispensed its intellectual treasures, the night of ignorance and the gloom of superstition rest upon the soul, and obscure the intellect of man; and should it be struck from existence with its rich treasure of instruction, the world, ere long, would be merged in night and barbarism.

Emigration to Canada.—From a report made on the 9th inst., from the Department of Emigration at Quebec, it appears that between the 10th and 18th of April, thirteen ships sailed for Canada, having on board two thousand and eighty emigrants. These may be expected to arrive within a few days.

Money Wanted for the Princess Royal.—On Monday night Lord Palmerston in the House of Commons and the Earl of Derby in the Lords, officially announced to the Peers and Representatives that the Princess Royal of England has been betrothed to the Prince of Prussia, as a sort of Preliminary to a request for a pension in a good lump of money as a marriage portion. Tonight the subject is to come up again, and an answer to be returned to the Queen's gracious message. In the meanwhile, the papers are, of course, discussing the question, pronouncing opinions thereupon. But few of the writers in the journals object to a vote of money—says £300,000—out of the national purse for the use of the young couple, but there is a decided aversion to saddling the nation with a new pension, the mischief of which would not end with itself, but serve as a precendent for provisions for all the other children of the Queen.

The Burdell Case is more hotly fought on the question of the possession of the property than on the detection of the murderer. Mrs. Cunningham presents new and singular evidence in her behalf. The New York Herald says:

"Property to the amount of from $100,000 to $150,000, is dependent on the issue of this suit. If Mrs. Cunningham establishes her marriage, she becomes entitled to a third of it, and if, as rumor says, she is in the position in which ladies like to be who love their lords, and can square up dates satisfactorily, she will get the whole. As it usual where money is concerned, the eagerness manifested to decide the right of this succession is much greater than that displayed in the effort to vindicate the justice of the country. An immense number of witnesses will be examined both on behalf of the blood relations, and of Mrs. Cunningham, whom the delicate scruples of the district Attorney did not allow to be produced on the murder trial."

Nature and Power of Comets.—Although comets occupy an immense space in the heavens, surpassing of leagues, yet, on account of the absence of atmosphere in those regions permitting fluids to be infinitely rarified, the matter of these bodies is reduced to the most feeble proportions. Accordingly to Laplace, although the dimensions of the tails of comets be myriads of miles, yet they do not sensibly effect the light of stars seen through them. They are, then, of an extreme rarity, and their mass is probably inferior to that of the smallest mountains on the earth. They cannot, then by their contact with the earth, produce any sensible effect; and it is probable, they have frequently enveloped the earth without being perceived. It is this which doubtless explained how many comets have passed in proximity to certain planets producing the least physicial influence. Delambre says that the comet of 1770 passed between Jupiter and his satellites without causing any sensible perturbation. Sir John Herschel goes still further, and says, in express terms, that the tail of a large comet, as far as any idea can be formed of it, is composed of a few pounds of matter, and, perhaps only a few ounces. And M. Babinet, known in both hemispheres as one of the greatest authorities of the age, in physicial astronomy, has gone so far in respect to this subject as to say that the earth, in coming into collision with a comet, would be no more affected in its stability then would a railway train coming in contact with a fly.

It is announced by telegraph from St. Louis that Dred Scott, whose name has become a proverb through the States, has been emancipated with all his family, by a gentleman at St. Louis, to whom, it is said, they had been conveyed for that purpose by their late owner, Mr. Chaffee. of Massachuetts. The St. Louis papers say that he was the lion of the Court House in that city.

California Gold.—The discovery of gold in California was in September, 1857, but none of it reached the United States in that year. In 1848, only $44,177 of the gold of California was sent to the United States mint, and but $6,147,509 in 1849.—In 1850 it reached $36,000,000, and in 1851 about $56,000,000. Something like $350,000,000 of California Gold have already been coined at the United States mint.

Arrival of the North American.

QUEBEC, June 14.

The North American arrived at 9 a. m. She reached her wharf a little before 10.—She anchored last night being very dark. She brings 123 cabin and 301 steerage passengers. They leave with special train at 3 p. m. She has 650 tons for Montreal and 70 tons for Quebec. She passed the Indian off the Isle of Man.

The Europa, Leopold and Hermann had arrived. Consols 94⅝.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Parliament was not in session, owing to Whitsuntide holidays.

The Liverpool Chamber of Commerce have called a public meeting to take measures for securing a supply of cotton.

The Grand Duke Constantine had arrived at Osborne, on a visit to Queen Victoria.

The Queen and Grand Duke visited the squadron off Spithead.

The West Indian mail steamer Panama arrived at Southampton with over $3,600,000 of specie.

FRANCE.

Vague rumours were current that another unsuccessful attempt on the life of the Emperor had been made.

Recent storms had done great damage to the vines and crops in many parts of the country.

AUSTRIA.

Marshal Radetzky and the Arch-Duchess Sophia are dead.

The Emperor had issued a decree restoring confiscated property in Hungary. Other liberal provisions were made in the decree.

BELGIUM.

Brussels and other Belgian towns were much agitated by the proposals to give the Catholic Clergy more power. At Antwerp, all the windows of the Jesuit College had been smashed, and the streets had to be cleared by troops. Many of the rioters were under arrest. At latest dates, the troubles had apparently subsided. A decree had been issued that not more than five persons are to be permitted to assemble together in the public highway.

SPAIN.

New difficulties have arisen from the Mexican question.

RUSSIA.

The shares of the Russo-Railway Company continue to fall rapidly, and it was thought Government intended to put an end to the Company's monopoly.

ITALY.

Grain crops in a most promising condition, but the Silk crop reports are contradictory.

INDIA AND CHINA.

The mutinous spirit in the native Indian troops had been checked. The news of peace with Persia has given dissatisfaction in India.

Sir John Bowling had a conference with the French and American ministers at Macao. The French minister had received instructions for the French forces to co-operate with the British, but the American minister had received no such order. Nothing serious had occurred, but petty engagements with war junks had taken place.

A duty of 12 Taels a chest on Opium had been imposed at Shanghai.

At Hong Kong business was quiet. Raw silk had advanced. Black teas had advanced. Green teas unchanged.

Liverpool Markets.—Weather beautiful. Kenneth, Donie & Co. report wheat at 2d, and flour at 6d lower. Canadian wheat mixed to white 9s 2d to 10s; red 8s 9d, to 9s 5d. Flour 32s to 33s; fancy 33s 6d to 34s; extra 34s 6d to 35s 6d; Western canal 31s to 33s. Indian Corn mixed 39s; white 40s to 40s 6d. Peas 40s to 42s.—Ashes exceedingly dull.

FURTHER BY THE GEORGE LAW

NEW YORK, June 12.—The George Law connected at the Isthmus with the Senora, which brought down nearly $2,500,000.

Intelligence from San Juan del Norte states that over 1,000 of Walker's men are at that place, destitute and sick.

Affairs in other South American states generally tranquil.

The Panama Star expresses fears that Gen. Walker, in colformity with threats made by him after his capitulation, will return with more filibusters to the Isthmus, and regrets that Gen. Mora did not hang him and his officers, in the terms of capitulation, never again to put foot in Central America.

The news from California is of no importance.

The papers give details of the massacre, by the Mexicans of Col. Crabbe and party. It seems to have been attended by incidents of unusual cruelty. Crabb himself was led out alone, tied with his arms above his head and then riddled with one hundred bullets

On Sundays, there are about 80 ball-rooms open in Chicago, with music from morning till midnight.

TORONTO, June 5, 1857.

A good supply of farming produce offered in market this morning. But it will be seen that prices have scarcely varied since our last.

WHEAT.—About 1,000 bushels changed hands to day. We note an advance of 1½d per bushel on the rates of yesterday. These high quotations are attributable to the brisk competition among buyers, as well as the advices received from foreign markets. It must be observed, however, that the extreme figures quoted to day, were realised in but one or two instances. The range was from 9s 3d to 9s 7½d—the majority of the transactions taking place at 9s 6d.

FLOUR.—The prices are beginning to look up, and outside quotations are more easily realised. We continue to quote prices at $5.25 a $5.50 for Superfine; $7 a $7, 25 for Fancy, and $7 50 a $8 for Extra.

BARLEY.—None offered, but it is quotable at $1 60 per bushel.

RYE is worth 6s per bushel.

SPRING WHEAT was not bought to day, but is worth 7s a 7s 6d per bushel.

BUTTER.—Fresh offered at 1s 2d a 1s 3d per. lb. Tub at 11d to 1s.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with congestion of the Liver, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infections or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or when travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits, will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For the debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the invalid, however weak; from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy these delightful symptoms of a return to strong health, viz: good appetite sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting in my Lawrence; also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York on each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

L. P. ST. AMOUR, Agent, for Sandwich.

The computed distance between Amherstburg and Rondeau is 68 miles.

The rate of travel to be not less than Five Miles per hour, including stoppages for all purposes.

The days and hours of Arrival and Departure to be as follows, subject to a right of the Post Master General to alter the same, should he consider it advisable so to do, to leave Jakersburg every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and to leave Rondeau, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and at such hours as may be required, and to proceed direct through both ways—Serving the offices at Deathown, Romney, Merses, Leamington, Gosfield, Kingsville, and Colchester.

The Contract, if satisfactorily executed, will continue in force for a term not exceeding four years; the Postmaster General reserving the right to terminate the agreement at any time previous to the expiration of the four years, should the public interest require it, upon giving the contractor three months previous notice of his intention.

All expenses on this route for Tolls, Ferries &c., must be defrayed by the contractor.

Each Tender to state the price asked in words at length, and to be accompanied by the written guarantee of two responsible parties undertaking that in the event of the Tender being accepted the contract shall be duly executed, by the party tendering, for the price demanded: undertaking also to become bound with the contractor in the sum of five hundred pounds for the due performance of the service.

Blank forms of Tender may be obtained at the Post Offices Amherstburg, Chatham, Rondeau and Mersea.

WINDSOR NURSERIES.

JUST PUBLISHED, a DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE of the Fruit Trees for sale at the Windsor Nurseries, containing a more accurate description of a greater variety of Fruits, than can be found in any other Catalogue issued on this continent, the whole having been compiled by the undersigned, with great care, from personal inspection of the Fruits grown on his own ground, Directions for Planting, Cultivation, Pruning, &c., will be found in the Catalogue.

Also, in Pots, and will be published in a few days, a Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Tulips, Peonias, &c., &c.

Catalogues will be sent gratis, on application, (if by letter post-paid), to the undersigned, at Windsor, C. W.

The stock of Fruit Trees, more especially Apples and Pears—both Standard and Dwarf—is extremely thrifty and well grown, and such as can be procured in no other Nursery. A large portion of them are just commencing to bear, and having been twice transplanted, can be removed with perfect success.

All orders promptly attended to, the Trees carefully packed so as to carry any distance with safety, and forwarded with despatch.

As the undersigned intends discontinuing the Nursery Business, those wishing considerable lots of Trees will find it for their interest to apply early.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in diseases peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and debilitated muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Contiveness,	Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhœa	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debity,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds,

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor Holloway, 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 23 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions round each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Wednesday, the

1st day of July next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containg Two Hundred Acres or more less.

Cattle and Fodder.

If we may estimate the cattle and sheep of the United States as worth $500,000,000—and they are doubtless worth more than that—then the loss of the American People from want of adequate food and shelter for their beasts during the long and severe Winter just past, cannot certainly fall below 50 and may reach 100,000,000. The cold season commenced quite early, and has held on to a period usually late—in fact, there is scarcely a green blade to be obtained north of lat., 40, and pastures north of the Highlands will not be really fit to turn cattle upon before the 1st of June. But "necessity has no law," the cattle must live, if they can anyhow be kept alive, and already herds more guant and hungry than Pharaoh's lean kine are scouring the whole land in search of anything that can be eaten, preaching up the soft meadows and destroying the young herbage, yet bound to keeping the breath of life within their racks of bones. In consequence of their famished condition, oxen cannot half work, and land will be miserably plowed, half harrowed, and the prospective crops exposed to the devastations of the scorching heat and drouth of next July and August. The Spring calves and lambs will be stunted, sickly and feeble, because the cows and ewes were not half fed through the winter; and the summer's yield of hay will be light because of the necessary damage done is by the trampling and gnawing of the meadows in April and May. We do firmly believe that the positive loss to our people from deficient shelter and fodder for their cattle during the cold season, now (we trust) closing, will amount to nearer 100 than 50,000,000.

The vast sum might have been saved.—There was no need of losing it. One week faithfully devoted last Autumn by each farmer to the improvment of his cattle shelter whatever it may be, would have saved a part of it. One rood of Carrots or Beets grown last Summer for each animal kept over the Winter would have done still more. One good cutting box in each barn, and the faithful cutting there with of seven-eighths of the Hay and Grain fed out since last November, would have powerfully contributed to the desired end. More hay and other fodder might have been saved last season by proper care and effort. For even on the newly settled prairies, where cattle and few and hay can be cut and stacked almost any time from July to September at a cost of $2 $3 per ton, thousands of cattle have absolutely staved to death within the last sixty days.—Now, we now that the losers of these cattle have often excellent excuses—they "shoved in" late last season; they had cabins to build, prarie to break up, and crops to get in; they were down with the ague, &c., &c.,—but these do not suffice. For if it were absolutely impossible for them to to cut sufficient hay in August or knock up some kind of a log and straw shelter for their stock in November, they might at least have killed their beasts in the Fall, salted the meat saved the poor animals the pain of slow starvation And if two thirds of the cattle owners had known only enough to to kill off one-third of their cattle last Fall, salted their hides and carcases for hay and grain to feed to the remainder, they would have been far better off this Spring. But they "guessed they would go through" with a tun of course hay per head, stacked out, and a lot of corn-stalks standing in the field; and the result is as we see. Shall there never be an end to this cruel waste? Surely, all who fell short this Spring can resolve to put in a third more fodder per head this year; or else to keep over a third less cattle. An acre of roots got in on a rich, mellow deep plowed dry land, will give a product in Beets or Carrots worth at least ten tuns of hay next Winter, and perhaps doubles that. An acre of Sorghum, well cured, will be of great help. Let every farmer try an acre of Sowed Corn if he is not sure he has fodder enough without.—The past cannot be recalled: but we entreat every man who keeps even a single cow, to resolve now that he will look out for ample fodder in season, and not suffer the terrible experience of the past winter to warn him in vain.—Trib.

FOR THE GARRN.—Those of us whose kitchen gardens are comprised within a small space can ill afford to have the few vines destroyed by insects. We select from our agricultural exchanges the following paragraphs, which may be useful:

REMEDY FOR THE "STRIPED BUG."—William Saunders, a skillful gardener, states in the Horticulturist, that the striped bug may be successfully repulled by simply placing a piece of glass over each hill, supported at the corners on four small wooden pegs. He does not say how near the surface the glass should rest, but we suppose within an inch or two. He states that this has been found as effectual as the wooden box, while it freely admits air as well as light. It is of very easy trial.

REMEDY FOR THE YELLOW BUG.—A writer in the Country Gentleman gives several methods of repelling the yellow bug from pumpkin vines, &c., among which he finds boxes covered with milimet. These are made about 12 or 15 inches square, and about six or 6 or 8 high, of thin boards, the top being covered with milinet, put on with carpet tacks. A light brace ought to be let into the top of the box, across one corner, to prevent the box from working out of shape, before the covering is put on. This box is also a protection against wind and light gusts, though by shutting off a portion of light, it hinders the growth somewhat in fine weather. Even without the addition of the millinet, this box is usually a protection against the bug.

GRASS SEED PER ACRE.—The following table will give the amount per acre of grass seed used by many farmers:—

One bushel of clover seed will sow six acres.

One bushel of Timothy seed will sow four acres.

One bushel orchard grass seed (14lbs) one acre.

One bushel Ky. Blue grass seed (14lbs) one acre.

One bushel English blue grass (24lbs) two acres.

One bushel millet seed one acre.

Three pecks Buckwheat one acre.

Two bushels Barley one acre.

One bushel Flaxseed one acre.

For Sale!!!

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On Lot No. 11, there is erected a FOUR ASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale confirmed.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

R. MAYCOCK,
Sandwich, Canada West.

Michigan Central Railroad Co.
1857. 1857.
North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, from about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of elegance and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SKINNOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.
Detroit, April, 1857.

NORTH-WESTERN TRANSPORTATION LINE.
1857.
Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago

THIS LINE consists of the following First Class Propellers:

MONTGOMERY, Capt. T. Nicholson
GLOBE, " Amos Pratt,
ONTONAGON, " A. Wilkins,
ADRIATIC, " M. S. Lathrop
OGONTZ, " W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY,
(New Propeller,)

Which plan during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week, having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandise, via

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over FIVE THOUSAND TONS BURTHEN, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandise for the transport of Property.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most Lengthy, Thorough and Complete courses introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT

embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on FOLSOM'S NEW METHOD, recommended by many of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless terms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual [illegible] ment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various branches, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special Branch.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Correspondence, Banking, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

Old Spot.

[From the Grand River Sachem.]

When I was young and in my prime,
My head I carried high,
My heart was stout, my limbs was strong
The fire was in my eye.
I did not then refuse a stump
Gainst any horse to go—
I was "Old Norfolk's" pride and boast
Some twenty years ago.

The "Thirty Seven Rebellion,
Found me just six years old,
A dashing charger I was then
And bore a trooper bold,
We scour'd the country far and near
To rout the rebel foe,
Nor left a trace of them behind,
Just twenty years ago.

O'er hills and dales and sandy plain,
And through the miry field,
I beat old Norfolk's nearest bloods—
To me they all did yield.
I jump'd the fences, swam the streams,
That rapidly did flow—
I distanced all competitors,
Some twenty years ago.

At wedding and at frolics too,
I was ever sure to be
The leader of the cavalcade,
The foremost at the spree.
The folks would rush into the street,
The windows up would go,
To see how "Spot" would throw the mud,
Some twenty years ago.

And much I like to visit yet
The scenes I then did see—
Old folks who were youngsters then,
Do still remember me—
They greet me still and pat me so,
When I through Norfolk go,
And swear I was a matchless horse,
Some twenty years ago.

They say, I kind and gentle was,
And never then I shied,
By day or night to take the road,
The aged or the child,
And I am ready still, but at
A slower pace to go—
Hard work has somewhat crippled me,
Some twenty years ago.

And I have grown older some,
My head is not so high,
My glossy coat has faded much—
The fire has left my eye.
My once stout heart grows faint too, at
The cawing of a crow—
I am not now the horse I was
Some twenty years ago.

Of all the comrades of my youth
Not one can now be found—
They all are gone, their bleached bones
Lie scattered o'er the ground,
And I am left without a mate;
Of all I then did know;
I'm the odd horse of many a Span,
Since twenty years ago.

Then, till my race of life is run,
Deal kindly to "Old Spot,"
Nor turn me off as food for crows,
Or in the ditch to rot—
Be merciful, a little while,
Life's tide is ebbing low,
You'll find me faithful to the last,
As twenty years ago.

The Detective Police Surpassed by a Lady.

A few weeks since, some unknown persons entered a fashionable boarding-house near Summer street, kept by Mrs. M., and passed from one boarder's room to another, making assessments of such articles as they liked best, and after making a liberal collection, passed out, unseen and unharmed.

Among the boarders whose goods and chattels were unceremoniously taken away, was Miss H., a fair daughter of the sunny South, who happened to be spending the winter in the City of Nations. Her loss consisted of a beautiful velvet hat.

As soon as the theft was discovered the police were consulted, and everything done to remove the mystery, but all to no purpose.

But as murder will out, so will larceny sometimes, and this was not long to remain a secret.

As Miss H. was walking Washington St. one of the pleasant days last week imagine her surprise in passing a large and masculine looking woman, dressed in the height of fashion, with hoops, and a crinoline having upon her head the very identical velvet hat which she had lost. What was to be done? What could be done? Every step was taking the bonnet further from its owner, who was alone and a stranger in the city.

It did not take long to decide.

She started in the same direction, and soon was alongside of the velvet hat.

'Where do you reside madame?'

'In——court,' was the reply.

'Are you going home?'

'I am.'

'Go on, and don't let me hinder you.'

And onward they walked, now to the right and now to the left.

At length they entered a dark alley, and after passing several dismal abodes, they halted at a door.

'Do you live here?'

'I do—up on the second floor.'

'Go up then, for I have business with you.'

They entered.

After going up two flights of stairs they reached a room, in which they found five women.

They entered the room, and here our heroine made her business known, Posting herself by the door, with a calm, but defiant look, she demanded of the woman to know where she obtained the velvet hat also the shawl and the basque upon her person.

'I bought them,' was the reply.

'No you did not; they were stolen; and now take them off immediately.'

Had a bombshell exploded in the room, the confusion could not have been greater, But great as it was, it did not intimidate the owner of the velvet in the least degree.

It only changed the happy and fascinating look of a most beautiful face to the unconquered look of a Cromwell.

'Now be quiet and own, and bring forward the stolen goods, for it will be better for you.

And now seeing that I have found the goods, and the thief, I am going for an officer. See that none of you leave the room or disturb an article while I am gone.'

While descending the stairs our heroine espied a doctor on his way to visit the sick, and asked his assistance. I have she said, found some stolen property, and have it secure in this house: will you call an officer to assist me in removing it? The doctor readily assented, and while he sought for policemen, she guarded her trust. At length the doctor with four policemen arrived, when our heroine transferred the custody of both person and property to the officers of the law. The remainder of the stolen property was soon found, and the lady relieved of her borrowed plumage was provided with rooms at the Cambridge street jail, where she still remains, waiting the sentence of the law.

We say success to our fair visitor from the South, and may the courage which she displayed be imitated by our police generally.—Boston Traveller.

Omar Pasha's Gloves.

A SHORT AND TRUE STORY.

In a recently published history of modern Greece and its insurrections, the following interesting particulars are given with regard to Omar Pasha, the commander-in-chief of the Turkish force:

About fifteen years ago a young man arrived at Widden, and asked to see Hussein Pasha, the commander of the place. His personal appearance was unusually prepossessing, being at once handsome and majestic. His complexion was fair and clear, his eyes soft and penetrating, and his limbs pliant and athletic. The Turks, have a superstitious veneration for a physiognomy, and to whom, therefore, goods looks are presentiments? said the Elizabeth said, an excellent letter of respect. Hussein was at this time encamped before Widden, and living in a superb tent, to which the young stranger was directed. He happened unfortunately to get there just as Hussein was walking up in no very good humour.

"What do you want!" said he, impatiently to the intruder.

"To enter your excellency's service," was the reply.

"I have to many attendants already," said the Pasha.

In Turkey it is allowable for people in the humblest condition to offer presents to a distinguished personage without any offense. Accordingly the young man pulled a small parcel, carefully done up, out of his pocket, and presented it to the Pasha, begging him to accept it.

"Gloves, your excellency," the youth replied.

"And of what use are they!"

"when you go out in the sun, they will preserve the color of your hand, (the Pasha's were very white,) and when you are riding, they will prevent them from being blistered by the bridle."

"But how do you put them on!"

The young man answered by putting one on the Pasha's hand,

"Now the other."

This was also put on. Hussein then clapped his hands, and raised them above his head, just as the officers of his suit were entering the tent. Thanks to this pair of gloves, which were the admiration of the Pasha and his staff, the stranger was admitted into Hussein's service, and became his confidential aid-de-camp. Now this stranger was no other than Michael Hatias, a native of Croatia formerly inspector of roads and bridges in Austria, and now Omar Pasha's, the heroic and illustrious commander-in-chief of the Turkish army.

How was it that this young man without country, this fugitive without resources, this German who had turned Turk, thus made his destiny turn upon a pair of gloves? The answer is no less curious than what has already been stated.

Michael, the fourth son of Peter Hatias, a poor Austrian noble, was so weakly in his infancy, that, but for the greatest efforts of maternal affection, he must have died long before reaching the age of manhood. At eighteen he was intrusted with the superintendance of bridges and roads at Caristadt; and at twenty was appointed sub-inspector at Zard, in Dalmatia. Having been compromised in a political affair, he fled from his country to the Turkish frontier, with only a small sum in his pocket. The first village he came to after crossing the frontier was called Omar Unis, so he assumed the name of Omar with the turban, and proceeded at random thro' the province of Rossuls.

Here he was waylayed by robbers, who stripped him of everything, not excepting his clothes and left him naked on the road. A peasant happening to pass by soon afterwards, and pitying his destitute condition, received him into his house and gave him some money. He was thus enabled to reach Banjuluka, where he obtained a situation in a shop. Here it was his good fortune to meet with a favorable turn in the current of his history. His employer had a charming daughter. Omar was not insesible to her attractions. The girl could not without emotion see this exile—pursued by misfortune—this grave and gallant engineer, reduced to the position of a clerk—that hand so elegant and white, yet so energetic and manly, doomed to the inglorious occupation of holding a pen instead of wielding a sword.

The two young people understood each other without speaking together, and the father clearly saw what was going on between them without admitted to the confidence of either. One morning he sent Omar two presents, one consisting of a marriage ring with an inventory of his effects, and the other a purse full of gold with a beautiful sabre. Omar at once understood the choice that was offered him, the fortune of the trader and the hand of the daughter or departure and a military life, with the means of getting to the nearest camp. He hesitated a while, but at length decided to keep the ring and the inventory, and return the sabre and the purse.

On the following day the two young people were betrothed amid great family rejoicings.—But the day after the young lady, overpowered by her good fortune, was taken ill, never to recover. For a week or more her father and plighted lover watched over her with tenderest solicitude, and received her last sigh with tears. Then the merchant once more presented the sabre and the purse to the young man with these words;

"It is the will of God! It was so decreed.—May glory be more true to you than happiness!" Omar now accepted the weapon, and kissing the icy hand of his departed angel, set out for Widden, where he became Hussein's aid-de-camp, as we have already stated. After the death of the Pasha of Widden, Omar, went to Constantinople, and there rose rapidly from rank to rank, till he reached that of Mushir, and was appointed in 1852 to the chief command of the Ottoman forces, in consequence of his distinguished merit and eminent success.—Album.

Hints for Ladies.

WHO WISH FOR DISCONTENTED HUSBANDS.

Let your husband return home from his labors at night, and find the fire out, his tea and toast cold, and you in the parlor reading a novel. If he tells you he fears his expenses are going before his income, and proposes to move into a smaller house, sit down in a cry about it. Tell him you always lived in a large house before you were married, and you think it is very cruel in him to disgrace you now, in the eyes of the world, by putting you in a shanty.

If you ask him for money, and he says he has a note to pay on the morrow, but promises you shall have it as soon as he can spare it, tell him you never asked him for money in your life, but he had a note to pay; and if he is willing to disgrace himself by letting his wife wear her fall bonnet in December, you are sure you don't care—you will never ask him for a cent again as long as you live.

If at the end of a few months he fails in business, don't like a sensible woman, make the best of his misfortunes, or try to help him to bear his troubles by giving your sympathy, but cry as though your heart would break. Tell him, by mismanaging his business, he has brought a dreadful disgrace upon you and your family, and he cannot reasonably expect any of your, or your parents sympathy.

Hint occasionally before him, of how much higher position you held in society before, than since your marriage.

Let him know how many new dresses Mr. so and so buys for his wife, and how much better he loves her than your husband does you.

If he has business to call him out in the evening, be sure and fret, when he returns, about his being out at nights; and about his disliking to be at home with his family. It may have a tendency to make him like home and the society of his wife better.—You can try it.

If you have little children to keep you at home, whine every time he comes into the house about being tied at home. Then if he purposes to take you and the children out to ride, tell him you are tired half to death and don't want to ride. Very likely he will leave the house, closing the door with force enough to shake its very foundations, thinking that you may stay at home until your dying day, before he will ask you out again.

You must find fault on every possible occasion and tell him regularly every day, that you do not believe there is another woman in town who has so hard a time as you; and in return you will have 'as impatient and as discontented a husband as can be found, and one who will come home only at eating and sleeping hours—and you may be thankful to see him then.

The new United States cent has been put into circulation. They are a handsome coin, a little larger and thicker than an English sixpence, and are a compesition of copper and Nickel, of quite a bright colour.

DO IT YOURSELVES, BOYS.—Why ask the teacher or some class-mate to solve that problem? Do it yourselves. You might as well let them cut your dinner as do your sums for you." It is in studying as in eating, he that does it gets the benefit; and not he that sees it done. In almost any school I would give more for what the teacher learns, simply because the teacher is compelled to solve all the hard problems for them, and answer the questions of the lazy boys. Do not ask him to pass all the difficult words or assist you in the performance of any of your duties. Do it yourselves. Never mind, though they look dark as Egypt. Don't ask even a hint from any body. Try again. Every trial increases your ability, and you will finally succeed by dint of the very wisdom and strength gained in this effort, even though at first the problem was beyond your skill. It is the study and not the answer that really rewards your pains. Look at that boy who has succeeded after six hours of hard study, perhaps How his eye is lit up with a proud joy as he marches to his class. He reads like a conqueror, and well he may. His poor weak school-mate, who gave up that same problem after the first faint trial, new looks up to him with something of wonder as a superior. The problem lies there, a great gulf between these boys who stood yesterday side by side. They will never stand together as equals again. The boy that did it for himself has taken a stride upwards, and, what is better still, gained strength for greater ones. The boy who waited to see how to do it has lost both strength and courage, and is already looking for some excuse to give up school and study forever.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In all cases of weak stomach, which are usually attended with want of appetite, nausea, griping, disturbed sleep, and a general prostration of the bodily powers, these Pills will be found a swift and certain remedy. Among the most common indications of a diseased stomach, are a sense of fullness after eating, a dry yellow tongue, flatulence in the abdomen, a repulsive taste in the mouth, heaviness in all the limbs, giddiness, pain in the eyes, want of energy, aversion to mental exercise, and irregularity of the bowels. These symptoms disappear after a few dozes of the pills having been administered; the stomach, liver, and bowels, resume the regular and vigorous performance of their functions, the patient's strength returns, and in a short time the cure is complete.

The new License Law of the State of New York meets with much opposition. A society of liquor dealers has been formed, comprising nearly one thousand members, with $100,000 subscribed for the purpose of attempting to procure the repeal or modification of the law.

"TAINT LIKE."—A certain lawyer had his portrait taken in his favourite attitude—standing with his hand in his pocket. His friends and clients all went to see it, and everybody exclaimed, "Oh, how like! it's the very picture of him!" An old farmer only dissented. "Taint like!" exclaimed everybody, "just show us wherein taint like?" "Taint—no 'taint," responded the farmer; "don't you see he has got his hand in his own pocket! Twould be as like again if he had it in somebody else's."

The steamship Caledonia sailed from Quebec on Saturday morning with 500 passengers.

Twelve inward bound vessels were the same day reported passing up Riviere du Loup.

They tell a good story of two bachelors down East who lived a sort of cat-and dog life to their neighbours' discomfort for a good many years, but who having been at camp meeting, were slightly converted, and both of them concluded to reform. "Brother Tom," says one, when they had arrived at their home, 'let us sit down now and I'll tell you what we'll do. You tell me all of my faults and I'll tell you all yourn, and so we will know how to get about mending 'em.' 'Good!' says brother Tom. Well you begin.—No, you begin brother Jos.' 'Well in the first place, you know brother Tom, you will lie! Crack goes brother Tom's fist between brother Joes 'blinkers,' and a considerable of a 'scrimmage' ensues, until, in the course of about ten minutes, neither being able to come to time, reformation was postponed sine die.

Society has a right to be particular—it is so often deceived.

A tippler, who squinted awfully, used sometimes to mourn that his eyes did not agree. "Its lucky for you," replied his friend 'for if your eyes had been matches, your nose would have set them on fire long ago.'

When Doctor Hamilton and Lawyer Adamson were walking arm in arm, a wag said to a friend. "These two are just equal to one highwayman." "Why?" was the response. "Because, it is a lawyer and a doctor—your money or your life.

"So you would not take me to be twenty?" said a young lady to her partner, while dancing a polka, a few evenings since. "What would you take me for?" "For better or for worse."

ORIGIN OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.—Two hundred and fifty-three years ago, some traders in London united together to raise a capital of £30,000 "wherewith to trade to the East Indies. They obtained a charter, under which the management of their affairs was entrusted to a committee of twenty-four of their members, chosen by themselves. In 1624, authority was given to the company by the King to punish its servants abroad, either by fine or military law. In 1661, a new charter was granted, by which the company were allowed to make peace or war with or against people or princes, not Christians, and to seize all unlicensed persons, and send them to England.—Other parties attempted to get into the trade by bribing the different governments of the day, and at one time, the old company offered to loan to the Government £700,000 at 4 per cent. In 1708 the rival companies united, and by a loan of £1,200,000 to the Government without interest, purchased further privileges, which have from these days of their sales sent charters. In 1784 a new feature was introduced into the system, that of the Board of Control, by which, in effect, the political power (though under the name of the Government) was vested in the directors. In 1813 the trade to India was thrown open, and in 1833 that to China was not only made free, but the company were precluded from commercial operations; and thus we find that the functions for which it was originally organized ceased altogether, and by a combination of circumstances it had gradually assumed others of a most anomalous description when in 1853, a committee of twenty-four private gentlemen were the absolute sovereigns of over 100, 000,000 of people.

A "PRETTY UGLY."—A correspondent of the Boston Courier thus describes a character somewhat notorious in the municipal history of Baltimore:

Have you ever seen a Plug Ugly? He is of Baltimore origin, and of the species of the Killer, known in Philadelphia, and Short Hop of New York. You have nothing in your city which at all resembles the Pug, the Killer or the Short Boy. The Pug or Plug, as he is sometimes called, derives his name, not from anything expressed in his own physognomy, but from the effects which he produces upon the countenance of an adversary. Every time he strikes, he "plugs ugly," and, as a consequence, an "ugly pug" follows. He is of limited stature, has a compressed face, close cropped hair, and is generally firm built. Alone, he is a coward; but like all bullies, is brave when there is a crowd at his back. He talks vulgar when decent people are within hearing; and always has a ruffianly epithet at his tongue's end. He can be enlisted in any cause for money, which he prizes only as a means of gratifying the most brutish appetite. He is usually to be found in the neighborhood of an engine or porter house, and he understands the merest wink. The class to which the Pug Uglies belong, had its origin in New York, where they were generated for the purpose of aiding feeble politicians to "carry points" at conventions.

GETTING NERVOUS.—The New Yorkers are evidently getting nervous on account of the gradual but visible relax of their hold on the ocean steamboat traffic. The Herald pertinently enquires what has become of Collins steamers,—commanded by Capt. ——which leaves on Wednesday, at blank intervals, from the foot of Canal street, and on board of which passengers are earnestly requested to have their luggage by an early hour in the morning. Is there any such steamer? Does she really leave? Have we told the passenger who sent his luggage down in compliance with the advertisement, find himself even blanker than the gallant ship and her noble commander Capt.——? It really looks as though the control of the ocean was departing from America and is being securely vested in foreign nations.—England is crowding the Atlantic with steamers of all sizes and models, from the Great Eastern downward. Her screws bid fair, at no distant period, to monopolize the traffic of the ocean, and of course, in like manner, to sweep it in case of war. France enters the lists with three transatlantic lines to which the State grants 14,000,000 francs subvention, nearly $3,000,000 per annum per line. Even Sardinia, Spain and Holland are on the track and the United States are standing in this matter if not positively retrograding. As to our Canadian line it has beaten the Yankee crafts hollow! Besides this loud wailings are being indulged in at the non success of the fast crack steam frigate Niagara which, as we understand a few days since, only took 17 days to cross the Atlantic.

STEAMSHIP CANADIAN.—We learn from the Quebec Chronicle that the attempt to get off the steamship Canadian on Tuesday morning failed. The Tug steamer Queen-Victoria, which was engaged in assisting to tow the Canadian off, returned to Quebec on Wednesday afternoon, and reported that no further attempts to get her off will be made until the next spring tides. In the meantime no preparations will be made as will secure success.

ENCUMBERED ESTATE COURT.—IRELAND. A vast deal of property was sold on the 12th before Mr. Commissioner Longfield. There were four estates put up, comprising in the whole, 34 lots, all of which were rapidly bought up. The gross sum realized for the entire was upwards of £76,000, the Cavan estates of Mr. William Ruxton produced nearly two thirds of this sum. The other properties lay in the counties of Leitrim, Rossommon, and Clare.

On the 29th ult, at D. Wolverton's circular Saw Mill, lately erected in the Township of Walsingham, County of Norfolk, Charles Harris, a young man lately married, had just been employed that morning to work in the mill, and was set to carry away the boards as they dropped from the saw. He was cautioned against letting a board touch the saw while in motion, but the unfortunate man had taken away but a few boards when the end of one he had just taken up swayed against the saw, and being repulsed with violence, caused the other end to force the unfortunate man against the saw, when in full motion, and, as quick as thought, he was cut in twain. — London Free Press.

A Singular Comet.

The much talked about Comet, now six days overdue, has not yet made its appearance, much to the disappointment and chagrin of embryo savants and the great relief of terrestial fears. That the Comet has been greatly abused, we do not doubt; one philosopher goes so far as to gravely assert that the flood in Noah's time, which completely covered the face of the earth, was caused by this speck of a globe passing through the watery tail of a comet; whether it was this identical one, could not be clearly shown as the proofs were wanting somewhat in particulars. Another says the comets are invariably the harbingers of sweeping desolation and famine, whenever approximating the orbit of the earth, and brings forward a chain of events to bear out his argument that the comets possess an 'evil eye.' Something peculiarly gloomy and appalling is the theory of another in ascribing the end of the world by fire to the instantaneous collision with a rapidly moving mass of this description. Yet another, of a great number of cometarians, seriously gives his opinion that the State of Missouri—the reputed 'centre of the world—would be the exact spot the comet would strike on a certain day in June. An unlimited newspaper discussion ensued on this subject, in the course of which one writer laid his adversaries hors du combat by sententiously remarking that such a thing as hitting that locality only, was almost impossible, as the body in question was 'three times as large as the State of Missouri!' But the ideas of June are passed and we can breathe freely; the coming event has been postponed for some three years a term of grace most devoutly to be thanked for. A mountain of speculating theories, doubts and terrors have been removed. The diplomatists of Europe are slicing up terra firma, in a different fashion than the comet would; consols rule high, bank stock good, and fancy grades are held at fancy prices, by those who fear no crash except that of hats.

We have not, however, got totally out of the bush, as some sections of this sentiment have experienced sensations believed by their inhabitants to be the effects of a whisk from the comets tail. Their fears are not settled by the singular appearance in the heavens varying for weeks, with heavy masses of lowering clouds of inky blackness, accompanied with severe gales or whirlwinds which prostrated everything in their course. Many papers speak of such occurrences, but no severest calamity was felt on Saturday last in Rochester, N.Y. which by the inhabitants was firmly believed to have been occasioned by the comet, or a part of that eccentric orb. The following from the Democrat, is an account of the disaster, the connection of which with the comet may be best judged by our readers—

'The Utica papers give but few additional particulars of the rather singular visitation experienced in the towns of Deerfield and Schuyler, Oneida Co., on Saturday last. It is not the first instance in which villages have been visited by such a phenomenon, and property and life destroyed without warning of the event. When a few years ago a village in a Western State was the scene of similar destruction.—This moving mass of vapor was charged with electricity, in the opinion of some, and to the shock occasioned is attributed the death of Mrs. Weaver, who was the wife not of a minister, but of a labouring man who resided in the parsonage. A young man engaged in making baskets in the barn in which was the first building destroyed, was found some time after in convulsions. The barn appeared to be burst assunder, as if by an internal explosion. A woman and a girl escaped by throwing himself upon his face on the ground, while an apple tree ten feet from him was torn out of the earth. Fragments of timber were thrown a great distance, and as before stated, one barn seems to have been carried away entirely, scarce a fragment remaining, while another was crushed down upon its foundation, as if a mighty weight had fallen upon it. A heavy iron machine was thrown many rods from its place.

The phenomenon is described as at first assuming the appearance of a large whitish cloud, rolling in its course towards the south-east, from which an arm or cone-shaped body extended downward till it reached the earth, and in its course carried destruction. Its progress was at the rate of a very fast railroad train,—one says a mile per minute, and another a mile in nine minutes. As it went, it maintained a whirling motion, and the noise is described as a 'buzzing' sound. It was not accompanied by any wind or storm, no rain and hail falling until half an hour it had passed away. Had it descended in the midst of a city, the destruction must have been terrible. The Herald says:

What agency could produce such results except electricity we are unable to compre hend; and yet the strange proofs of destruction exhibited cannot well be explained on the most popular theory connected with this wonderful agency. The trees are still green in the leaf and healthful in the bud, and neither wood or metallic substances with which the element came in contact bear the slightest mark of heat, or show the usual visible effects of atmospheric electrical contact as a destroying power."

IMPORTANT DECISION AGAINST THE POWER OF CATHOLIC BISHOPS.—Judge Welles, of the New York Supreme Court, has decided against the claim of a Roman Catholic Bishop to hold all the church property in his diocese, against the rights of the local societies or their immediate representatives. The particulars of the case are as follows:

"In the year 1851, the trustees of St. Peter's Society, in Rochester, brought a suit against John Timor, Bishop of Buffalo, and others, to recover their church property, then held in fee by the Bishop. Some forty days were occupied in taking evidence before the referees, as to the spiritual and legal powers of the Catholic clergy, and the force of the canons of the church. It was then argued before Justice Selden of the Supreme Court. Justice Selden decided all the points, save one, in favor of the plaintiffs. A new argument was had in June, 1856, before Justice Welles, who had just decided in favor of the plaintiffs throughout. Thus the Trustees hold the temporalities of the church by the law, against the canons.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, JUNE 25, 1857.

Our Neighbour of the Canadian is quite at a loss to conceive, how Draining upon a large scale will benefit the County of Essex; and if it should be of any advantage, it would be an utter impossibility to effect a system of drainage, as the, "summit of the land on the banks of the Detroit River, does not exceed 27 feet and the fall in an opposite direction, is far greater than this" in o her words, that the River Detroit lays higher than the land in the back Townships' As to the first great mystery, we are not at all surprised, that the over intelligent Editor of the Canadian, should be ignorant of the advantages produced by draining wet lands, and conveying off surface water, which is most injurious to a profitable system of farming. Of course anything so patent to the public, was far beyond his penetration and could not be got through his "wool." It is useless for us to say anything in favour of this subject, all who have even an ordinary share of knowledge must be convinced, that to render most of the land in the back Townships profitable for farming purposes, a thorough system of Drainage must be adopted and that by the municipalities, next we come to the impracticability which our neighbour strives so hard to prove and in support of his assertion, would endeavour to induce the public to believe, that the land in the interior is lower than the level of the river, and consequently it would be impossible to effect a drainage, this is rather a new idea certainly, and emanating from so good an authority is also passing strange, we only wonder that he did not assert, that Lake Erie is higher than Lake St. Clair. But if as the Canadian says that the River Detroit is higher than the land in the rear, it is rather a puzzler to us to account for the waters of Lake St. Clair taking so circuitous a route, when it might overflow this land and discharge its waters towards the south-east, from which an arm or cone-shaped body extended downward till it reached the earth, and in its course carried destruction. Its progress was at the rate of a very fast railroad train,—one says a mile per minute, and another a mile in nine minutes. As it went, it maintained a whirling motion, and the noise is described as a 'buzzing' sound. It was not accompanied by any wind or storm, no rain and hail falling until half an hour it had passed away. Had it descended in the midst of a city, the destruction must have been terrible. The Herald says:

What agency could produce such results except electricity we are unable to compre hend; and yet the strange proofs of destruction exhibited cannot well be explained on the most popular theory connected with this wonderful agency. The trees are still green in the leaf and healthful in the bud, and neither wood or metallic substances with which the element came in contact bear the slightest mark of heat, or show the usual visible effects of atmospheric electrical contact as a destroying power."

It does not often fall to our lot, to meet with so barefaced and palpable a pervasion of the truth as is contained in the Canadian of last week, in an article upon the incorporation of Sandwich; wherein it is unblushingly asserted, "that had it not been for the interference of Mr. Rankin, the bill would now be amongst the waste paper of the House, and that to Mr. Rankin alone are we indebted for the boasted benefit of separate municipal existence, and when that gentleman felt disposed, he took it up and carried it through." After this, we need not be surprised at anything that may appear in the columns of that journal; can it be possible that so weighty a pressure has been applied to the editor, that he has been forced to write and insert what is known to be at variance with truth, or is he so blind in his devotion to Mr. Rankin, that he cannot see his faults? either one or the other must be the case, for no independent journalist would in the face of facts, make assertions known to be untrue unless it were so. The fact of the matter is, that Mr. Rankin could have had his own way, the bill would only too readily have been laid among the waste paper of the House, but as right and justice will prevail, Sandwich through the exertions of Mr. Wilson, in whose hands the bill was placed, was carried through, but no thanks are due to Mr. Rankin on its behalf, for until he found that there was no use in opposing the bill, he used his utmost exertions against it and would in all probability have voted against it, when it came up finally in the House.

We could not help being surprised upon seeing this article, after what had already appeared upon this subject in the Canadian, and we are surprised that the action taken, by Mr. Rankin, as he asserts, in favour of the bill, should find so much favor at his hands, but strange things do often happen, and opinions do often change in the sanctum of our Neighbour, and in this matter especially an extraordinary change has came over the spirit of his dreams.

But why it should be claimed for Mr. Rankin that through his exertions alone Sandwich became an incorporated Town we cannot for a moment imagine, for that gentleman made no secret of his opposition to the Bill, and asserted openly and even boasted that he would use his utmost endeavours to defeat the measure, and now to wheel suddenly about after its accomplishment, and take to himself the credit, is certainly passing strange and not very consistent with al.

We hope that a more consistent course will be adopted hereafter by that journal, and he will not make himself appear ridiculous in the eyes of the public, and be more partial to truth, as by the use of that commodity alone can a journalist hope to receive encouragement from the public. And in attempting to make Latin quotations again, we hope he will not be so lavish of what is commonly called Hog Latin, and if he is not sufficiently acquainted with that language to quote correctly, let him consult some friend who will give him a proper one. If the English language is too contracted for his expansive mind, and he is forced to refer to the dead languages for help, it would be advisable for him to go back to the latin grammar and rub up a little, for nothing appears so redicul ous as a wrong quotation from another tongue, for stick to the good old English, that all who read may understand, for it is not to be supposed that the vulgar public can follow the flights of so expansive a mind as that of the editor of the Canadian.

As the Council will soon be in session, it is to be hoped that the Reeves will take up the subject of draining this county, and employ some competent engineer to report upon the practicability and the probable cost, as well as the parts of the county most in need, of drainage. This subject is now becoming too important to be delayed any longer, and the people demand that something be done, and that soon. If an engineer were employed, at the next session of the council he could have his reports, estimates &c. prepared ray in four months, which would give time for making all arrangements in order to make an early start in the spring of next year.

No parties can be more competent to judge of the advantages which would result from drainage, than the Reeves, and it therefore behooves them to take action thereon. Any person who may doubt the great necessity of some system being adopted for that purpose, has only to take a trip through the county at the present time, and see the fields all under water in many places, and many farmers that have not ploughed their farms in consequence of the wet season; and grain which should have been planted two or three weeks ago, is not yet in the ground. This should be proof sufficient to convince any one that a system of drainage should be undertaken in this county, and we hope the council will not delay it any longer.

An Act having been passed during the last session of Parliament, authorizing the adoption of the Decimal Currency; and as the public departments will in a very short time, use it altogether, we have no doubt that it will become general, during the present year.

We give an easy and correct method of changing Halifax into Decimal Currency, which is thus, Halifax being equal to 3|5 of the decimal: multiply the decimal by 3 and divide by 5 for example $1.00 x 3=300 which divided by 5 leaves 60 pence or 5 shillings currency, and to reduce currency to federal money, the rule must only be reversed.

Police War in New York.--The Mayor Arrested.

The conflict between the State and Municipal Authorities goes on swimmingly. On Tuesday morning, Mr. Conover, the Street Commissioner, appointed by Governor King, presented himself at the Street Commissioner's Office, to enter upon his duties, but was summarily walked out by Captain Bennett, assisted by some of the police force. Mr. Conover then got out a warrant in the superior court for the arrest of Mayor Wood, and Captain Bennett, on the charge of having committed an assault on him, Conover. In the afternoon Captain Walling proceeded to the City Hall to arrest the Mayor, but was ejected from the office by a posse of men, whom the Mayor had with him to defend him. Coroner Perry was then put in possession of a second warrant from the superior court to arrest the Mayor, and hold him to bail in $5,000, in a civil suit brought by Mr. Conover. In proceeding to the City Hall Coroner Perry was ejected like his predecessor, without having served the warrant. He returned, however, to the charge, with about fifty of the new Metropolitan Police, who, however, did not succeed in their object, but got badly beaten by the Mayor's police, about a dozen of them being seriously wounded—one or two so severely that their recovery is doubtful. The military were then called out, and the Seventh Regiment made their appearance in front of the City Hall. In the presence of this formidable force, the Mayor ceased resistance, and, allowing the warrant to be served on him by the Coroner, gave bail in $5,000. A criminal process issued by the Recorder, on the charge of inciting a riot, was next served upon them by the Sheriff, followed by a writ of Habeas Corpus, issued by Judge Russell, which removed him from the tribunal of the Recorder until the Writ of Habeas Corpus shall be decided. The Mayor, after these proceedings, issued a proclamation, on which the Tribune remarks:—"To judge by this document, one would think the Wood yesterday intended not only to put down the Metropolitan Police, but to subdue all the Courts, and make himself the sole ruler of the city. He is disappointed. His riot proved sadly inadequate, and the day which he began in defiance and in battle, he ended in the custody of the Sheriff, and with the city under the protection of the military. Public order was triumphantly defended, and so it will be to the end." Rather a strange maintenance of public order, we should say, when the highest authorities in the State are in a constant state of warfare with each other fighting with their partisans in the streets! We doubt, if history records another instance of a Mayor being arrested for heading a riot in his own city!—Globe.

An important political decision has been promulgated by the Supreme Court of Illinois in relation to the allegiance of subjects, and the duty of the government to afford protection. The doctrine of "once a subject always a subject," is abandoned. The case in regard to which the decision is made is that of Mr. Lawless, a merchant of Granada. He was dragged out of his house and shot by the Gautemalans when they took Granada. He was formerly a British subject, but became a naturalized citizen of the United States. His claim applied to the British Government for compensation for the loss of her son's life and protection. The reply was that he had renounced his allegiance by becoming a citizen of the United States, and was not entitled to British property.—The decision is stated in a letter from Lord Clarendon.

On Monday evening last, says the Windsor Herald, as the Express train, coming west, was waiting at the Bell Ewart station, at half-past 8 p.m., a sudden squall of rain and wind came on which has not been equalled for many years in this locality. The cars were, on one side, actually lifted from the track, and the impression on the mind of all was that the train was being overturned; large trees were shattered or blown down in every direction, and it is probable many houses suffered.

In consequence of the absence of several members of the administration, and the change in the governorship consequent on Sir EDMUND HEAD'S return to England, there can be no meetings of Council, we presume, for several weeks. Whether we are to regard Col. TACHE'S nomination to the office of Crown Lands' Commissioner as a permanent arrangement, will, therefore, for some time be uncertain. This, however, we may here state, that the present state of governmental arrangements is anything but satisfactory. Public opinion pointed to Mr SICOTTE as the member of the government best fitted, from his business habits, and his knowledge of public opinion in Upper Canada, to occupy the position recently held by Mr. CAUCHON; and, without any disparagement of Col. TACHE'S abilities, we must be permitted to say that he is utterly unequal to the task which his new position imposes on him. Whether we are to hold Sir EDMUND HEAD responsible for this latest act of his administration, we do not know. But this we do know that his sanctioning what the public will regard as a mere administrative shuffle, immediately before leaving for England, will not tend to redeem his character as a far seeing statesman, in public estimation. Unpleasant trusts have to be told, whether it please the sycophants of the governing party or otherwise. The journal has a duty to clearly defined. It is fortunate when he is equal to his mission.—Leader.

LEAD ORE.—We have before us a small lump of rich lead ore, found in the township of Sherbrooke, rear of North Crosby, where, the Indian who brought it to us, says there is plenty of it. He had a large lump in his possession when he came to this city, on Thursday last, but having been treated by some white men until he was tipsy, he left it in some house which he could not recollect. He said there was also in the same locality plenty of black lead, such as is used for polishing stoves.—Kingston News.

The Hudson Bay Territory question is beginning to attract increased interest in England. By the Europa we have received a petition from the Liverpool Financial Reform Association to the Imperial Parliament, praying for the entire abolition of the Hudson Bay Company's monopoly. We also learn something more of the House of Commons Committee, which is to investigate the subject, and its doings. The question whether Mr. Roche, who accompanied Mr. Justice Draper in the character of his secretary, should be allowed to give evidence, had been decided. He is to be heard. The objection advanced against his giving evidence was that he had already written strongly against the Company, its claims and pretentions. With Mr. Labouchere this objection was at first paramount; and the first decision of the Committee, after discussing the question at considerable length with closed doors, was not to hear him.—Dissatisfied with this decision, Mr. Draper wrote a long memorial to the Colonial Secretary, who is chairman of the Committee and insisted on the right of Mr Roche being hear l by the committee on behalf of Canada, Mr. Labouchere was thus induced to procure reconsideration of the question; and it was again discussed with closed doors.—The result was that the committee reversed its decision; and Mr. Roche was to be examined on the following Tuesday. At the same time, the new map of the territory, prepared by Mr. Devine, of the Canadian Crown Lands Department, had been ordered by the House of Commons to be lithographed. The Company are represented as being exceedingly annoyed and somewhat taken aback by the production of this important document.

On the committee there are four shareholders of the Company, of whom Mr. Ellice is the largest. This gentleman, who passes for a master of intrigue, and who boasts himself the father of the Palmerston Government—and of whom his friends say that he holds its fate in his hands—is son of an extensive Canadian trader, who purchased from the family of Lothbinière the Seigniory of Beauharnois. The son, the present Mr. Ellice, afterwards went to England, and married a daughter of Earl Grey, an officer's widow. When Lord Grey rose to political influence, Mr. Ellice became a personage of importance; and so early as 1822, he was powerful enough to influence the Government of the day to introduce a Bill for the Union of the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada. It happened, however, that at that time, one Parker, who had had extensive commercial dealings with Mr. Ellice who was in London, and who, rightly or wrongly, had accused the latter of numerous frauds, set to work to destroy the plans of Mr. Ellice. Refused a hearing at the Colonial Office, Parker prevailed with Sir James Macintosh, Sir Francis Burdett, and other members of the House of Commons; and a result was the organization of such an opposition as arrested the bill at its second reading. Ever since that time, Mr. Ellice has paid particular attention to Canadian affairs so far as they effected his own interest. For a long time he exerted a baleful influence on the Seigniorial Tenures question; but defeated at length in that field, Mr Ellice is most anxious to protect his Hudson Bay stock. He tried to prevent our principal witness from being heard; and had on one occasion succeeded in doing so, but for the presence of Mr. Draper in England that that stratagem was defeated by the reversal by the committee of its decision on the right of Mr. Roche to give evidence.

Spanish Invasion of Mexico.--Santa Anna again.

WASHINGTON, May 19.

The New Orleans mail of the 13th inst. has been received. No papers are confirmatory of the intentions of Spain to invade Mexico. Orders have been given to prepare three months rations for 10,000 men. It is also confirmatory of the special despatch from Washington to the New York Herald respecting General Santa Anna's agency.

AFFAIRS IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, June 13.

Baron Vonleinbourg was yesterday introduced to the President and Assistant Secretary of State, and delivered his credentials as Minister of the King of the Netherlands. Mutual assurance, a desire to maintain the friendship which has always existed between the two Governments were expressed.

Baron Vonleinbourg was in full court dress.

The President has officially recognized Jean Northbrack as Vice Consul for Russia at New York.

(From the N. Y. Herald, Friday.)

Municipal conflict, as far as regards any exhibition of physical force, is at an end.—Quiet prevailed yesterday. The contest will henceforth be carried on by the lawyers, and from all appearance they will have a busy time. A score or two of warrants for the arrest of the policemen engaged in Tuesday's fight have been issued, and it is understood that Governor King had concluded to direct the holding of a special term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer early in July for the trial of the cases. Mayor Wood is cited to answer for contempt; there are also quite a number of pleas and counterpleas on foot, all tending to promote litigation in some shape or other. The Board of Aldermen last evening resolved to defend the Mayor in the suits brought against him, and the counsel engaged remain in permanent session until the existing suits are over. The special officers sworn in by the Metropolitan Commissioners were disbanded yesterday, and it is understood that no further attempt will be made by the Board to serve process upon the Mayor.

The Judge Edmonds submitted yesterday in the Court of Appeals, at Albany, his closing argument on behalf of the people, in the Metropolitan Police case. The attention of the Court having been called to the necessity for a speedy decision of the case, in view of the collision in the city of New York, Judge Edmonds stated that the Court was quite aware of the desirableness of having it disposed of at the present term if practicable.

Pearls have been found in muscle shells, in the vicinity of Oswego. Large quantities of fine pearls have been found, and great numbers of the Oswegians of both sexes, are out and armed with shovels, hoes, rakes and baskets, wading knee deep through the various creeks in search of the precious stones.

Seizure of $13,000 worth of Diamonds and Jewelry--Seizure of the Steamer Fulton.

In consequence of the information received at the Custom House, officers Alexander Isaacs and Thomas Byrnes went, by order of the Collector of the Port, on Sunday to Island, and waited the arrival of the steamship Fulton from Havre, on her last trip; they went to the room of Mr. Kane, the chief steward, where, on examination, they found a quantity of jewelry, Oriental pearls and other precious stones, in his overcoat pocket and the property of the latter seized and sent to the collector's office. The steward admitted that they were not on the ship's manifest, and admitted that he had done wrong in taking them, and wished that he had thrown the d—d goods overboard before any trouble had come to him. Kane was taken before the commissioner Morton, and held to bail in the sum of $5,000 on a charge of smuggling.

The steamship Fulton was seized by the Custom House officers on the grounds of the above smuggling, but a petition has been presented against her being libelled, as the captain or officers were not cognizant of the illegal act.—N. Y. Herald.

A correspondent of the New York Herald writes from Washington:—"The Secretary of the Treasury, I understand, will recommend the repeal of all laws requiring the discriminating duties to be collected in American "ships." This restriction is a tax on the "trade, and violative of the spirit of the constitution." Our government is known to be in correspondence with that of Washington on the subject; and this intelligence gives hope of a successful issue. The matter is one of high importance; and it will be of great advantage to both countries to have it satisfactorily disposed of.—Leader.

OTTAWA LANDS.—Almost the only lands now remaining in the hands of the Government for settlement are to be found in that vast tract commonly known as the "Ottawa Country." A part of it lies north of the Ottawa river, but by far the greater part lies between the Ottawa, the frontier settlements and Lake Huron.—It is estimated to contain 80,000 square miles of territory, the greater portion of which is still unsurveyed. It is chiefly to this part that immigration must now be directed, and here that only new settlements can be formed. It is also evidently of the utmost importance to the welfare of Canada, that this part of the coun ry should be occupied and improved as speedily as possible, for until this is done, it must always remain what it now is, a long strip of country without solidity or compactness. The want of a back country is a serious injury in peace or in war, and gives rise to many difficulties and disadvantage, which must be apparent to every one. Hitherto nothing has been done to obviate this disadvantage, but, on the contrary, every public undertaking has tended to draw the population towards the frontier, and discourage the back settlers. After the country had expended immense sums of money in completing a line of water communication along the St. Lawrence, from one end of the Province to the other, unsurpassed by any in the world, a Railroad is constructed also skirting the frontier along the very same line, and thus, instead of bearing its shares of the burden of these works, is left totally unprovided for. This has had a powerful effect in retarding interior settlements, and will do so until a different policy is adopted. We trust we see the dawning of a better policy in our promised Ottawa works. But along with them we would wish to see other less expensive and more immediate measures adopted for opening up and settling the territory of which we have been speaking. New townships are required to be laid out and surveyed, and leading Roads opened through them. Let this be done, and the attention of immigrants directed this way, and we will soon hear no more complaints of the want of a back country.—Citizen.

The comments of the N Y. Mormon, on the death of Pratt, are very characteristic Pratt it will be remembered, was lately shot in Arkansas by an outraged husband, whose wife the exemplary Elder had seduced, and with whose children he was making his way back to Utah. The Mormon relieves its feelings as follows:

"Many of our contemporaries are rejoicing over the bloody deed, justifying the murderer and spitting out their vengeance with the fury of hell that nestles in their corrupt hearts. Though we deeply deplore the loss to the Church of such a great and upright man, and the bereavement to his family, yet we mourn not. His life has been one of honour and faithfulness his days have been well spent in the service of his God; his name is refered to by thousands and tens of thousands, and will be honoured by millions yet unborn, when that of his cowardly assassin, and those who have cheered him on to his damning deed, and who now rejoice over their crime, will be loathsome and a stink in the nostrils of God and good men."

Pratt is forcible, if not elegant; but it is a very fair specimen of the performance of our interesting cotemporary.

THE FAMILY OF GEORGE III.—There were thirteen children born from the marriage of George III. with Queen Charlotte: George, Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV.; Frederick, Duke of York; William, Duke of Clarence, afterwards William the IV.; Edward, Duke of Kent; Earnest, Duke of Cumberland, afterwards King of Hanover; Augustus, Duke of Sussex; and Adolphus, Duke of Cambridge. Of the six daughters three died unmarried, and three were married. The names and order of birth stand thus: The Princess Royal Charlotte, Augusta, who was married to the King of Wurtemburgh; the Princess Augusta, who died unmarried, the Princess Elizabeth, who was married to the Prince of Hesse Humburg; the Princess Mary, the lady first married, who married her cousin the Duke of Gloucester; and finally, the Princess Sophia and Amelia, both of whom died unmarried; with so copious a race there was little danger of a disputed succession or of a vacant throne. It is singular, however, how few in number are the representatives of this numerous family in present generation. Queen Victoria, the King of Hanover, and the three children of the late Duke of Cambridge, are, we believe, now the only survivers.

The particulars of the burning of the steamer Louisiana in the Gulf of Mexico, a notice of which we have already received by telegraph, has now reached us. The event occurred some six or eight miles south east of Galveston, the fire having broke out about one o'clock in the morning of May 31. There were fifty or sixty passengers on board, beside the crew, the greater number of whom perished. The fire being amidships all communication between the forward and after part of the vessel was cut off, and the tiller-ropes being burnt, she was entirely unmanageable, although the engines continued to run for some time.—Among those who perished was Col. Bainbridge, of the U. S. Army.—N. Y. Times.

THE EXPLORING PARTY.—Among the passengers brought by the Arabia were Captain Palliser and party, mentioned some time ago, who proceeded to Lake Superior via Detroit, and intended to make Fort Geary, on Lake Winnepeg, their general rendezvous.

ST. GEORGE HOTEL,

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y.

—ooo—

THIS Hotel, consisting of the "AVON" rebuilt and enlarged, can accommodate one Hundred or more, and affords accommodation not excelled at the Springs. It is convenient to the Rail-Road Depot, Post-Office, and all the public establishments in the village.

When necessary, the proprietor will use his private house, well stocked garden, choice fruits and grounds, as an auxiliary to the Hotel.

With the unrivalled reputation of our waters—the Rail-Road facilities from all directions, and the increasing accommodations our Hotels afford, Avon grows more and more attractive as a fashionable and health-imparting resort.

Our carriages are free to our guests to and from the Depot and to and from the Springs.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that a Quarterly Meeting of the Board of Public Instruction for the County of Essex, for the examination of Teachers, will be held at Sandwich on Tuesday the thirtieth day of June next,

By order,
Sandwich, } PAUL JOHN SALTER,
June 10, 1857. } Secretary Bd. P. I.

NOTICE.

JOHN TODD, at Todd's Corner, Sandwich street, respectfully begs leave to intimate to the public that he is prepared to remove all kinds of Houses, Barns, Stables &c. &c., on the shortest notice. He is also prepared to Build and Repair Docks &c., and can supply Timber for such purposes.

All persons entrusting him with their work may depend on getting it done in a superior manner and at very moderate rates.

Todd's Corner, June 10th, 1857.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with congestion of the Liver, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infectious or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or where travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits, will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For that debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the invalid, however weakly from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy those delightful symptoms of a return to strength, health, viz: good appetite, sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting by Lawrence; also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York of each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

L. P. ST. AMOUR, Agent, for Sandwich.

MAIL CONTRACT.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the Postmaster General, and Marked "Tender for Mail Service," will be received at Toronto until 12 o'clock, noon, on Saturday the 13th June 1857 for the conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails Three times per week each way between AMHERSTBURG and RONDEAU on and from the First day July next.

The conveyance to be made in a Two Horse Duggy, Waggon or Cariole.

The computed distance between Amherstburg and Rondeau is 68 miles.

The rate of travel to be not less than Five Miles per hour, including stoppages for all purposes.

The days and hours of Arrival and Departure to be as follows, subject to a right of the Post Master General to alter the same, should he consider it advisable so to do, to leave Amherstburg every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and to leave Rondeau, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and at such hours as may be required, and to proceed direct through both ways—Serving the offices at Dealtown, Romney, Mersea, Leamington, Gosfield, Kingsville, and Colchester.

The Contract, if satisfactorily executed will continue in force for a term not exceeding four years; the Postmaster General reserving the right to terminate the agreement at any time previous to the expiration of the four years, should the public interest require it, upon giving the contractor three months previous notice of his intention.

All expenses on this route for Tolls, Ferries &c., must be defrayed by the contractor.

Each Tender to state the price asked in words at length, and to be accompanied by the written guarantee of two responsible parties undertaking that in the event of the Tender being accepted the contract shall be duly executed, by the party tendering, for the price demanded: undertaking also to become bound with the contractor in the sum of five hundred pounds for the due performance of the service.

Blank forms of Tender may be obtained at the Post Offices Amherstburg, Chatham, Rondeau and Mersea.

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighbouring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry them to or buy in Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. ANGRY ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, ITCHES, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cure which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,
Lumbago,	Sores of all kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Sprains
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,
Ringworm,	Ulcers,

Scalds,	Wounds of all kinds,

* * Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80, Maiden Lane, New York; & 244 Strand, London, by all respectable Druggists and dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in pots, at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each pot.

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Wednesday, the

1st day of July next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

Dairy Utensils in the Manufacture for 25 Cows.

Three milking pails, to hold 5 gallons; cheese tub, 55 gallons; sieve ladder; straining cloth placed over this and sieve in the ladder over centre of tub; a triple knife, or wire sieve, or heater to break cheese; tub; sieve to strain whey through; vats to receive the whey to stand in till it is skimmed and goes out to the pigs. These vats are best made of lead or tin, as when scoured they are more easily kept sweet from the sourness of the whey. Cheese vats, turned, of Elm timber; board to place on top of vats when in the cheese press. The first press to be about 3 cwt. for eight cheeses to make 1 cwt. It is not well to press too heavily at first, as the fat is thereby pressed from the cheese when the whey is warm and runs freely. After the first 24 hours less pressure very good. Cheese cloths placed in the vats before the curd is put in them: these cloths of a coarse canvas material made for the purpose—they should be changed twice in the 24 hours, once a day afterwards when the cheese must be rubbed with salt, and kept in the presses five or six days, or longer if it is a thick cheese. A bench for salting cheese on, and sharp knife to pare off any uneven edges, though they ought not to appear in well filled vats on well made cheese. Pans to hold the milk to stand in before skimming the cream for butter may be either of tin, glass or brown line ware lined with white ware; these last seem the best as least expensive, as from their thickness the milk cools more gradually in these than in glass or tin, these to hold 2 gallons and 6 quarts being put to stand in each, to be skimmed once in 12 or 24 hours, according to various plans. As to churns, the American for a small dairy is as good as any, the barrel churn for a large one.

CARROT PLUM PUDDING.—Boil some carrots till they are tender enough to be pulped through a colander; take a quarter of a pound of the pulp, half a pound of potato, mashed and boiled very fine, a little salt, half a pound of flour, four ounces of moist sugar, four ounces of butter melted, two ounces of candied orange peel, and three quarters of a pound of currants; mix all well together over night, and boil it four hours. When the pudding is taken out of the pan, let it remain in the cloth about three minutes before serving up. This will be found a very excellent pudding.

BEETS.—Beets should be boiled till very tender, to be eaten with salt cod-fish. Wash, and, without scraping, boil them whole. They are used to ornament salads. They make, when boiled, and put into vinegar, either sliced or whole, a cheap and wholesome pickle. When quite small they may be boiled with the leaves for greens.

ERUPTIONS OF THE SKIN.—An excellent medicine for eruptions on the skin: mix together six drachms of ammoniated wine, one and a half of laudanum, and one and a half of the solution of oxymuriate of mercury. From twenty to thirty drops to be taken night and morning, in any agreeable vehicle. There is nothing hurtful in the use of flour as a powder for the face.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Weed artichokes; clean asparagus beds; plant basil; continue to plant beans for successions; thin beets, &c.; plant borecole, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower; thin early cabbage, and draw up early celery. If you have cucumbers in pots in frames, plant them out; sow endive; thin leeks; transplant lettuce; sow mint, and thin early parsnips; sow peas, and attend to those previously sown.

Melons raised in hot-beds should go out early this month, as well as lima beans, early squashes, tomatoes, egg-plants and other culinaries started in hot beds; sow white radishes; plant sage; thin salsify; plant out savory; gather seeds as ripen, sow spinach, and thin former sowings; keep ground well tilled between rows throughout the garden: attend to thinning generally; plant out tomatoes; sow turnip cabbage; keep down the weeds. All the early lettuce and radish ground being now cleared out, may be used for beets and carrots which will give better late crops than if planted earlier.

Dust pulverized quick lime, unleached ashes, tobacco dust, &c., over plants answered to be subject to be annoyed by insects. Plant okra; cut and dry herbs in flower, selecting for this purpose a clear dry day; water cauliflowers, and break down the leaves over those near maturity, to prevent their buttoning too early.

CREAM CHEESE.—Take a quart of cream or, if not desired very rich, add thereto one pint of new milk; warm it in hot water till it is about the heat of milk from the cow, add a small quantity of rennet (a table spoonful is sufficient), let it stand till thick, then break it slightly with a spoon, and place it in the frame in which you have previously put a fine canvass cloth; press it slightly with a weight; let it stand a few hours, then put a finer cloth in the frame; a little powdered salt may be put over the cloth. It will be fit for use in a day or two.

HOW TO COOK RHUBARB.—It is a common error in cooking rhubarb to peel it. This should never be done as the skin contains the aroma of the plant, and is not at all fibrous but cooks as readily and becomes pulpy. We have derived this information from a French cook of note, experience and skill. The same cook tells us that asparagus should be cut into pieces about three quarters of an inch long before cooking. It should be boiled with a nice piece of salt pork and served up in the same manner as peas.

BRONCHITIS.—The following is a cure for bronchitis: take honey in the comb, squeeze it out, and dilute it with a little water, occasionally moistening the lips and mouth with it. It has never been known to fail in any case, even where children had throats so swollen as to be unable to swallow.

CREAM PASTE.—Break two eggs into a stewpan with a little salt, and as much sifted flour as it will take; mix in a pint of milk, and put it on the fire, and stir it, not to let it stick, till you do not smell the flour; add a piece of butter about the size of a walnut.

BE SAVING.—Preserve the water you have boile l poultry or meat in; it will make nice soup.

For Sale!!!
A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POT ASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in this neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and benefitting operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 32 feet, presented as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£350.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line for the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being built the present season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandize with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SWINDON, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.
For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, Simply - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.
THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,
which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.
THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT
embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's NEW METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.
THE METHOD OF TEACHING
strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the operations of Transfer, as regard it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire the various notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.
THE INITIATORY COURSE.
embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of explaining and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.
To THE REGULAR COURSE
is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.
THE EXTENDED COURSE
embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.
By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.
PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.
DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.
The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar institution in the Union.
THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.
The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

'Tis Better Not to Know.

When Hope's bright rays shine o'er my heart,
In morn's effulgent glow;
Should evening each those rays depart,
'Tis better not to know.

When fear along my pathway glides—
Dark presages of woe;
What'er of future ill betide,
'Tis better not to know.

Should friends who round my hearth-stone strong
Forth from my presence go,
And harm me with malicious tongue,
'Tis better not to know.

Should he whose love I safely trust,
When my cold form lies low,
Quickly forget my sleeping dust;
'Tis better not to know.

'Tis better for the eye ne'er see.
What future fates must flow,
Since from our fate we cannot flee;
'Tis better not to know.

Then never sigh one moment brief,
The future to foreknow;
Since knowledge would but give us grief,
'Tis better not to know.

The Life-Boat.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

Kate Williams was an orphan. Her mother had been dead many years, while her father had left her more recently. He, the father, had been a sea captain, and when he died he left his two children with all his wealth, amounting to nearly half a million of dollars. The other child was a son, named Frank, an older by some five years than was Kate, she being twenty, and he five and twenty. Frank was away. He had been travelling through Europe, but was expected home, when we introduce our story, in a very few weeks, if not days. The two children still retained the house and lands which their father had bought and occupied. It was a splendid mansion, within a very few rods of the shore, overlooking the broad Atlantic. It was a romantic spot, and the heirs had been offered great prices for it; but they had no desire to sell their old house. There were a few neighbours close by, and at the distance of about a mile was quite a village.

Kate Williams was a noble hearted generous girl, and everybody who knew her called her handsome. And so she was.—She was none of your drawing-room ornaments, but a substantial individual, full of life and power, and realizing that she was one of a class who had work to do. She was a modest, pure being, but none of your demure, downcast sort. She carried her virtue in her soul, and her purity in her thoughts; and her laugh was never so loud and joyous as when others could share in her happiness. Her eyes were grey, but a bright, handsome grey, full of light and intelligence; and her hair was light, almost too light for brown, and yet too dark for golden hair—though when the sun shone on it, the golden hues were rich and predominant. Her features were full and round, with dimples wherever a smile could rest, and glowing with the ruddy hue of health.

Is it a wonder that Kate Williams should be loved? Why, everybody loved her; but then there were two individuals who loved her very dearly—or at least they swore they did. The first was John Glancy. He was a young man, four and twenty, a lawyer by profession, having been practising in the neighboring village for about two years.—He was a good-looking man; tall, straight and well formed; with black hair and eyes, and possessing a proud, and at times overbearing spirit. He was not a liberal-minded man, but of this Kate knew not.

The second was Harry Winship. He was a year younger than Glancey, and by profession a physician, having been in practice in the village just two years. He was not so tall as his rival, and not so proud looking. His hair was light brown, and his eyes grey; and his looks owed more to the expression of his features than to their formation. He was not so much bowed to as was Glancey. A man, or a woman, would bow very politely to the lawyer; and then in a moment afterwards, should they meet the physician, they would grasp his hand and smile. Glancey's clients respected him very much.—Winship's patients loved him very much. This was the difference between the two men.

Now Kate Williams knew that both these men loved her, but as yet she had not chosen between them. They were both good men she thought, and so far she had only allowed them the privileges of passing friends. She had not one particle of the coquette in her—not one thought of it. She meant to make her choice and adhere to it. While she was thus pondering, a circumstance transpired which influenced her, as we shall see in the sequel.

In the village lived a young female—a married woman—named Bolton. Her husband was away on business. One day Dr. Winship was called on to visit her. He examined her carefully and was not a little startled upon finding that she was actually suffering from delirium tremens. Her constitution was naturally frail, and the excessive use of rich wines had brought her down. He stated the case to the old nurse just as it was, and gave very rigid orders concerning the treatment she must receive.

In a few days after this the story of Mrs. Bolton's strange sickness got spread over the town, and when people were asked how they knew, they replied that Doctor Winship had said so. The truth was, the old nurse had done all the mischief. The story soon reached the ears of John Glancey. Mrs Bolton was his own sister, a fact of which Winship had no knowledge. The young lawyer called upon the doctor at once. The latter would have received him cordially, but the former repelled all familiarity.

"Dr. Winship, did you say that my sister had been a drunkard?"

"Your sister, sir?"

"Ay, Sarah Bolton is my sister."

"Ah, I was not aware of that."

"Never mind. She was a female, and as such demanded your sympathies. Did you circulate the story, sir?"

"No, sir, I did not. I was called to see the woman, and I found her suffering under the influence of delirium tremens; and I explained the matter to the nurse so that she might know how to proceed. I have not opened my lips upon the subject to any other person, save, when I have been questioned upon the subject; and then I replied that as a physician I never answered such questions."

"Exactly," returned the lawyer, with some anger. "Such answers are enough to curse the character of any person, for they simply bid the questioner to surmise what he pleases. But, as you acknowledge, the story did originate with you, and is traced back through the nurse to your lips. Now I wish you to publicly dispute the thing."

"Now, sir?" uttered Harry, with astonishment, "give the lie to my own professional decision? make myself responsible for the mischief of a tattling old nurse? No, sir."

"But remember, sir: The woman is my sister, and her station in society is such that this story will do her much harm."

"I am sorry, sir, very sorry; but I am not to blame. Three months ago I visited Mrs. Bolton, professionally, and at that time I warned her of this. You can do as you please with the story, but I can do nothing. Mrs. Bolton must suffer the same penalty for the violation of natural laws that others suffer. And she must suffer the same from the laws of our social fabric."

"Do I understand, sir, that you will not retract?"

"Retract! I have nothing to retract."

"I wish you to publicly announce, upon your own responsibility, that the story of Mrs. Bolton's having the delirium tremens is false."

"I cannot do it sir," returned the young doctor, proudly. "Had I circulated the story I should be much to blame; but I only gave the nurse such information as was absolutely necessary for her to do her duty. I trust you will see this in its true light."

"Doctor Winship, once more I ask you —will you retract this statement—"

"Hold. What statement do you mean?"

"That Mrs. Bolton had the delirium tremens."

"I never made such a statement. I simply stated to the nurse that Mrs. Bolton was suffering from the effects of over-indulgence in food and drink."

"Will you make the public statement I have demanded?"

"No, Sir—I cannot."

"Very well," said the lawyer, as he turned away, 'you shall hear from me again."

On the next day Harry Winship received a challenge from Glancey to mortal combat. The doctor sat down and wrote in reply that he could never be urged into the commission of a crime of such folly and wickedness as he considered duelling to be.

On the day following, the doctor received a second note in which Glancey informed him that he should be posted as a coward if he did not fight. To this Harry replied that he had too much courage to barter the integrity of his soul for the sake of a perverted and morbid public opinion. He was the coward who dared not refuse to do an evil deed.

After this the lawyer posted the doctor as a coward, and the latter soon found that he was shunned by many who had before sought his company. But the most cutting of all was a note which he received from Kate Williams. She informed him that he would please her by never presuming to approach her as a friend again. Nor did she leave him in the dark. She plainly told him that the friendship between them had been of that kind which must either ripen into the holiest affection of earth, or be nipped in the bud. She could not cast her lot with one at whom the finger of scorn could be pointed, so she would see him no more.

Harry was for a while utterly miserable. He loved the fair girl deeply and truly, and to lose her thus struck a pang to his soul that created a torture the most intense. But on the next day he mastered calmness enough to write an answer to Kate's note. He first informed her of the love she had crushed, and then he touched upon the subject of the trouble between himself and John Glancey. First he explained the whole case, and then the mercantile ethics of Amherstburg, and of the lawyer's visit to him. Then he gave his opinion upon the practice of duelling. It was a noble, generous opinion. And then he informed her that he would much rather suffer the numerited reproach of those who now presumed to scorn him, than to pass through life with the blood of a fellow-being upon his hands, or to meet his God direct from the suicidal duel. He closed by calling down the choicest blessings upon her head, and bidding her adieu forever!

Kate Williams sat in her boudoir when Harry's letter was handed to her, and she broke the seal with a slight curl of contempt upon her ruby lips. But as she read her countenance changed; and when she had finished she wept outright. Had Harry been at her side at that moment, she would have rested upon his bosom, and asked him to forgive her. But he was not there. She read the letter again, and then she wept more than before. She refused to see any company during the remainder of the day.

Had Kate Williams followed the instinct of her own pure soul she would have recalled Harry to her side at once, but she was governed by the opinions of others. Her father had been a warm-hearted, impetuous man, and had fought one duel; and from that father she had received the peculiar idea of chivalrous honour. Naturally proud and tenacious of her honour as a woman, she felt a chill at the thought of being united for life to one who could be called a coward. In her soul she knew that Harry had done no absolute wrong, but still, perhaps he was afraid to fight. "They will tell me," she said to herself, "that my husband will never have the courage to defend his wife's honour."

O, had she known Harry Winship truly, she could have justly said: "Was to the living being that dares insult that man's wife, either by word or deed!" But she did not know. The cloud was upon her soul, and she blew it not away. And so Harry Winship suffered—Kate suffered—and John Glancey believed he had crushed his opponent, and that the lovely heiress would be his wife.

To be continued.

An Arkansas Joke.

An Arkansas correspondent of New Orleans Picayune tells the following good one:

In early times, in a country not far off, these country dram-shops were common, as they were all over the State, where the b'hoys met every Saturday evening to shoot for whiskey and get drunk, and cool off with a fight or two.

On one of these occasions a big, strapping six footer, full of "burst head" and Dutch courage, having been beat at the mark by another, slapped his fists together, and swore he was "spiling for a fight," and could whip any man who could beat him shooting.

This was not noticed by the man for whom it was intended. That of course made him braver and madder. He roared out:

"I kin whip any blink eyed sinner who can beat me shootin'—whoop ee!"

The man aimed at still said nothing.

Six-footer here biled over—so he walked right up to him, shook his fist in his face, and said.—

"You kin shoot, kin you?—but you don't to fight me—I'm a unanimous devil. Whoop!"

The man addressed still said nothing.

Six-footer roared again the louder, and said he must have a fight if he had to "buy it."

"Look 'ere! Slickemgoeasy, if you'll give me a far fight, I'll give a cow and a calf."

Slickem deliberately began to strip, and said—"If that's anything to be made I'm in."

Six-footer turned a little pale—couldn't back down now—struck a ring—pitched in—and Sixfooter got most confoundedly and soundly thrashed. He then rose, shook off the dirt, and swore he "wouldn't pay, for twarn't in the bargain he was to be wall opped."

Slickem said, "I'll sue you."

"Sue away!" said Six-footer, and mounted his bear-skin and rode off.

Slickem went to the county seat, saw a lawyer, and told him his case; the lawyer told him it was a good case, and he would gain it for him. He told him to make out an account "for work and labor done," and sue before a justice of the peace. He did so; the justice of the peace gave judgement for the plaintiff, and ordered the constable to drive the cow and calf to him. Here it rested. The defendant was heard to say.

"Well, I reckon that must be law, but my losing that cow and calf o' my not kivrin' all the pints in the trade, I 'spose?"

Miscellany.

When Brougham attacked the Duke of Newcastle for interrupting the Duke of Wellington in his speech on the Maynooth Bill, Lord Lyndhurst tugged Brougham familiarly by the skirt of his coat, observing "Newcastle is warm he's flaring up dont add fuel to the fire," replied Brougham. "My dear fellow," continued Lord Lyndhurst, "adding fuel to the fire in this case, is literally carrying coals to Newcastle." The joke was too powerful for Brougham to resist; so he laughed and sat down.

A FACT.—A friend of ours once started a country paper in Ohio, and after publishing it some six or eight months, greatly to the sacrifice of health and "visible means," began to complain, in a subdued tone, such as becomes gentlemen of the press, of want of patronage, when he was gravely told by his "friends" that they supposed the advantages he enjoyed of working evenings and rainy days, when others were compelled to be idle, fully compensated him for the want of patronage.

DOW, Jr., in allusion to the exclusion of many would-be church-goers from the sanctuary, by reason of high pew rents in our fashionable churches, remarks:

A married woman lasts longer than a single one, because she is husbanded.

A HARD CASE.—Poor people have a hard time in this little world of ours. Even in matters of religion there is a vast difference between Lazarus and Dives, as the following anecdote sent us by a friend will illustrate:

Old Billy G——had attended a great revival, and in common with many others, he was "converted" and baptised. Not many weeks afterwards, one of his neighbours met him reeling home from the court ground with a considerable brick in his hat.

"Hello, uncle billy," said his friend, "I thought you had joined the church!"

"So I did," answered Billy, making a desperate effort to stand still—"So I did, Jeems, and would a bin a good Baptis' if they hadn't treated me so everlasting mean in the water. Didn't you never hear 'bout it Jeems?"

"Never did."

"Then I'll tell you 'bout it. You see, when we come to the ba'tising place, thar was me and old Jonks, the rich old 'squire, war to be dipped at the same time. Well, the minister tuk the squire in fust, but I didn't mind that much, as I thought it would be just as good when I cum; so he led him in, and after dippin' him under, he raised him up mitey keerful, and wiped his face and led him out. Then cum my turn, and, instead of lifting me out like he did the squire, he left me crawlin' about on the bottom like a d——d mud turtle.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—A Protection against counterfeits exists in the Water-mark, "Holloway, New York and London," which appears in semi-transparent letters in every leaf of the book of directions. If this is not seen when the paper is held to the light, the same is spurious. Unlike the mineral preparations that drive the virus of eruptions and sores into the vital organs, this marvellous Ointment discharges the poison before it leads the flesh. The Pills inevitably cure dyspepsia and all bilious disorders, purifying and vitalizing the blood, &c.

A bottle-nosed loafer went into one of our barber-shops the other day, and after being shaved, handed the proprietor a red cent, upon which he was informed that the price of shaving was six pence. Loafer replied very coolly, "I know it, and that (pointing to the cent) only lacks five cents of it! You must a going to stand for half a time!" There was no appeal to this ludicrous side of the case.

THE TEACHER STUMPED.—It happened in a school room one day, while a class of boys and girls were reciting a lesson in arithmetic. It was about the first lesson.

"Five from five leave how many?" asked the teacher, of a little girl of some six years of age.

After a moments reflection, she answered "Five."

"How do you make that out?" said the teacher.

Holding her two hands out to him, she said.

"Here are five fingers on my right hand, and five on my other. Now, if I take the fingers on my right hand away from the fingers on my left hand, won't five remain?"

The teached was "stumped," and obliged to "knock under."

A CRUMB FOR THE LOWLY.—Those who climb highest in the world are not always the happiest. Genius and talent sometimes raise men to such a giddy height, that they find themselves above all earthly joys, and yet below all heavenly ones. While perpetual summer blooms in the humble valley, the cheerless mountain summit is crowned with the snows of everlasting winter. We do not well to envy those who are above us, for a wise and good Providence distributes the blessings of life more equally than we are apt to imagine.

A GOOD NAME.—Always be more solicitous to preserve your innocence than concerned to prove it. It will never do to seek a good name as a primary object. Like trying to be graceful, the effort to be popular will make you contemptible. Take care of your spirit and conduct, and your reputation will take care of itself. The utmost that you are called to do as the guardian of your reputation, is to remove injurious aspersions. Let not your good be evil spoken of, and follow the highest examples in mild and explicit self-vindication. No reputation can be permanent which does not spring from principle, and he who would maintain a good character should be mainly solicitous to maintain a good character void of offence towards God and towards man.

The diamonds and emeralds on the Hungarian dress which Baron Sina will wear while the Emperor of Austria is in Hungary are valued at 400,000fl.—£40,000.

HUMBUG.—In old times, much of the principal foreign intelligence reached England via the mercantile city of Hamburg.—So many canards came from that channel that when anything peculiarly improbable was reported on 'change, people sneeringly exclaimed, "Hamburg!" By degrees, this word was shortened into humbug.

The reason why a majority of you go to Beelzebub, is because you can't afford to go to heaven at the present exorbitant prices.

A sub-editor recently announced the illness of his principal, and piously added, "All good paying subscribers are requested to make mention of him in their prayers; the other class need not do so as the prayer of the wicked availeth nothing," according to good authority."

YOUNG LADY IN A SCRAPE.—HOOPS AND HIGH HEELS IN CHURCH.—The Richmond Whig says:— A few Sundays ago, a modest young gentleman of our acquaintance attended the morning service, in one of our fashionable churches. He was kindly shown into a luxuriously cushioned pew and had barely settled himself, and taken an observation of his neighbors, before a beautiful young lady entered, and with a graceful wave of the hand, preventing our friend from rising to give her place, quietly passed into a seat near the end. When the hymn was given out, she skilfully found the page, and with a sweet smile that set his heart a thumping, handed her neighbor the book The minister raised his hands in prayer, and the fair girl knelt, and in this posture perplexed her friend to know which most to admire, her beauty or devoutness.

Presently the prayer was concluded and the congregation resumed their seats. Our friend respectfully raised his eyes from the fair form he had been so earnestly scanning, lest when she looked up, she would detect him staring at her. After a couple of seconds he darted a furtive glance at his charmer and was astonished to see her still on her knees, he looked closely and saw that she was much effected, trembling in violent agitation, no doubt from the eloquent power of the preaching. Deeply sympathizing, he watched her closely.

Her emotion became more violent; reaching her hand behind her, she would convulsively grasp her clothing and strain, as it were to rend the brilliant fabric of her dress. The sight was exceedingly painful to behold, but he still gazed like one entranced, with wonder and astonishment. After a minute the lady raised her voice, heretofore concealed in the cushion, and with her hand made an unmistakeable beck on to our friend. He quickly moved along the pew toward her, and inclined his ear as she evidently wished to say something.

"Please help me, sir," she whispered, "my dress has caught, and I can't get up." A brief examination revealed the cause of the difficulty; the fair girl wore fashionable high heeled shoes; kneeling upon both knees, those heels of course stuck out at right angles; and in this position the highest hoop of her new fangled skirt caught over them and thus it was impossible for her to raise herself or straighten her limbs. The more she struggled the tighter she was bound; so she was constrained to call for help. This was immediately, if not scientifically, rendered; and when the next prayer was made, she merely inclined herself upon the back of the front pew—thinking, no doubt, that she was not in praying costume.

A volcano has recently made its appearance in Pigeon Mountain, some ten miles distant from the town of Lafayette, in Walker county Georgia. A report had been heard, at intervals, in the mountain since October, 1856, but on the 14th of April last the earth was violently agitated. "The citizens in the vicinity were aroused and terribly frightened by the commotion. When observing the mountain they were more terrified, for a magnificent light was plainly seen issuing from the summit. The atmosphere soon became strongly impregnated with a disagreeable sulphuric odor. On the following day a thick torrent of smoke and ashes ascended from where the light was previously seen. The smoke was not visible at night. This was perhaps owing to the elements being covered at the time with a very dark cloud. No blaze has yet been seen to issue from the crater. It has continued about as above described ever since, emitting smoke and ashes without intermission. The crater is thought to be about one hundred yards in diameter. No one has yet ventured near enough to ascertain anything of its general depth. Several springs in the vicinity have totally disappeared. Many of the citizens are very much alarmed, and some are even moving out of the valley, through anticipations and fear of a violent eruption.

FOUNTAIN OF BLOOD IN A CAVERN.—B. G. Squire's notes on Central America describe a wonderful effusion of a fluid resembling blood, near the town of Vitud, in the State of Honduras. It appears that there is a continually oozing and dripping from the roof of a cavern there, a red liquid which upon falling, coagulates so as to precisely resemble blood. Like blood it corrupts, insects deposit their larvæ in it, and dogs and Buzzards rest to the cavern to eat it. Attempts have been made several times to obtain some of the liquid for analysis, but in all cases without success, in consequence of its rapid decomposition, whereby the bottles containing it were broken. The small cavern, or grotto, during the day is visited by buzzards and hawks, and at night by multitudes of bats, for the purpose of feeding on the unnatural blood. It is situated on the bank of a rivulet, which it keeps reddened by a small flow of the liquid, which has the color, taste, and smell of blood. In approaching the grotto a disagreeable odor is observed, and when it is reached, there may be some pools of the apparent blood in a state of coagulation. The peculiarities of this liquid are considered due to the rapid generation in this grotto of some very prolific species of infusoria. The California State Journal, remarking on the above, observed that a fine river of the town of Monterey contains a species of blood-red infusoria (The larvæ of water insects,) which at certain seasons of the year smell precisely like fresh fish. In some seasons it has been found dried in flakes, and of the intense color of vermilion.—Scientific American.

On removing the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Railback from the family burying place to a new and more convenient cemetery, in the Dooley settlement, four and a half miles south of Eaton, Ohio, the body of Mrs. R. was found to be converted to solid lime stone, preserving a remarkable fullness and plumpness as of life. The weight of the body was estimated at about 600 pounds.

The infant Princess will receive the name of Beatrice Mary Victoria. The christening will take place about the middle of the month.

The will of the English gentleman who bequeathed $3000 to each of the New England States, to be used in the cultivation of sugar, has been set aside, in consequence of the mental aberration of the testator.

Hudson Bay Territory--Inquiry Must not Die.

(From the Liverpool Albion.)

Since our last notice of the Hudson's Bay territory we have perused the May number of Frazer's Magazine, in which, under the head of "A few notes on Canadian matters," we find a notice of the Hudson's Bay Company, and the territory it controls. In speaking of the country in connection with the Atlantic seaboard, the writer in Frazer says:—"Along the valley of the Saskatchewan, (which runs through fifteen degrees of longitude from the Rocky Mountains to Lake Winnipeg,) at no distant period, must pass the traffic from the west. If the Pacific is ever occupied by British territory with the Atlantic seaboard, the track must pass through a gap in the Rocky Mountains near the head waters of the Columbia and the Saskatchewan. These rivers, one of which flows westward into the Pacific, and the other eastward to the Atlantic, rise so near each other that Sir George Simpson was able to fill his kettle for breakfast from both at the same time. The country is magnificent, and is varied with immense plains, woods, and mountains. It is watered-ed by innumerable streams, and abounds in wild animals and fish."

The writer goes on to argue, that at the time Charles II. made the grant to the Hudson's Bay Company, by which an inconsiderable number of fur traders are enabled to exclude British colonization and trade, and exercise an usurped sovereignty over territory in which Britons have an equal interest by right of birth, that joyous month had neither title to, nor possession of, the territory so granted, it being then owned and actually occ pied by the French. To meet this state of things, his Majesty casually excepted in the grant, all the lands "that are already possessed by the subjects of any Christian prince or state." S , in reality, the Hudson's Bay Company took nothing by their grant. Its vitality was by some means maintained during the interval between the treaty of Ryswick and that of Utrecht, and when, in 1713, the whole question was made over to England, the Company seized upon the large portion of territory they now claim under a charter granted forty-three years previously, and then totally defunct!

The alleged doings of the Company are thus summed up by the writer in Frazer, and urged as reasons why further inquiry should be made by Parliament from regard for the national honour:—"Let us remember what the allegations against the company are. It is asserted that the grant of power over whom it was, by the terms of its charter, to exercise a paternal sway, have been opposed, tortured, and murdered. It is said that the Indians have been shot and hanged by subordinate officers, after a mere mokery of trial, on mere suspicion of wrong doing. Missionaries complain that, far from being assisted in christianizing the tribes, their labors are impeded, and themselves insulted. It is said that the employees of the company have taken advantage of the monop ly of supply which it enjoys, to make the Indians helplessly dependent upon it, and then, in order to compel obedience to some command, or to gratify some caprice of tyranny or power, that they have denied the commodities which they only could supply, and have starved families to death by wholesale."

The writer concludes his notice of the Company and its territory by a quotation from Mr. Fitzgerald's work on Iceland and Vancouver's Island, as follows:—"We were promised the salvation, if not the regeneration, of the Indian race; we were promised that missionary enterprise should take the place of commercial competition—but have these promises been kept? No; one fraction of them. If these things be true, says Frazer, the great heart of the English people will rise against such wickedness; at any rate, let not inquiry die.

And it will not die. Whatever may result from the proceedings before the Commons, it is quite certain that Englishmen will no longer allow the Company to exclude from a glorious country, larger than all Europe, under privileges granted in a despotic age, which could not then, and still less now, can be imposed upon free men in a free country. We are glad that the Liverpool Financial Reformers include this subject in their programme. It will well repay agitation.

Conveyancing.

The number of petty scriveners throughout the country who picked up a precarious livelihood by filling up printed forms of deeds and other legal instruments requiring little or no acquaintance with the principles of land tenure, will find their occupation gone "from the passage of the following act, unless they can hope to escape the heavy penalty to which they are liable by a violation of any of its conditions. This is another strong hedge to keep interloping out of the legal domain."

1 From and after the passing of this Act, all Deeds of Bargain and Sale, Mortgages, Bonds, Wills, Conveyances and Assurances of Real Property, and Deeds Poll or Indentures, Bills of Sale of Ships, Mortgages of Ships, Releases, or Agreements reduced to writing and under seal, which shall be prepared or drawn by any person other than one of the parties thereto, for fee or reward, shall be endorsed with a statement of the name, residence and occupation of the person who shall so prepare or draw the same

11. Should any person other than one of the parties to the Deed or instrument in writing prepare or draw, or cause to be prepared or drawn, any Deed of Bargain or Sale, Mortgage, Bond, Will, Conveyance and Assurance of Real Estate, Lease, Chattel Mortgage, Bill of Sale of Ships, Mortgage of Ships, Release or agreement, reduced to writing under seal, for fee or reward with out endorsing upon such instrument his name, residence and occupation, such person shall be liable to a penalty of Fifty Pounds, recoverable with costs by civil action at the suit of any party suing for the same, before any Court in Upper Canada having jurisdiction in cases of simple contract to such amount, upon the evidence of any one credible witness other than the plaintiff or party interested: one half of such penalty to belong to the party suing, and the other half to the Crown: Provided always that the recovery of such penalty shall not in any manner affect the right of recovery for any mistake, error or negligence, as hereinafter provided.

III. Any person or body corporate shall have and enjoy the same remedy and right of action against the person or persons who shall have so advised on the Title of lands, or drawn, or prepared any such Conveyance Deed, or Instrument for fee or reward, by reason of any negligence, mistake or error therein, as such person or body corporate would now have against any Attorney, Solicitor, or Barrister-at-law who should commit a similar mistake, error, or negligence in any such advice or any such deed or instrument.

IV. This Act shall apply to Upper Canada only.

Immigration of Canada.

The following digest of Returns by A. C. Buchanan, A. B. Hawkins and D. C. Dixon, Esqrs. Emigration Agents, of the number of emigrants arrived in Canada this season up the 9th day of June; is made up at the Bureau of Agriculture, by Mr. Hatton Secretary—

	Cabin.	Steerage.
From England	421	3686
" Ireland	0	871
" Scotland	79	1301
" Germany	8	1380
" Norway	0	1518
	508	10756

Grand Total . . 11,264

Of these 4879 were males; 2858 females; 1254 boys; 1216 girls; 537 infants; 320 not particularized. Of their callings we learn that 755 were mechanics; 1581 farmers; 1078 labourers, and 7101 of callings not stated; 164 of them were cabin passengers.

As compared with 1856 the returns are:

	1856 Cabin.	1857 Steerage.	1857
From England . .	198 421	2413	5686
" Ireland . . .	6 0	428	851
" Scotland . .	16 79	932	1301
" Germany . .	0 8	765	1380
" Norway . . .	0 0	0	1518
Grand Total . . .	219 508	4538	10756

Increase in 1857 to June 9, 6457.

The number arrived at the Toronto and Hamilton agencies up to the 21st May were:

	Toronto.	Hamilton.
English	1782	1530
Irish	213	1073
Scotch	842	1183
Germans	831	4497

The total number of emigrants arrived in Canada this year up to June 9th—including those who arrived at Quebec—those who arrived by the suspension Bridge, and those who arrived in Steamers from American Ports on Lake Ontario—estimated by Mr. Hawke at 750—appears to be:

Via Quebec	11096
" Suspension Bridge . .	11262
" Ports on Lake Ontario . .	750
	23108
Actual settlers in Canada . . .	11747

So far the emigration exceeds that of any year since 1847, and the emigrants are, in general character and means, superior to those of any former year. Of the English and Scotch a large proportion were respectable farmers, in comfortable circumstances, and their destination Canada West, where many have friends; fully 5-6ths of the English and Scotch remain in Canada. 2-3rds of the Irish have gone to the U. S. About 420 Germans, with means, have remained in Canada.—Toronto Leader.

A most disastrous accident is reported to have taken place at the Haunstein tunnel in Switzerland, by which no less than Seventy lives were lost. The following are some details of the accident, contained in a letter from Balse, of the 4th:

The Haunstein Tunnel is on the centre railway which unites Basle to Aarau, Lucerne, Berne and other towns in the neighborhood, and is five silometres (about three miles) in length. The cutting of the tunnel having been commenced at both ends, progressed satisfactorily until about 300 metres remained to be pierced, when both sections are several shafts for extracting earth and letting in air, and in the northern one, one of the shafts, bearing the No. 1, which is about 800 metres from the spot where the works are going on, was supported by solid wood work to prevent the fall of earth and stones.

In the tunnel a fire was constantly kept up in order to increase the circulation of air, and at the very bottom of the shaft a forge was established.—The wood work of the shaft became extremely dry, and at last on the 28th ult, it caught fire.—The flames shot up with extraordinary rapidity and set fire to all the wood work in the shaft, which was no less than two hundred metres deep. A column of flame rose high above the shaft, forming a terrible spectacle. After a while a thick column of smoke succeeded the flames, and finally the wood work of the shaft had fallen in, and that consequently the retreat of the laborers, whom it had been impossible to warn, was cut off. To describe the scene of anguish which caused would be impossible. People rush in crowds to the entrance of the tunnel to render assistance to the victims, and they reached the mass of earth which had fallen in; but a large quantity of coal which had been collected near suddenly caught fire, and it created such volumes of smoke and gas that many were overcome and had to be dragged away by the others, seven were dead, and a hundred others were got out in a pitiable state. At length something like order was established, the workmen being formed into gangs, who replaced each other every ten minutes. Fire engines were employed to throw chalk and water into the tunnel, to extinguish the fire and neutralize the noxious gas, and pipes for conveying pure air to the workmen were established.

The cutting of a gallery in the mass of fallen earth has been commenced, through the fire is not completely extinguished. But no hopes whatever are entertained that any of the men buried will be got out alive, for though they had an open space of about 800 metres, and though in it there is a spring of water, and they had four horses which they might kill for food, it is certain that the noxious gas must have suffocated them long ere this. Of the men buried, thirty-three are Swiss, four English, and eighteen Germans. The wives of the English workmen who have perished have behaved in the most admirable manner, not only constantly encouraging those who were endeavoring to reach the unfortunate men in the tunnel, but attending carefully to such as suffered from their exertions.

"Since the above account was written, intelligence has been received of the extrication of 32 dead bodies, but we regret to say that 16 of the laborers employed to open the gallery have perished by the poisonous vapors which were collected there, making the total mortality, with the 54 men buried in the first instance, no less than 70."

The London Times of June 11th speaking of that portion of the cable completed as above mentioned, says:—

The cable consists of a stand of copper wire covered three times with gutta percha. The gutta percha is sewed from end to end with spun yarn, and covered with 18 strands of seven wires each. There are this 25,000 miles of strand, composed of seven times that quantity of wire, being a total of 175, 000 miles of wire. The process of spinning occupied 80 days, 2,500 miles of wire being used per day, and 350 hands being employed. The spun yarn was also made by Messrs. Newall upon the same premises. 100 machines for this purpose being ranged in one of the upper floors of the works. The cable is now lying in four huge coils (each 28 feet in diameter and 8 feet high) all ready for being shipped. It will be transferred, probably to-day, into small vessels, and thence on board the Niagara, which is expected to arrive at the mouth of the river early next week. The weight of the cable averages one ton per mile; and it is to be laid by the process patented by Mr. Newall, and adopted in the Black Sea—passing the wire through a hollow cone—which prevents twisting.

The alterations of the Niagara will be effected in the harbor, and not in the basin or dock. A large body of dock yard artificers have been put upon her to expedite the work of cutting away the unclean ones and clearing space below to make the required room for coiling away uninterruptedly her proportion of the great Atlantic telegraph cable. The men are to work from 5 a. m. until 9 p. m."

COUNTY COUNCIL.

The Council met in Amherstburg for the dispatch of business on Monday last, and this being the first time that the inhabitants of the good old Town, have had an opportunity of standing face to face with the assembled wisdom of Essex within their limits, it was no doubt a source of great satisfaction to them, if we may judge from the reception given to the Councillors, and the treatment generally bestowed upon them. The Councillors and Municipal Officers were very handsomely entertained at a dinner by the Municipality of Amherstburg, at the Salmoni House on Tuesday evening last, where everything went off to the satisfaction of all parties. It is only necessary to mention the name of Mr. Salmoni the gentlemanly proprietor, in connection with the evenings entertainment who is proverbial for his dinners.

The Clifton Times is the title of a paper just started at Suspension Bridge by W. E. Junis & Co. The number before us, speaks well of the ability with which it is conducted, and altogether is quite a spruce little sheet. We wish the proprietors every success in their undertaking, and a Golden reward for their enterprise.

Clifton from its favourable situation as the point of crossing by Suspension Bridge, of the Great Western Railway, has become a place of some importance, and we have no doubt that the Times will prosper.

Burning of the Steamer Montreal and Great loss of Life.

QUEBEC, June 27.

The steamer Montreal was burned last night near Carvinge, about twenty miles above this city.

There were about 500 passengers on board, mainly Scotch Emigrants.

About 175 were rescued by the steamer Napoleon.

It is believed that many swam ashore, and were saved in other ways, but it is certain that as many as 200 perished in the flames, or were drowned.

Mr. Phillips, of Three Rivers, Mich. is among the drowned.

SECOND DISPATCH.

The Captain of the Montreal, A. Rudolph, and the crew, are among the saved.

Reporters have just returned from the steamer Napoleon, which has arrived with the saved and they are assured by those on board that the number of the lost will fully reach 350.

The steamer Montreal, one of the regular steamers running between Quebec and Montreal, left this port at 4 o'clock yesterday P. M., having on board between four and five hundred passengers, of whom a majority were Scotch and other emigrants recently arrived from Europe.

Nothing unusual occurred after leaving the wharf, until the Montreal rounded a point off Cape Rogue, about 12 or 15 miles above this city, when the wood-work near the furnace was discovered to be on fire. Almost the very moment the smoke was discovered, the flames broke forth, causing the utmost consternation amongst the crowded passengers.

The fire was first discovered about 5 o'clock, when the steamer was nearly abreast of Cape Rogue.

Every effort was made to arrest the flames. The boat was stopped, so as to lessen the draught, finding it impossible to save her, Capt. Rudolph ordered her to be run towards the shore.

The officers and crew then exerted themselves to get out the life boat.

The flames spread with the most astonishing rapidity, and, in a few seconds after, the steamer began to move forward.

The wildest confusion and despair prevailed throughout the ship, and numbers of the passengers threw themselves overboard, and were, in most cases, drowned.

Fortunately, the steamer Napoleon, also bound for Montreal, was but a few miles in advance of the burning boat, and, as soon as the fire was discovered, put back with all speed, and succeeded in rescuing from the burning wreck 127 passengers.

Capt. Rudolph and the Purser of the Montreal were amongst those who threw themselves, into the river; they being excellent swimmers succeeded in reaching the steamer Alliance, and were saved.

It is quite possible that others may have saved themselves by swimming, but, as the steamer became unmanageable when a considerable distance from land, there is no doubt that most of those who threw themselves from the burning boat, and made a watery grave.

Sixteen of those saved died shortly after reaching the deck of the Napoleon, and from present information it is believed that total loss of life by this terrible disaster will not be far short of three to four hundred.

The steamer Alliance arrived here this afternoon, with 45 dead bodies, and another boat is known to have recovered 60 bodies.

We have not been able to learn the names of those rescued by Mr. Phillips, of the extensive lumbering firm of Norcross & Phillips, of Three Rivers.

The Montreal had on board 258 emigrants, recently arrived from Glasgow, together with several German families, and raftsmen, and several American passengers.

ANNIE TOUSSAINT.—This unhappy woman, it will be remembered, has for some time been under sentence of death for poisoning her husband. A petition praying for the commutation of the sentence of death was presented to His Excellency the Governor General, at Quebec on Friday last. The father and the mother of the condemned woman attended with M. Plamondon, her lawyer, and threw themselves at the feet of His Excellency, praying him to interfere to save the life of their erring child. The Governor General is represented as having been considerably affected by the appeal which was made, and as expressing himself sorry that owing to the impossibility of conferring with Ministers, he could not then exercise the prerogative in the way asked. He promised, however, on his return to take the matter into favorable consideration. The petition was signed by 1000 inhabitants of Quebec, and supported by the recommendation of all the city members.

PROSPECT OF CHEAP SUGAR.—Unfortunately for housekeepers, there are no Bears in the Sugar Market; all the operators in saccharine productions happen to be bulls, and Bull like and roaring and rampant character. By a concerted movement they have contrived "to get up a corner" in one of the necessaries of life, and they are trying to keep it up Nobody is disposed to use 'short' in Sugar, and so the price keeps up. But the prospects are full crisp, we are told, happy to state, are highly encouraging. The high prices which have ruled the last two years have stimulated production, while they have caused a diminution of consumption, and the natural consequences are, increasing stocks and a tendency to lower prices. This crop of Louisiana promises to be nearly four times greater than it was last year, and the yield of Maple Sugar has been much larger than was ever before known. All these causes combined, will have the desired effect of bringing down the price of this commodity, and those who have made fortunes in it will have a wide margin to fall back upon when the decline takes place. —N. Y. Times.

FINANCES OF NEW YORK STATE.—The New York Times gives rather a gloomy view of the condition of the public chest of the Empire State. It seems that the Legislature at its recent session made appropriations amounting in the aggregate to over $3,100,000, which is the whole amount which the Comptroller can command, is less than $1,800,000. And of this amount the greater part is not yet paid in by the County Treasurers—their being due from the County of New York alone the sum of $500,000. The time within which the law requires returns to be made by the County Treasurers having expired, the Comptroller has directed the Attorney General to bring suits against the delinquents.

The receipts from the Canals for the present year also fall much below those of 1856. Up to the 2nd week in June of last year, there had been raised $413,491, while this year only $336,046 has been collected.

IDENTITY OF TOWNSEND.—Some new facts have come to light in reference to this notorious character. The Toronto Leader has "it on good authority that the maiden name of the mother of the notorious Townsend is McHenry, and that her son on leaving the scene of his outrages, assumed that name as a disguise." Our readers will remember that McHenry is the name the prisoner claims at this time. On the other hand, Mr. J. Sutton a highly responsible citizen of Brantford, who boarded for near two months at the same house with Townsend, and saw him only two days before he murdered Mr. Nelles, writes to the Expositor, that on entering the jail he was puzzled to find in McHenry one single feature bearing the remotest resemblance to anything in Townsend's appearance. The prisoner is taller than Townsend, has a light complexion, light hair, and large light blue eyes. Townsend was quite a small man, below the medium height, has dark hair, small dark eyes, and a dark complexion. Indeed there is not one single point of resemblance between the two, and one could hardly conceive of two men more unlike than the prisoner, McHenry, and William Townsend.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT IN CANADA.—By the last steamer we learn that the question of the permanent seat of government of the Canadas, which has given the home government no little trouble, has been decided, and that Ottawa is the place selected. The London Herald publishes this intelligence in the following brief but concise paragraphs:

"We have received information from a source upon which we can place reliance, that the Imperial authorities of the Colonial Department have decided in favor of Ottawa as the future seat of government of these Provinces. Toronto will, however, remain as the metropolis for a few years. The selection of Ottawa has been arrived at from the position of the locality. It is intimated that the visit of the Governor General may probably have had some influence on the decision which the Imperial authorities have arrived at."

A CHEMIST BLOWN UP.—While Mr. Zencker one of the chemical assistants in the New York Medical College, was engaged, last evening, in filling a large india rubber bag with oxygen gas, an explosion ensued from its too rapid generation. The bag had already received two charges of oxygen, prepared from chlorate of potash. During the passage of the third charge the gas generated with such rapidity as to distend the bag to its utmost capacity, and then violently burst it. The explosion was so forcible as to break every window in the Laboratory, and nearly deafen the experimenter. The strong copper generator and the Doctor's spectacles, strange to say were uninjured, though the Doctor was urged at lightning speed through an unopened door into the Faculty room.—N. Y. Times, of Tuesday.

INCREASE OF WHISKEY MANUFACTURE. —The Cincinati, Louisville and St. Louis papers, show an enormous increase, within the past two years, in the manufacture of whiskey for export. It does not require much penetration to guess the destiny of this very large quantity of ardent spirit:—Much the larger portion of it is manufactured into alcohol, the shipments of which to France have been enormous. A Cincinnati paper states that only a few days ago 10,000 gallons of alcohol were sold to one house in New Orleans, intended for shipment to France.

It all comes back in the shape of pure "Otard," &c.

FREE TRADE.—The Buffalo Commercial is in favor of free trade between Canada and the United States. It says:—"Perfect Free trade between the Provinces and the United States would be for our advantage, because it would enlarge the market for manufacturers; for the advantage of the Provinces, because the removal of the duties would enable them to purchase goods at a cheaper price." If there was an entire free trade, manufactures would quickly spring up in Canada, as instead of the market being restricted, as is now the case, to the inhabitants of Canada alone, it would be extended to that co-equal with that of the United States. Free trade then by all means. — London Free Press.

LAUNCH OF THE "ICEBERG."—This little vessel, which has been built for Dr. Rae to explore an undetermined portion of the coast of North America, was launched into her proper element, fully equipped for sailing, on Saturday afternoon, from the railway shipyard, in the presence of a number of spectators. Dr. Rae was not present, he having been detained at Hamilton by illness The "Iceberg" is rigged as a brigantine, and measures 117 tons carpenter's measurement, but will probably be registered at about 80 tons.

The "Iceberg" has been built with very great strength, to fit her for the heavy work she is destined to encounter. The season being too far advanced to enter upon her proper mission, we learn that she will be engaged in freighting till the fall, when Dr. Rae will take her to England, and be prepared next spring to carry her into the Polar Sea to accomplish the mission he set himself to perform.

The "Iceberg" is prettily modelled and sits gracefully in the water."—Kingston News.

CANADA BANK NOTES.—We gather from the Hamilton Spectator that $4 bills of the Quebec and Commercial Banks, altered to $20's, and photographical counterfeit $10's of the Peterborough Branch of the Montreal Bank are in circulation—and that within a few days, $1 bills of the Toronto Branch of the City Bank of Montreal, and of the Commercian Bank, altered to $10's had been circulated. The alterations are effectual by the application of the ordinary acid used by the Banks for testing gold, and removes the figures in writing or printing, and leaves a blank spot on which is afterwards stamped the figures and words indicating the higher value.

A Scythe of ingenious construction, and containing many important improvements, has recently been presented to the agricultural rists of England. It is thus described: A small bar of iron is bolted to the snead or scythe handle; upon this a shorter bar moving on a pivot and carrying the heel, is made to work freely backwards and forwards, and when properly adjusted, is firmly secured by a nut, so that it cannot stir. If, upon trial, the setting is unsatisfactory, or if it requires to be altered for any purpose whatever, the nut is loosened, the binde is re adjusted, and the nut is again firmly secured. By this means the scythe may be literally set to a hair's breath. The latter contrivance is moveable, can be fixed to any handle, and will last for years with reasonable care.

Sir Robert Peel of lecture notoriety, is said to have lost £50,000 on the last Derby race.

We have awful accounts of the freaks of the storm on Saturday last, which we are reluctantly compelled to defer publishing until Monday. But in the interim here is one small freak:—In the telegraph office in Troy, on Saturday evening, the wires having been struck by a smart shock of lightning, a ball of fire the size of an orange dodged past the operator's office, and exploded with a report like a pistol. Three valuable relays of magnets were badly burned, and copper wire in their neighborhood melted. The Albany office received a similar shock, and four fine magnets were rendered useless in consequence.

"FOUND DEAD."—In these days of progression, when fast living, fast travelling, and we may add as a concomitant, fast dieing, are the general order of things, a suggestion has occurred to us which might be deemed of some importance. Readers will call to mind frequent instances of inquest's being held on the bodies of victims either of their own passion of or some casualty, and the many cases in which the bodies are unidentified and a verdict of "found dead" recorded, the only evidence of whose untimely decease is to be found among the private papers of the Coroner whose duty it is to examine into the cause of death. Now it has occurred to us, and the matter has been brought to our notice by two recent instances of inquiry, that if some central officer, say a Coroner-General, were appointed, to whom it should be the duty of every Coroner to make full returns, with descriptions of the bodies of persons found dead, it would materially assist the inquiries of the friends of missing persons in ascertaining their fate. Under the present system, it is next to an impossibility to obtain such information.— Kingston News.

Arrival of the Indian.

Rivere du Loupe, June 27.

The Canadian screw steamship Indian, from Liverpool the 17th, left this port for Quebec and Montreal early this morning.—Her slates are four days later, but are wholly unimportant.

The steamer City of Baltimore, from Liverpool, and the North Star and Hermann, from Southampton, all for New York, sailed the same day as the Indian.

The Niagara from Boston arrived at Liverpool the 4th.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The American ship Pobera, arrived at the Woolwich arsenal on the 13th, having on board six breech-loading guns, manufactured in New York by order of the British Government.

It is understood that arrangements had been perfected for running the Canadian line of steamers from Liverpool to Quebec weekly, instead of fortnightly as heretofore. A contract is also to be immediately entered into for the building a number of new and powerful steamers.

The funeral of Douglas Jerrold took place on the 15th, and was attended by a large number of the most eminent men of literature and art.

Both Houses of Parliament were engaged on the Jews' oath and disabilities bill. The second reading motion was carried by a majority of 182 and on a test question the bill was sustained by 341 to 201.

The London Times advocates the abolishment of slavery in Cuba, as the only effectual means of checking the slave trade.

A public meeting has been held at Ashton under the auspices of the new cotton supply association. Resolutions similar to those adopted at Liverpool were passed.

The great Handel Festival took place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on the 15th. The Band, and chorus numbered 2,500, and the attendance was very large.

The baptism of the infant princess of England took place in the chapel in Buckingham Palace, on the 16th inst. She was named Beatrice Mary Victoria.

FRANCE.—Election matters remain without change. In Paris the opposition tickets were divided. The Orleanist-republican fusion was in full force, doing all it could to insure the return of at least a few deputies.

The official returns for 1856 show a great increase in the imports and exports.

It is rumored that Napolean would have an interview with the Emperor of Russia in July next.

The whole kingdom of Saxony, and most of the Principalities, were visited by an earthquake on the 17th inst. The houses trembled, and great consternation was felt among the people, but happily, there was no serious consequences.

PORTUGAL.—The King of Portugal had communicated to the Cortens his intention to shortly contract a matrimonial alliance. It is believed that the daughter of the Duke of Maximilion of Bavari, a would be the bride.

SWITZERLAND.—The national Council had ratified the Neufchatel treaty.

Austria was making further concessions to the Hungarians.

Rumours were rife of a meeting of the potentates of the Italian States, the Pope, the Emperor of Austria, and the King of Naples, it was also said would be present.

A treaty of commerce between France and Russia had been signed.

The Emperor and Empress were to embark at Cronstadt on the 22nd of June, for a tour in Germany and to Havre. It was reported an interview would be had with the Emperor of Austria at Wiesbad in July.

The trade reports from St. Petersburg describe business as very dull, with very few arrivals of foreign orders for grain.

A few days since Bishop O'Regan, of Cobequa, was burned in effigy by the French Catholics of Kankakee Illinois, as he passed through that place. The persons who engaged in this affair are sympathizers with Father Chiniqny, the French Priest who was recently excommunicated.

There was a strange phenomenon in Philadelphia, last Thursday afternoon. As the workmen on a building in Willing's Alley were at work, a small black cloud passed over their heads and suddenly broke and deluged them with water. About two hogsheads fell in all, and covered a space of only some thirty feet, while elsewhere was dry.

The Quebec Mercury of Tuesday says that the total number of vessels arrived at that port from sea, up to that day was 320 against 175 last year, showing an increase of 144 vessels.

It is stated that President Buchanan has determined to appoint General Moore, of Maine, Consul General at Canada, vice Andrews.

ST. GEORGE HOTEL,

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y.

THIS Hotel, consisting of the "AVON" rebuilt and enlarged, can accommodate one Hundred or more, and affords accommodation not excelled at the Springs. It is convenient to the Rail-Road Depot, Post-Office, and all the public establishments in the village.

When necessary, the proprietor will use his private house, well stocked garden, choice fruits and grounds, as an auxiliary to the Hotel.

With the unrivalled reputation of our waters—the Rail-Road facilities from all directions, and the increasing accommodations our Hotels afford, Avon grows more and more attractive as a fashionable and health-imparting resort.

Our carriages are free to our guests to and from the Depot and to and from the Springs.

All persons entrusting him with their work may depend on getting it done in a superior manner and at very moderate rates.

Todd's Corner, June 10th, 1857.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with congestion of the Liver, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infectious or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or where travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits, will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For that debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the invalid, however weakly from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy those delightful symptoms of a return to strong health, viz: good appetite sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting by Lawrence also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York on each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunnpaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

WINDSOR NURSERIES.

JUST PUBLISHED, a Descriptive Catalogue of the Fruit Trees for sale at the Windsor Nurseries, containing a more accurate description of a greater variety of Fruits, than can be found in any other Catalogue issued on this continent, the whole having been compiled by the undersigned, with great care, from personal inspection of the Fruits grown on his own ground. Directions for Planting, Cultivation, Pruning, &c., will be found in the Catalogue.

Also, in Press, and will be published in a few days, a Descriptive Catalogue of Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Tulips, Peonias, &c., &c.

Catalogues will be sent gratis, on application, (if by letter post-paid), to the undersigned, at Windsor, C. W.

The stock of Fruit Trees, more especially Apples and Pears—both Standard and Dwarf—is extremely thrifty and well grown, and such as can be procured in no other Nursery. A large portion of them are just commencing to bear, and having been twice transplanted, can be removed with perfect success.

All orders promptly attended to, the Trees carefully packed so as to carry any distance with safety, and forwarded with despatch.

As the undersigned intends discontinuing the Nursery Business, those wishing considerable lots of Trees will find it for their interest to apply early.

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighboring townships, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both in regard to material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth, diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

Skin Diseases & Glandular Swellings!

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry Eruptions, such as Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald Head, Mercurial Rash, Scabies (or Itch) &c., to die out, to return no more, under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world prove its healing effects in all cases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

Ulcers, Sores & Tumours!

The effect of this unrivalled external remedy upon Scrofula and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

Wounds Bruises, Burns & Scalds.

In cases of the fracture of the bone, injuries caused by steam explosions, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Rheumatism, Stiffness of the Joints, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

Undeniable Testimony!

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, scalds, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases.

Bunions,	Skin Diseases,
Burns,	Swelled Glands,
Chapped Hands,	Sore Legs,
Chilblains,	Sore Breasts,
Fistula,	Sore Heads,
Gout,	Sore Throats,
Lumbago,	Sores of all Kinds,
Mercurial Eruptions,	Sprains
Piles,	Stiff Joints,
Rheumatism,	Tetter,
Ringworm,	Ulcers,
Salt Rheum,	Venereal Sores,
Scalds,	Wounds of all kinds,

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80, Maiden Lane, New York, & 244 Strand, London, by all respectable Druggists and dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in pots, at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each pot.

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernible as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction, on Wednesday, the

1st day of July next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the Concession of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

Artificial Watering.

By this phrase I do not wish to be understood as meaning simply the mere sprinkling of the surface with a machine, but the more extended operation of leading water over whole fields, or farms, in many directions of our Sate, there is often a scarcity of water, and droughts are sometimes severe; sufficiently so, indeed, to diminish very materially the produce of the region where its effects are felt. Yet in these places there are, perhaps without a single exception, ample facilities for supplying, in many instances the natural remedy—WATER. Now many of my farming friends will no doubt be ready to inquire—"How is this to be effected?" I will answer. Wherever there is a pond, spring or stream, it is possible, by narrowly observing the "make" or "lay" of the land—without any machine save the common plow, or perhaps the simple of the laborer, so to divert the water from its natural course, as to flash it over whole fields, or regions of more extended expanse. Suppose for instance a stream to flow from a pond, with a regular supply, through a rolling or somewhat hilly district, where there are many hill-sides, slopes and plains on which drought operates its worst effects. Now is it not obvious that by constructing simple furrow drains with a plow—the direction of which, from a given point of elevation on the shores of the stream, along the side hills, and at an elevation equal throughout its course with the given point, water will flow from them, the same as it would in drains of the same extent were the land level? But by taking the water with you—that is by commencing the drain, and allowing the water to follow as you proceed, and casting the dirt on the lower side so as to form an embankment, you will have enough velocity for the purpose required; and if your ditch be large enough, may secure a sufficiency of water, to water abundantly a field of large extent. This, after the drain is dug is effected by opening small holes in the bank, close to each other and thus allow the water to pass through to the lands below. This is an important subject to the farmer, and especially to such as have dry lands, to which a very small amount of water supplied in this way, would be worth more than all the manure made yearly on their farms however large.

The past summer, my attention was called to this matter by noticing the effects of water carried in this way over the surface of a hillside of large extent, belonging to one of my neighbors—by trade a blacksmith, whose premises are all within sight of my own. In our section the season was quite dry, though not exactly what farmers sometimes call "drought," and the verdure (the field was in grass) was green and beautiful through out.

Had it not been for the water thus supplied, the crop necessarily must have been very light; and yet one hand by a single day's labor with a spade, accomplished this important result! Can any one discover any proportion—properly speaking—between the expense and the end gained? His drain will serve equally well next year, and the year after, and indeed, for scores of years, with scarcely a dollar's expense. So well pleased was my friend with the result, that he has already opened several others, and when the proper season comes round will no doubt open more. The section in which I reside, is without the natural means of supplying these periodical calls for water, and what is quite another thing—without the necessity of them except in extreme cases.—Ger. Telegraph.

A Mistake.

A friend in Bucks county informs us, that he had the misfortune to lose his field of sixteen acres of planted corn, by having mixed, in the hill at the time of planting, a quantity of guano and bone dust. The grains were completely destroyed. The quantity applied is not given, but it must have been an over-dose. It should be remembered that guano is a most powerful manure, and half a pint or less will kill a tree an inch in diameter, if applied to the roots. It should never be applied directly to the grain or plant as destruction is sure to follow. When guano was first introduced here, a number of farmers lost their corn from the same cause, but they used guano in the same manner they had been accustomed to use plaster.—When incorporated with the soil thouroughly, we think a table-spoonful of manure put in each hill before planting, would not only be entirely harmless but extremely serviceable; and a mixture of guano and bone-dust would be still better.

Our friends should be careful in the application of guano to their crops; but when judiciously done, we doubt if any other manure will produce the same good effects at the same expense.—Ger. Telegraph.

Recipe for the Cure of Swinny, or Big Shoulder in Horses.

A writer in the Southern Cultivator offers the following mixture is said to be an infallible cure for Swinny, or Big Shoulder in horses. It should, however, be applied sparingly, or it will blister.

2 oz. Liquid Opadildoc,
2 " Oil of Spike,
2 " Hartshorn,
2 " Number Six,
3 " Alcohol,
1 " Tincture of Spanish Flies,
1 " Spirits of Turpentine.

I trust that those having horses afflicted with this troublesome disease, may test the above remedy.

Origin of the Potatoe.

So far as known, the roots are indigenous to this country, whence it was carried to England, in 1586, by Sir Walter Raleigh, and planted in his garden. Not being sufficiently acquainted with the nature of the plant, he was near consigning it to destruction in consequence of finding the potatoe apple, or fruit of the plant, bitter and unpalatable, and it was in digging them up that the edible potatoe was discovered. The plant throve rapidly in the British Isles, but especially in Ireland. The potatoe alluded to in Shakespeare, as being common in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was the convolvulus batata of which Durnett says: "Not only were its tender roots, and young leaves and shoots, eaten as pot herbs, but they were candied, and made into various sweetmeats."

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION

AND

DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,

IN THE BEAUTIFUL

TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a prettier residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POT ASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been for constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25. which has been in operation for a number of years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWENTY STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements in use, Cash—£500.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandise from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs SEYMOUR, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of JOHN HOSMER, agent, Detroit.

ADRIATIC, " M. Sea inch.
OGONTZ, " W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY, (New Propeller,)

Which will, during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week; and having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandize, via

New York & Erie Railroad

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over FIVE THOUSAND TONS BURTHEN, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandise for the transport of Property.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - - 30
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches Public Mercantile, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BROOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New METHOD, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS in the United States.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING.

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, reaching the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of comprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the largest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that graduation) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the best location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are newly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance, is able to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

Select Poetry.

Home.

Oh! what scenes of bliss and pleasure
Does that heavenly word contain;
Always bringing thoughts of loved ones,
Which their memories sustain.

When oppressed with care and sadness,
As among the world you roam,
O with what delight and gladness
Comes the cheering thought of home

There fond hearts await your coming,
And your name is gently spoke;
There your absence is lamented,
And affection's tear awoke.

When inconstant friends desert you
In adversity's stern hour,
And the clouds of disappointment
O'er your darkened pathway lower.

Then a light breaks through the darkness,
As the thought of home dawns light;
And with feelings sure and hopeful
Can you grasp the beacon bright.

O, with what delightful feelings
Can you turn amid your woes;
Knowing their true hearts are beating,
Though your path be thick with foes,

Let no feeling d're come o'er you,
Which would lead you to reject
Your fond home and its loved inmates,
Or to treat them with neglect.

Think of your once helpless childhood,
Of your parent's watchful care;
How they turned your erring footsteps,
From temptation's luring glare.

How unfeeling is the person,
And how void of all that's good;
Who can think without emotion
Of the place his home once stood.

MYRA.

The Life-Boat.

BY SYLVANUS COBB, JR.

The morning was dark, lowery and chill; and ere long the wind began to howl among the rocks and bluffs. Great drops of rain began to fall, and the sea became covered with foam, as the waves rose and lashed the shore in fury. Louder and louder grew the crash of the elements, and the wild sea grew more furious.

Kate Williams was pale and agitated, for she knew that her brother must be near the coast. She had received the information from the captain of a clipper which had run in ahead of the heavily loaded ship on board which her brother had taken passage.

The storm increased in power during the day, and towards the middle of the afternoon many people had assembled on the little beach below Kate's residence to view the terrible grandeur of the scene. Half a mile from the shore was a huge rock, over which the mad sea now leaps with giant power; and still further out was a low ledge which commenced at a point out far from the beach and extended out two miles into the sea in a semicircular form, the outer end bending to the southward, and being nearly opposite the little beach.

It was about six o'clock when one of the men who had come up to the mansion, discovered a hulk upon the sea at some distance in the offing. He took the spy glass and soon made her out to be a heavy ship, with her masts gone, and lying directly in the trough of the sea.

"Lost! Lost! O, God!" So uttered Kate as she received the intelligence of the position of the dismasted ship. "It must be the Vulcan, for no other ship would be this way! O, he is lost!"

Various were the words of consolation offered to the afflicted maiden. John Glancey was by her side, and with his arms about her fair form he bade her hope.

The night settled down dark and drear over the mad waters, and the storm abated not at all. The vivid lightning streamed through the heavens, and the loud thunder roared in the black vault. Ere long another sound came booming upon the air. It was the report of a heavy gun! At intervals of about a minute the gun was heard, and at length a crowd was collected upon the beach.

For nearly half an hour there had been no lightning, but now the vivid flash lighted up the heavens once more, and a cry of horror went up from the anxious watchers, for the ship could be plainly seen just driving towards the outer end of the long reef!

"They are lost now!" uttered an old man, who leaned heavily upon his staff. "If the ship strikes that reef she must go to pieces there, and no earthly power can help them!"

Kate Williams heard these words.

"O, sir," she cried, "I have a life-boat here! Could not some one go out in that?"

"Ah, Kate Williams, in your agony you forget the stern facts of the case. No man could live in such a sea. You can find no man here who would dare undertake such a task."

Kate's heart sank within her as she turned away. The rain had ceased falling now, and 'twas only the spray that dashed over the shivering forms upon the beach. In a few moments more the lightning streamed through the heavens again, and the cry of horror went up loud and long. The ship had struck!

"Poor fellows!" uttered the old man, "'tis all over with them now! The ship must soon go to pieces there!"

Kate gathered her shawl about her and rushed towards the spot where the life-boat had been hauled down.

"God help him now!" she cried, wringing her hands in agony. "O, Frank! Frank! my brother! Will no one go? Mr. Glancey, can you not find some stout man to go out in this boat! O, with this boat once there he might be saved!"

"Be calm, my dear Kate," urged the lawyer, taking her by the hand. "No mortal man would dare venture out there. Death stands too near at hand."

As he ceased speaking the flame of heaven glared out again; and the ship still hung upon the rocks with the sea beating furiously over her.

"Hallo! Hallo o o o!" at this moment shouted a clear, ringing voice above the clash of the elements. "Where is the life-boat? Where is it?"

"Here—here—right by the little pier," answered a man.

"Then cut it loose! Away with it!" shouted the same voice in reply; and on the next moment Harry Winship came rushing to the spot where the crowd had gathered about the life-boat. The light from the lanterns shone in his face, and he looked like a giant at that moment. He had thrown off his coat, and placed a close oil cloth cap upon his head.

"In the name of mercy," he cried, "why is not this boat off?"

"Would you rush on to certain death?" spoke the old man, who had followed Kate hither.

"Rush on to death?" repeated Harry, quickly. "There are a score of men in yonder ship looking death in the face, and shall we see them die thus, and not put forth a hand? No! When I am in cast off the line!"

"But you cannot pull the boat against this sea, young man."

"Then let some one come and help me!—What—none? Then these arms shall do all they can. They can but fail."

With these words Harry leaped into the boat and caught the oars which were secured in the row-locks. A projecting promontory shielded the spot where the boat lay, so that there was no difficulty in pushing off. With all his power the noble youth bent himself to the work. He had passed the stay-belt about his waist, so that the sea could not wash him away

In a few moments the life boat and its occupant were lost in the darkness. There was one heart upon the beach beating prayerfully for him; but he knew it not. He had not seen Kate. He had just arrived when he saw the ship upon the reef, and uttered the cry we heard.

The next flash gleamed a moment on the water. The boat was on the top of a huge sea, and the youth was working all his might. Down, down, the frail bark sank—a deep murmur of prayer upon the shore—and then all was dark again. Anon the heavens glowed again,

"God help him!" murmured a quivering voice. 'Twas Kate's, and her hands were tightly clasped.

Again and again the lightning came, and at each time the struggling boat was nearer the ship. The boat was very light, and the strength which now propelled it was almost superhuman. At length the frail boat was seen directly under the stern of the ship, and some thought they saw a line thrown from the high deck.

"By heavens!" uttered the old man, "he knows how to handle that boat. He knows just where to pull, and just where he may rest."

"Ay," answered another, "he was brought up in a boat."

"So was I," resumed the old man, "but I never could have done that."

It lightened again, but no boat could be seen. Nearly an hour had now passed since the boat left the beach; and during that hour the noble doctor had labored with all his might. Again and again the glare of the heavens spread over the sea, and at length the life-boat was seen once more. It was coming towards the land.

"'Tis full of men!"

A giant sea arose close upon the beach, and upon it was the life-boat. On, on—one more roll—one heavy throe, and the sea broke upon the sand, and the boat was thrown high up upon the shore; and the next moment living men began to leap from it. They turned, as they gained the hard footing, and lifted from the boat an inanimate form. It was Harry Winship weak and faint.

"Frank! Frank! O, is my brother here?"

"He my own Kate! God bless you my sister!"

And on the instant a tall, stout, sea-wet man clasped the now fainting girl to his bosom.

* * * * * * *

The morning sun rose bright and clear, and many people came down to the shore of the sea to view the scene. The roof was clear now, and upon the beach lay all that was left of the noble ship. Here and there it was cast—one shapeless, separated mass of fragments.

But in the mansion above there is a brighter scene. Eight-and-twenty living souls are there, who were last night upon the deck of the ship. No one was lost—not one! And the saviour, too, was up. He was safe and unharmed—only weak and exhausted still. He had reached the ship—received a line and secured it—and then he sank down senseless and powerless. Every nerve and every muscle had been strained to its utmost. Frank Williams—noble, generous Frank, looking in feature like his sister—had blessed him a thousand times, and all the rest had joined him.

Towards the middle of the day Harry had gone out into the library and sat down. The confusion of the party made his head ache. He had been there a few minutes when the door opened, and Kate entered. She stood before him a single moment, and then she sank down upon her knees at his feet, with her hands clasped towards him.

"Forgive me! O, forgive me!" she cried. "Forgive me, Harry, and place me in your heart once more! Forget what I said! O, forget and forgive!"

Ah, that scene was brightest of all. Half an hour afterwards, Frank found his sister, for whom he had been searching, in Harry's arms. She was happy now.

May we not suppose that John Glancey's standard of bravery sank very low after this in the estimation of those who knew all the circumstances? And every body in the town did know them. People now knew which was the true hero; and they began to understand that a coward can be lashed into exposing his life, by anger and a desire for revenge—but a true man never.

Before the snows of winter came, John Glancey, Esquire, left for the nearest city, while Harry Winship went to the sea-side mansion and became the brother-in-law of Frank Williams,

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This great household medicine ranks among the leading necessaries of life. Dyspepsia, bowel complaints, and billious disorders, are common to all climates. Tens of thousands die of them; and to suffer under them in their chronic form is a living death. Now it is a fact as well established, as that the sun lights the world, that these Pills invariably cured the above named maladies in all their Protean forms. Are they not, then, articles of prime necessity? And does not the head of a family who neglects to administer them to the sick of his household, incur a heavy responsibility. If proof of their efficacy is desired, it is offered in the shape of volumes of authentic testimony from every nation on the face of the earth.

Carried,

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

A quorum being present.

Moved by Mr. Leggatt, seconded by Mr. Brush, that the following members, namely, the Warden, and Messrs Wigle, Caldwell, Macdonell, the mover and seconder be a special committee to overhaul the assessment returns for 1856 and 1857, with a view to the equalization of the assessments, for the present year and to report thereon to this Council.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Leggatt, seconded by Mr. Brush, that the Council adjourn, to meet again at 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.

To be continued.

The Last of the Filibusters.

Three hundred and four of Walker's capitulated men, including sixty-four outsiders, arrived at Panama on the 19th ult. One man named Jones died from exhaustion. They were transported by the American bark J. R. More, at the expense of the Costa Rican Government. The American Commodore, Marvine, paid their transit across the Isthmus by drafts on the United States at $25 a man. These men still remain at Aspinwall, as the Mail Steamship Company will not carry them off at any price. Another company of 139, including 121 men, mostly sick and wounded, 12 women and 5 children, were sent across the lake and down the river San Juan, on board the Costa Rican steamboats, under the charge of a coloured captain, David Murray, and a coloured crew, to Greytown. At Greytown they were kindly provided for by Col. Cauty, an English officer in the Costa Rican Service, and the Mosquito king just dropped down from Bluefields to pay the discontented filibusters a visit. During their stay at Greytown four men died, including Thomas Meagher's friend, Lieutenant Nagle. On the 10th ult. the United States sloop-of-war, Cyane, arrived, and took them to Aspinwall. Two men died on the voyage from Greytown to Aspinwall. They presented a deplorable appearance, all covered with vermin, and suppurating wounds. This body was transferred from the Cyane to the United States steam frigate Wabash, her Majesty's ship Orion assisting in the transfer by the loan of a launch and two boats, and arrived at Sandy Hook on Sunday afternoon, the 28th ult. Adjutant General Thomson, of Virginia died on the passage. The account of the character of the filibusters, says a United States cotemporary, as given by the officers of the Wabash, is most unflattering to them as a body. They are represented as being unkind and regardless of each others welfare; those well, could not be got to attend to the wants of the sick, unless they were absolutely compelled to do so. One man, when ordered to attend to some of the sick, said:—"You may shoot me, Lieutenant, but I will be d—d if I will work." The Lieutenant told him he could not shoot him, but he could starve him, and the miserable wretch went without eating thirty-six hours before he would obey the command to attend to his suffering countrymen. It was likewise stated that the filibusters could only be got up in the morning by turning the hydrant upon them and giving them an abundant wetting.

The men generally speak in the most contemptuous terms of General Walker and his management in Nicaragua; the women, some of whom are very intelligent, use terms of the most scathing rebuke towards Walker and his whole operations.

Those lately landed are totally destitute, and are thus described:—

"There are ninety two sick and wounded men on board the Wabash; twenty of them are suffering from severe wounds. They are treated with skill and care; many of them are scarcely able to move; some have lost their legs, others arms, others again have great scares, swollen wounds, gangrene, &c. They are indeed a most pitiful looking body of men. The officers of the ship describe to the condition of the men, when received on board, as one of the most wretched that can be imagined—great wounds which had never been dressed, festered and swollen, bodies incased with dirt, and covered with vermin. Lice, which had never before had been seen in that ship, were found in abundance; they domiciled on the body of almost every filibuster. The officers of the ship had to bathe themselves in rum; the crew was almost demoralized with fear of an actual endurance of the vermin. The hair of the poor unfortunate passengers had to be cut close to their heads; they were bathed and compelled to be clean."

There are besides 350 deserters now enjoying Costa Rican hospitality at San Jose Costa Rica. About 100 intend settling in the country. The Costa Ricans have been celebrating the honourable achievements of their arms and observe how they treated their pale-faced enemies;—

"But in the midst of this joyful multitude there were numerous groups forming a most singular contrast. About 300 filibusters had entered the capital shortly before our troops; all were free, and were seen everywhere mixing with the people, who even in the day of triumph did not offer them the slightest insult. On the contrary they regaled them, and the soldiers divided their bread with them, and drank and toasted each other, proving that those who had the courage to rush to the fray, knew also how to forgive, exhibiting a noble example of the generosity of the Costa Rican people."

Would the citizens of the Model Republic treat the "greasers" so tenderly!

Costa Rica still holds Punta Arenas and the San Juan River, which is open to all legitimate traffic. The Americans are hoping that Costa Rica and Nicaragua will fall out on the territorial question, and give the filibusters another opportunity of stepping in. The Nicaraguan Government is re-organized; the latest news is as follows:—

"I learn that all the principal men of Nicaragua have united and sent representatives to Leon, where a meeting has been held, at which it was mutually and cordially agreed that Gen. Martinez, who is a Granadine, should be acting President for eight months, and Gen. Jerez Minister of War and Commander in Chief of the army for the same period, at the end of which time a general election is to take place for the choice of a President by the people."

The Late Catastrophe.

From the Quebec Chronicle of Thursday Morning.

The Coroner and Jury yesterday viewed and examined 27 bodies. This and work occupied them all day. There were 22 more of the dead recovered at Caprouge yesterday, and brought down in a steamer sent up for the purpose. This makes the total number of the bodies recovered,—222.

There were 200 passengers by the John McKenzie alone missing, so that there must be, at least, 50 bodies still unrecovered, allowing for the lost among the cabin and steerage passengers, the crew, and raftsmen on board the Montreal.

LIST OF BODIES EXAMINED, AT REYNARD'S WHARF, BY THE CORONER AND JURY, ON THE 2ND JULY, 1857.

1—James Muir, aged 7, recognized by his mother Mrs. Agnes Muir.

2—William Ferguson, aged 46, recognised by his widow, and his effects handed to her.

3—Thelesphore Bourgette, aged 22, sailor of the Montreal, recognised by his father Louis Bourgette, of St. Roch's, Quebec.

27—George Crawford, aged 23, recognized by Charles Cameron, a grocer, in Ayr, Scotland. Effects:—4½ sovereigns, 20s 1½d in silver and copper, 1 silver watch and gold guard; reference to Cowen and Cross, Montreal.

HEROISM.

The boy Narcisse Lamontagne, who so heroically saved 5 children from the steamer Montreal was in town yesterday. He is about 13 years old, and tall for his age, is of delicate form; and it is really wonderful that he should have had the presence of mind and courage to grapple with the children in the water, some of them being nearly as tall as himself. Mr. J. B. Ryan, and Capt. St. Louis, of the steamer Victoria, took him about the city yesterday afternoon, with the view of getting a subscription raised to reward him for his noble conduct. He is from Sorel, and we are informed that he is the chief support of his widowed mother. Surely such heroism as this boy displayed should not pass unrewarded. We have no Humane Society in Quebec, but we have, we trust, those in this city who, admiring this noble boy's conduct, will give him a medal and something besides it. It was by seizing the door of a state room, placing the children upon it, and pushing it before him while he swam, that, at different trips, he succeeded in landing on dry rocks or on the beach 8 of the survivors who would have, otherwise met, with the hundreds of others, a watery grave.

LATEST.

At 10 o'clock last night the steamer Alliance, with the Coroner and Jury on board returned from the wreck of the Montreal.—The Alliance brought down 25 bodies. One of these had been identified as John McGavin, a passenger by the John McKenzie. The remains of one of the victims, almost entirely calcined, have also arrived by this steamer.

The River Police brought down from Canrouge last evening 4 bodies. Another body was picked up by a pilot off Beauport One by a timber tower, and one by the captain of a ship, at Lampson's booms,—Total 7.

When the Alliance left Canrouge, 3 more bodies were reported to be lying on the beach. The corpses are now beginning to rise and float around the wreck.

UNACCOUNTED FOR AND LOST.

Found yesterday	32
Total to this time	200

BODIES IDENTIFIED YESTERDAY.

The Coroner and Jury repair to Raymard's wharf, to view the bodies of two persons found drowned by the crew of the ship 'Onward,' at Canrouge and which were brought to town by the River Police on Tuesday evening. The bodies were examined and identified as follows:—

No. 1.—Josephine Cantin, aged 27, wife of Michael Tourville, indentified by her husband, of the city of Montreal, who removed the body.

No. 2—Robert Dick, aged 16, porter, recognised by Captain Biennerhassett, as being a passenger by the 'John McKenzie.' Effects—1 silver watch; 2 sovereigns; 4 English half Crowns; 7 English sixpenses, and 1½d.

The following bodies were brought on board the steamer 'Alliance,' of St Augustin, and examined by the Coroner and Jury yesterday, on board of that steamer:—

1—Lecli Lejeuna, aged 55, wife of Pierre Bebard, of St Roch's Quebec, trader, recognized by her husband.

2—Hugh Wylie, aged 9, indentified by Captain Bionnerhassett as being a passenger by the 'John McKenzie.'

—3 Angus McCrae, aged 16, laborer, recognized by a William Black, as passenger by the 'John McKenzie.'

4—James Tweedle, tea and coffee merchant, No. 40 Charlotte street, Leith, aged 29, recognized by Captain Biennerhassett. Effects:—1 silver watch with gold guard and chain; 1 gold breast pin, 2 gold studds; 1 pocket book and 8s 4d.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, JULY 9. 1857.

On Thursday evening last a dinner was given to the Hon. Colonel Prince, Edwin Larwill, Esquire M. P. P. and Messrs Carron, McLeod and Park, by the Amherstburg people as the Salmoni House. The object of the dinner was, as a mark of their appreciation of those gentlemen, for the stand taken by them, in the Great Southern Rail, way struggle, and their exertions on behalf of the Town of Amherstburg. It would be useless at present to go over the ground that has so often been gone over before, in connection with the Railway matters, to show how far those gentlemen are entitled to the mark of appreciation that has been tendered them, by the Amherstburg people, for all who have read the numberless articles that have appeared from week to week in this journal upon the subject will feel satisfied that this mark of esteem was due them.

The dinner was attended by a large number of persons (and a more respectable party could not be found,) from different parts of the County; we have been informed that over a hundred sat down, to partake of the splendid repast that was provided.

The dinner was all that could be desired, and everything that was seasonable, was furnished in the usual style of the Salmoni House, which is saying enough in its favour. The wines were excellent, and everything went off in the happiest manner that could be desired, with the band discoursing sweet music all the while; everything that the heart as well as the palate could desire was provided to render the feast complete, and right well did the knife and fork play their part at the festive board.

The party having sat down to dinner at eight o'clock or a little after, the cloth was removed at about half past nine, when a number of standard toasts were given from the chair, and when the toast of the evening was given,—the Hon. John Prince, which was received most enthusiastically by all present and having been drunk in a bumper with a three times three, Mr. Albert Prince rose to respond to the toast, in the absence of his father, who he stated was unable to attend on account of the state of his health, and that he had been directed to express his regret, at his inability to avail himself of of the honour which had been conferred upon him, and that nothing but severe indisposition would have kept him away.

Mr. Prince then referred to the subject of the Southern Railway at some length, and severely criticised the conduct of Mr. Rankin in the part that he took in attempting to turn the Southern Railway to his own advantage and the disadvantage of the company and the country generally.

Mr. Prince was followed by Mr. Larwill who also entered very fully into the subject, and made a most excellent speech; then came Mr. Carron, and then rose Mr. McLeod, to explain the part that he had taken in the Southern Railway struggle, at great length. We regret that it is out of our power to report the different speeches made, for we never remember to have heard better ones, on any similar occasion, then were delivered at this.

All the speakers entered very fully into the all-absorbing topic of the night—The Southern Railway.—

The party did not break up until near morning and all left well pleased with what they had heard and highly delighted with the festivities of the evening.

WYMAN'S PANORAMA.

It is some time since we have had an opportunity, of enjoying ourselves more than on Monday evening last, at Wyman's Panorama of the Russian War and Niagara falls. The view of the falls, the scenery and the many other objects of interest in the neighborhood of that wonderful, place, are true to nature; so correct and natural are the representations that one will imagine himself standing in reality, gazing upon the many wonderful sights that meet his view when at the falls, you can almost imagine that you hear the roaring of the mighty waters, as they pour over the awful precipice. There is perhaps, nothing more interesting in the many views represented than the trip, in the "Maid of the Mist" steamer, which is so natural that the audience imagined themselves upon the boat and making the trip for a certainty; in this view every object is represented from the great cataract, down the river, to the whirlpool, including the great Suspension Bridge.

The panorama of the Russian War also affords an opportunity of seeing, many an interesting locality in connection with the late war, of which we had only been able to read before, but now through the means of this panorama we are made familiar with them.

The evening's entertainment was finished off by Mr. Flanders, with a number of very excellent slight of hand tricks, which particularly amused the juveniles, who no doubt thought that Mr. Flanders was connected with another interesting individual whose name we need not mention. As a ventriloquist, he surpasses anything we have heretofore heard in that way, and his introduction of a number of imaginary characters to the audience through that means, afforded no small share of amusement.

COUNTY COURT AND QUARTER SESSION.

The County Court opened on Tuesday the 7th inst, Present A. Chewett Esquire, Judge, P. J. Salter Esq. and Felix a Lafferty Esq.

The Grand Jury sworn Edward Davis Foreman; Amos Brush, James Gibb, Ellis, Hillman, Joseph Mason, Theodore Kalistocker, Thomas Mears, Hugh Maloney, John Mullins, John McGuire, Julian Panquet William Sheldon, Michael Wigle, John Ward, John Martindale.

Fortier vs McGregor, issue undefended, verdict for Plaintiff £166 10s.

Washington vs Mulder, defended issue, verdict for plaintiff £20.

Spragul etal vs Miller, defended issue, verdict for plaintiff £76 3s 7d.

Woodbridge vs Miller defended issue, verdict for plaintiff £37 17s 6d.

Ives vs Bullock, defended issue, verdict for defendant.

Knill vs Harris, defended issue, verdict for plaintiff £21.

☞ In another part of the paper appears a letter from Col. Prince; next week we intend publishing the celebrated resolutions as well as the Colonel's speech, that called forth the dark resolutions.

A man who had both arms broken by a railroad accident claiming damages, the company offered him a small sum of money, and a "free ticket over the road for life!" This was adding to injury. They evidently meant to kill him off altogether!

Horrible Murder in Detroit.

AN OFFICER SHOT!

THE MURDERERS ARRESTED!!

The inhabitants of Fourth Ward were thrown into a great excitement last evening, by the rumour that an officer of the city had been shot on Congress street, by a notorious rowdy, living near No. 235, on that street. The Mayor immediately deputised Henry Metz, Anthony McLogan, and John Keeley, who went with officer Champ to the scene of the murder, and succeeded in arresting eleven persons, who were supposed to be implicated in the affair.

The facts in regard to the homicide are as far as we have been able to gather them, were as follows:

Sheriff Cicott, wishing the services of some officers, sent officer Austin after Charles Small a deputy sheriff, and as he was returning up Congress street with him, between 8 and 9 o'clock, they encountered a large gang of men, most of them drunken, who were engaged in something of a quarrel. The officers attempted to seperate the combatants, when they were immediately set upon, and during the melee a shot was fired by one of the rowdies, taking effect in Mr. Small's head. He immediately fell, and was soon after removed by W. Henderson, Esq., and another gentleman, who were standing by, and witnessed the whole transaction. Mr. Austin was badly stabbed about the head, and will doubtless be confined to his house for some days. Small lingered in great pain until about 6 o'clock this morning, when death put an end to his misery.

About half past 8 this morning, Justice Lane was called and a jury sworn at the late residence of the deceased, after which the inquest was adjourned to take place at his office at 11 o'clock. Drs. Davenport and Thompson were called, and were proceeding with the post mortem examination when our reporter left. The appearance of the head of the deceased, shows that the person who fired the pistol, must have stood back of Small, and rather to the right of him, and we should judge that the murderer stood higher than the other, from the fact that the ball entered the top of the head, and proceeded downwards towards the left eye. It was the opinion of some of those who examined the body, that deceased was partly down at the time the shot was fired which is no doubt his true position as he was struck repeatedly before. His left eye presents the appearance of having received a blow, but this may have been caused by the ball lodging near it, on the inside.

One of the men arrested, named William Kelly, a notorious character, was stripped after arriving at the jail, and his shirt was found covered with fresh blood. He was arrested in bed, and protested that he knew nothing of the matter. He was recognised by officer Austin, however as one of the ring leaders in the gang. Great praise is due officer Stadler for his efforts in ferreting out the criminals. We understand that one of the prisoners has announced his determination to reveal the whole facts, with the names of the persons implicated, one of whom he states has not yet been arrested. This will probably be done to day, and in the meantime officers will be on the track of the parties who have escaped. The whole affair shows a most brutal murder, and we sincerely trust the perpetrators may meet the punishment due their crime.

To the Editor of the Colonist

DEAR SIR,—Your valuable paper of yesterday has afforded me a rich treat and not a little fun in the report of an indignation meeting of "the colored citizens" of Toronto, for the purpose of censuring me. Perhaps I ought not to notice their proceedings—perhaps it would be more becoming in me to allow them to pass at once into the oblivion which awaits them; but as it is the fashion in this country not unfrequently to assume that to be true which appears in print against an individual, unless he flatly denies the accusation, I shall, at least, for once, condescend to notice these absurd proceedings. They deal in generalities, and so Shall I. Of the colored citizens of Toronto I know little or nothing; no doubt, some very respectable persons are to be found, and perform the inferior duties belonging to their station tolerably well. Here they are kept in order—in their proper places—but their "proceedings" are evidence of their natural conceit, their vanity, and their ignorance; and in them the cloven foot appears and evinces what they would do if they could. I believe that in this city, as in some others of our Province, they are looked upon as necessary evils, and only submitted to because white servants are so scarce. But I now deal with these fellows as a body, and I pronounce them to be, as such, the greatest curse ever inflicted upon the two magnificent western counties which I have the honor to represent in the Legislative Council of this Province! and few men have had the experience of them that I have. Among the many estimable qualities they possess, a systematic habit of lying is not the least prominent; and the "colored citizens" aforesaid seem to partake of that quality in an eminent degree, because in their famous Resolutions they roundly assert that during the Rebellion "I walked arm and arm with the colored men" (I owe my election to the votes of colored men"—and that I have "accumulated much earthly gains," as a lawyer, among "colored clients." All lies! Lies! Lies! from beginnigg to end. I admit that one company of blacks did belong to my contingent battalion, but they made no part of soldiers, and were, comparatively speaking, unsusceptible of drill or discipline, and were conspicuous for one act only—a stupid sentry shot the son of one of our oldest Colonels, under a mistaken notion that he was hereby doing his duty. I have never (I) never did myself the honor of "walking arm in arm" with one of the colored gentlemen of that distinguished corps. Then, as to my election. Few, very few blacks voted for me. I never canvassed them, and hence, I supposed they supported as a body, my opponent. They took sumptuous upon "a monument of injured innocence," and for sustaining the monument for awhile, upon the pedestal their influence erected. But the monument fell, and the fall proved that such influence was merely ephemeral, and it sank into insignificant nothingness, as it should, and I hope never will do! or God help this noble land. Poor Blackies! Be not so bold or so conceited, or so insolent hereafter, I do beseech you.

Then how rich I have become among my "colored clients!" I assert, without the fear of contradiction, that I have been the friend—the steady friend of our Western "Darkies" for more than twenty years; and amidst difficulties and troubles innumerable, (for they are a litigious race), I have been their adviser, and I never made twenty pounds out of them in that long period! The fact is that the poor creatures had never the ability to pay a lawyer's fee.

It has been my misfortune, and the misfortune of my family to live among those Blacks, (and they have lived upon us,) for twenty-four years. I have employed hundreds of them, and, with the exception of one (named Richard Hunter), not one has ever done for us a week's honest labor. I have taken them into my service, have fed and clothed them, year after year, on their arrival from the States, and in return I have generally found them rogues and thieves, and a graceless, wothless, thriftless, lying set of vagabonds. That is my very plain and very simple description of the Darkies as a body, and it would be endorsed by all the Western white men with very few exceptions.

I have had scores of their George Washingtons, Thomas Jeffersons, James Madisons, as well as their Dinahs, and Glenirias, and Lavinias, in my service, and I understand them thoroughly, and I conclude the whole batch (old Richard Hunter excepted) in the category above described. To conclude, you "Gentlemen of Color," East and West, and especially you "coloured citizens of Toronto," I thank you for having given me an opportunity to publish my opinion of your race. Call another indignation meeting, and there make greater fools of yourselves than you did at the last, and then "to supper with what appetite you may."

Believe me to remain,
Mr. Editor,
Yours very faithfully,
JOHN PRINCE.

Toronto, 26th June, 1857.

P. S.—I think it proper to allude to the case of Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodbridge, of whom the Darkies' resolutions make mention, and who were so improperly and so unjustly dismissed from the commission of the peace. Those two magistrates did their duty—they acted upon a statute which has never been repealed, and they were dismissed for not having acted upon a statute which did not touch the offence charged—Horse Stealing! However, there is some consolation in reflecting that the black rascal whom they caused to be arrested was tried and convicted of the crime charged, and will luxuriate for six years yet to come in the State Prison of Ohio. It is believed (and I believe it to) that the "monument" had much to do in influencing the Executive against these worthy magistrates.

Christening of the Infant Princess

The ceremony of the babtism of her Royal Highness the Infant Princess, fifth daughter of her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness Prince Albert, took place on the 16th of June, in the Chapel within the Buckingham Palace.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, followed by the Bishop of London and the bishop and clergymen assisting, entered the chapel at ten minutes before one o'clock. The Archbishop took his place on the one side of the communion table and the Bishop on the other.

The communion table was covered with crimson velvet bordered with deep gold lace and edged with bullion fringe. In front of the table, immediately below the steps by which it is approached, was placed the beautiful christening font of silver gilt, elevated on a fluted circular pedestal of white and gold. The font contained water brought from the River Jordan, and presented to her Majesty specially for the occasion.

The Foreign Ministers and Cabinet Ministers present at the solemnity were conducted by the Heralds to seats in the Chapel.

All the visitors appeared in full dress uniform. The Ambassador of France and the Foreign Ministers all wore the insignia of different orders of knighthood.

The procession of the sponsors entered the chapel at five minutes before one o'clock.

Her Majesty's procession followed immediately.

The Queen wore a white and silver moire antique dress, trimmed with a deep flounce of Honiton lace, white tulle, and bunches of silver flowers. The top of the corsage was trimmed all round with diamonds.

Her Majesty wore a diamond circlet, diamond earrings, and diamond necklace. The Queen also wore the riband of the Order of the Garter, from which was suspended a very magnificent "George," composed of brilliants.

The Marquis of Breadalbane, Lord Chamberlain, accompanied by the Marquis of Abercorn, Groom of the Stable to Prince Albert, conducted the infant Princess in to the chapel. Her Royal Highness being carried by the Head Nurse, and attended by Lady Caroline Barrington.

The infant Princess wore a robe of Honiton lace over white satin.

The Archbishop of Canterbury proceeded with the baptismal service, and when his Grace came to name her Royal Highness, Lady Caroline Barrington presented the Princess at the Font, and the Duchess of Kent named her Beatrice was reconducted from the Chapel and a chorus, "Hallelujah" (Beethoven,) "Mount of Olives," was performed.

The Archbishop of Canterbury having pronounced the blessing, the solemnity was concluded at 28 minutes past one o'clock.

We learn from Washington that the instructions relative to the operations of the troops now detailed for Utah have been completed. It is designed by the Government to create a separate military department of the Territory, under command of General Harney, who will have a force of nearly three thousand men fully equipped as an army in the field. On Monday afternoon, two hundred and fifty United States recruits took their departure by the New York and Erie Railroad for Leavenworth City, Kansas where they will join the command of 3,000 men that is to accompany the new Governor of Utah to Salt Lake City. These soldiers were mostly young men, and expressed themselves pleased at the prospect of active service. Last week, one hundred and fifty recruits left New York on a similar mission. The missionary party, numbering fifty in all, sent out by the Mormons, reached Omaha, Nebraska, about the 15th inst. They left Salt Lake City about the first of May, and travelled the whole distance on foot, over one thousand miles, drawing their provisions and baggage in common handcarts, such as are used in the streets of cities. They reported twenty feet of snow as lying in the South Pass of the Rocky Mountains when they came through it. The missionaries expressed much indignation on hearing the reports of Brigham Young having fled from his people.

Special Notices.

BE WISE IN TIME.

From their unfailing efficacy, yet comparative mildness of purgative action, and having a peculiar tendency to the Biliary and Digestive Organs, Sir Astley Cooper's Pills are of inestimable value in this country in which Bilious Diseases and other complaints attended with congestion of the Liver, so much abound. Taken either a short time before or after exposure, they render the system less liable to contract infectious or epidemic diseases, and should be resorted to by persons residing in low and marshy situations, or where travelling or exposed to contagion, also those who are debilitated by intense and long application to business or study, as well as those of sedentary habits, will derive great benefit from an occasional use of them. For that debilitated and deranged state of the system, which occurs in the spring season of the year and the beginning of summer, they are particularly applicable. Sir Astley Cooper's Pills, although all powerful in curing disease, yet are as pure and harmless as Bread, and may be administered with confidence to the Invalid, however weakly from long ill-health, who will soon enjoy those delightful symptoms of a return to strong health, viz: good appetite sound sleep, and an increase of animal spirits.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Observe that on the tops of each box of the genuine pills, there is an excellent likeness of the late Sir Astley Cooper, from the painting by Lawrence; also the fac-simile of the signature of McPhail & Co., Sole Proprietors, London and New York on each box, and on the directions. Without these marks of authenticity they are spurious and an imposition.

Sold at 25 and 50 cents per box, and in family boxes at $1 each. There is a great saving by purchasing the larger sizes.

For sale by Simpson and Dunspaugh, Druggists, Toronto; John M. Thornton, Dundas; Andrew Oliver Galt; A. H. Cook, Brantford, General Agents, by whom Country Druggists and Merchants will be supplied at London and New York prices.

L. P. ST. AMOUR, Agent, for Sandwich.

GREEN'S

GREAT WESTERN BOOT STORE,

Bedford Street, Sandwich.

J. GREEN returns his thanks to the inhabitants of Sandwich, Windsor and the neighboring township, for the very liberal manner in which they have supported him since his commencement in business, and he assures them that it is his intention to purchase the very best quality of LEATHER and keep the best of workmen so that he can compete with his Yankee neighbours both as regards material and workmanship, and sell at such low prices for cash, as will defy competition. It is a mistaken notion of the public to carry their money to Detroit, when they can be supplied with a home manufactured article cheaper.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralising the principle of disease, and thus radically curing it, no matter whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, & the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they restore the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma
Bowel Complaints
Coughs,
Colds,
Chest Diseases,
Costiveness,
Dyspepsia,
Diarrhœa
Dropsy,
Debility,
Fever and Ague,
Female Complaints,
Headaches,
Indigestion
Influenza,
Inflammation,
Inward Weakness
Liver Complaints,
Lowness of Spirits
Piles,
Stone in the Kidneys
Secondary Symptoms,
Venereal Affections,
Worms of all kinds,

* * Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

☞ CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernible as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A thousand pounds will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on WEDNESDAY, the

5th day of August next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street: Lots No. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

Nobody.

If nobody's noticed you—you must be small,
If nobody's slighted you—you must be tall,
If nobody's bowed to you—you must be low,
If nobody's kissed you—you're ugly we know.

If nobody's envied you—you're a poor elf,
If nobody's flattered you—flatter yourself,
If nobody's cheated you—you are a knave,
If nobody's hated you—you are a slave.

If nobody's called you a "fool" to your face,
Somebody's wished for your back in its place;
If nobody's called you a "tyrant or "scold,"
Somebody thinks you of spiritless mould.

If nobody knows of your faults but a friend,
Nobody will miss them, at the world's end;
If nobody clings to your purse like a fawn,
Nobody will run like a hound when its gone.

If nobody's eaten his bread from your store,
Nobody will call you a miserable bore;
If nobody's slander'd you—here is your pen,
Sign yourself "Nobody," quick as you can.

Oyster Shells for Fruit Trees.

A correspondent writes to us as follows:

"One of the most effectual applications I had ever made to fruit trees, in an old and barren situation, is a compost in which finely broken oyster shells were the principle ingredient. The shell has generally a large per centage of saline matter attaching to them, in a fresh state, with some animal matter and much lime. By breaking them and mixing them with wood and ashes, and spreading it thickly around old trees, an almost immediate and decided improvement will take place."—Ger. Telegraph.

Buckwheat Cakes.—The American Agriculturist contains the following hint on this subject. One buckwheat cake differs from another, yet not one in a thousand is made right. Yet, of all things, they are the easiest to cook, if the meal is prepared rightly. To three bushels of buckwheat, add one bushel of good heavy oats; grind them together as if there was only buckwheat, than you will have cakes always light and always brown. He who feeds on buckwheat may be grim and lethargic, while he of the oatmeal will have exhilaration of brain and contentment of spirit.—Perhaps the better way is, to get the oatmeal and buckwheat, four separate, and mix to suit the taste. Some may like a larger proportion of oatmeal than others. Another most excellent ingredient is rice water.

Tomatoes.

Those who wish to hurry their tomatoes for market, may do so by proper shortening in. All must have observed that 90 per cent, of the tomatoes grow within 18 inches of the ground, and that 90 per cent of the vigs, containing only ten per cent of the fruit grows above this point; therefore cut it off and remove it with the small tomatoes. The vines will not bleed, and the large tomatoes left will increase in size more than equal to the value of those removed, besides getting them to market while the price is sufficiently high to compensate for their culture:—Working Farmer.

When Does Wool Grow?—I answer when it is wanted to cover the sheep and keep it warm. From the time the sheep is sheared until the frost comes, you can see the shape of every clip of the sheep; when the frost and cold weather comes, it grows out immediately. Now if you wish for a heavy clip, feed when the wool is growing. If you have any extra feed, then is the time to use it. The wool draws very hard upon the carcass, and growing out fast deceives almost every farmer. They think their sheep are doing well when they are growing poor. I can make an additional pound of wool with one bushel of corn, and my sheep will afterwards winter one bushel of corn easier. Let your sheep get poor while your wool is growing, and you cannot recruit them until the next summer.—Genesee Farmer.

Recipe for the Bite of a Mad Dog.—Take oyster shells, burn to a lime; pulverize and sift through a piece of crape; take one heaped table-spoonful of the sifted lime and mix with eggs in c. nsistency of batter or cream; fry this in a pan with a piece of fresh butter or some sweet oil.

This cake to be eaten in the morning, and nothing of food or drink to be taken for six hours afterward.

Three such cakes as above to be eaten on three alternate mornings for an adult; to be diminished for a child according to age.

A Missouri Farm.

There is a farm upon the prarie, near St. Louis, owned by Ligorson & Brothers, (who seem to understand that to make money by farming, money must be invested to begin with,) comprising one thousand acres in one field, fenced with posts and rails, a mile and a half square, and containing 150 acres of corn, 40 acres of strawberries for the St. Louis market 20 acres of flowers, 50 acres of peach trees, and 2000 acres of other fruit, among which are 2500 pear trees, 200 acres of morning, and 200 of pasturage. One row of trees three hundred yards apart, and a mile long with a protecting row of arbor vitæ. All the orchard ground is cultivated in strawberries, melons or something else. There are 600 sheep and 100 cattle kept on the farm.

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION

AND

DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,

IN THE BEAUTIFUL

TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a long time past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and favorably situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street; with Barns, Stables, &c., &c. Brick Mill House, a never-falling spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, and the Termini thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£250.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Seymour, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of John Hosmer, agent, Detroit.

GLOBE, " Amos Pratt,
ONTONAGON, " M. Wilkins,
ADRIATIC, " M. Sea thorp
OGONTZ, " W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY, (New Propeller,)

Which will leave during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-West. ern Transportation Company Line on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week; and having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Deck Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Liberal discounts are made for transportation of Property and Merchandize, via on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad line.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over Five Thousand Tons Burthen, and being all new and much the first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandize for the transport of Property.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches Permit Mercantile, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the United States.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable Practical Accountants of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING,

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of Transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, more than mere routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and reasons on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the simplest to the most varied and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that optionally) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, Practical and Ornamental, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.

Besides the usual method of Practical Business Writing, the Chirhythmographic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

Daily Lectures on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new and extensions of this College, occupies the most beautiful building in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Carried.

to meet again at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

Carried.

FOURTH DAY.

TOWN HALL,
AMHERSTBURG, 2nd July, 1857.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

The Roll was called.

Present: Theodore Malott Esquire, Warden; and Messrs Bondy, Brush, Caldwell, Cunningham, Desjardins, Flanagan, Macdonell, Marentette, Wigle, and Woodbridge.

The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

Moved by Mr. Macdonell seconded by Mr. Wigle, that the eighth rule be suspended during the continuance of the session in order to facilitate the dispatch of business.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Macdonell, seconded by Mr. Brush, and Resolved:—

That the opening up of Town lines and County Roads throughout the County, and making them good turnpike Roads, would more than any other means tend to induce the settlement of the County and ensure its progress, and prosperity.

That the first and most important Road, to be assumed for improvement as a through Road, is that composed of the series of Town lines, running through the centre of the County, East and West, and dividing the County into two equal parts, North and South, and forming together a highway of communication, that can be and in common by all the Townships of the County. And that it is the opinion of this Council that it is highly expedient that the work of opening out this Road, should be immediately undertaken.

That in order to carry into effect the intention of the Council, that Mr. Macdonell in conjunction with Messrs. Brush and Leggatt, be a Committee authorized to employ a competent person to perform the service of removing the line of the said Road, making a plan thereof showing distances and preparing estimates of the probable cost of the formation of the Road.

That upon the reception of the said Plan and estimates, the Clerk be directed to advertize in the following Papers—The Toronto Colonist "Globe," Hamilton Spectator, London Herald, Detroit Free Press, and all the County Papers, that Tenders will be received until the first Monday of November next, for the work of draning, ditching and grading the said Road; showing the price per mile for cash paid, or on terms of taking the Debentures of the municipality. The Council not binding itself to accept the lowest Tender.

That it is also the opinion of this Council, that it is expedient to open out the continuation of the old Malden Road until it intersects the Talbot Road west. And that it be an instruction to the warden and Committee above appointed to adopt similar steps in regard to it as are indicated for the centre line of Road.

That leave be granted to introduce a By-law for the rasing by way of loan the sum of thirty thousand pounds, to be devoted and appropriated towards opening out Town lines and County Roads, commencing with the Roads above mentioned.

That a Special Meeting of the Council be held on the first Tuesday in November, for the taking into consideration of the said By-law, and for the opening of the Tenders put in; and for appropriating whatever amount may remain over after accomplishing the opening and construct. ing of the Roads above assumed.

(Carried unanimously.)

The Finance Committee presented their report, which was read and adopted.

The Committee on Printing presented their report which was read and adopted.

Mr. Cunningham presented a petition from George Gett and others which was read and referred to the Committee on Roads and Bridges.

Moved by Mr. Woodbridge seconded by Mr. Bondy, that a copy of the proceedings of this Council, insofar as they relate to the favourable action taken by them, in relation to the debt due the late united counties of Essex Kent and Lampton by the late Fabien Parent be forwarded to the Councils of the two latter counties, hoping that they may adopt a like course, as well as a copy of this resolution.

Carried.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges presented their report which was read and adopted.

Moved by Mr. Macdonell seconded by Mr. Brush, that leave be granted to introduce a By-Law entitled "A By-Law to raise by way of loan the sum of £30,000, for opening Town lines and improving County roads, in the County of Essex."

Carried.

The By-Law was then introduced and read a first time.

Moved by Mr. Macdonell, seconded by Mr. Woodbridge, that leave be granted to introduce a By-Law entitled "A By-Law to make provision for the manner in which a By-Law to authorize the Municipal Council of the County of Essex to raise by way of debentures the sum of £30,000 for the purpose of opening Town Lines and improving County Roads shall be passed.

Carried.

The By-Law was then introduced and read a first time.

The Council resolved itself into a committee of the whole house.

Mr. Woodbridge in the chair.

The By-Law entitled, "A By-Law to make provisions for the manner in which a By-Law to authorize the Municipal Council of the County of Essex to raise by Debentures the sum of £30,000 for the purpose of opening Town lines and improving County Roads" was read a second time.

Moved by Mr. Wigle seconded by Mr. Malott that the By-Law entitled "A By-Law to provide a rate for raising a sum of money for the improvement of Town Lines and other County Roads and Bridges," be now read a second time.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Macdonell seconded by Mr. Bondy, that the By-Law be read a second time this day six months.

The vote having been taken upon the amendment, was lost.

The By-Law was then read a second time.

The Council resumed

The chairman reports By-Law with amendments.

The By-Law entitled, "A By-Law to make provision for the manner in which a By-Law to authorize the Municipal Council of the County of Essex to raise by debentures the sum of £30,000 for the purpose of opening Town lines and improving County Roads," was read a third time.

Moved by Mr. Wigle seconded by Mr. Flanagan that the By-Law do now pass.

Carried.

Mr. Leggatt's By-Law entitled "A By-Law to provide for the current expenses of the County of Essex, and for the payment of grand and petite Jurors for the year 1857," was introduced and read a first time.

Moved by Mr. Flanagan seconded by Mr. Desjardins, that Messrs Leggatt, Wigle and Brush be a committee to report upon the Treasurer's Bond.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cuningham seconded by Mr. Caldwell that the Council adjourn for half an hour.

Carried.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

A quorum being present.

The chairman of the committe on Roads and Bridges, handed in his report, which was read and adopted.

The chairman of the committee to examine the Treasurer's Bond, handed in his report, which was read.

Moved by Mr. Cunningham, seconded by Mr. Caldwell, that the bonds put in by the Treasurer be accepted for the present; and that he be instructed to prepare Bonds pursuant to the report of the committee by the next sittings of this council.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Woodbridge seconded by Mr. Bondy, that as it is clear that many persons are now peddling goods and merchandise without a license, be it therefore resolved, that the clerk be instructed to advertise in all the papers in this county, the By-Law passed by this Council for that purpose.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Wigle, seconded by Mr. Cunningham, that the names of the County Clerk, Treasurer and Messenger be placed upon the pay list, for their attendance at the Council in Amherstburg, in order to defray their expenses.

Carried.

The Council resolved itself into a Committee of the whole house.

Mr. Macdonell in the chair.

The By-Law entitled "a By-Law to provide for the Courrent expenses of the County of Essex and for the payment of Grand and Petite jurors for the year 1857," was read a second time.

The By-Law entitled "A By-Law to provide for the payment of qualified Teachers and Local Superintendants of schools for the year 1857," was read a second time.

The Council resumed.

The Chairman reports By-Laws without amendments.

The By-Law entitled "A By-Law to provide for the Current expenses of the County of Essex, and for the payment of Graud and Petite Jurors, for the year 1857," was read a third time.

Moved by Mr. Leggatt, seconded by Mr. Brush, that the By-Law do not pass.

Carried.

Carried.

Moved by Mr. Wigle, seconded by Mr. Cunningham that the Council do now adjourn, to meet again at the Town of Sandwich, on Tuesday the Third day of November next.

Carried.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—ULCERATED LEGS.—Every surgeon knows that sores deeply seated in the muscular fibre of the leg defy all ordinary treatment; but ulcers of this class, however obstinate and virulent, invariably heal under the same balsamic action of Holloway's Ointment. This preparation does not drive the virus of the sore from one part of the system to another; it cures not by repression, but expulsion. Hence, there is no fear of the re-appearance of any eruption, tumor, swelling, or sore, that has once yielded to the healing properties of this thorough curative. In cases of cancer its timely use has saved innumerable lives, and rendered the cruel process of excision unnecessary. Of the Pills, it may be truly said that no disease of the stomach or liver ever resisted their operation.

SOMETHING FOR THE LADIES.—A writer to the Scientific American recommends to the ladies a very simple arrangement for keeping butter cool and nice in the hottest weather.—Procure a large new flour pot of a size sufficient to cover the butter plate, and also a saucer large enough for the flower pot to rest in upside down; place a trivet or meat stand, (such as is set to the oven when a joint is baked,) in the saucer and put on this trivet the plate of butter; now fill the saucer with water, and turn the flower pot over the butter, so that its bottom edge will be below the water. The hole in the pot must be fitted with cork; the butter will then be in what we call an air-tight chamber. Let the whole of the outside of the flower pot be throughly drenched with water, and place it in as cool a place as you can. If this be done over night, the butter will be as "firm as a rock" at breakfast time; or if placed there in the morning, the butter will be quite hard enough for use at tea hour. The reason for this is, that when the water evaporates, it produces cold; the porous pot draws up the water which in warm weather quickly evaporates from the sides, and thus cools it, and as no warm air can now get at the butter it becomes firm and cool on the hottest day.

SANDWICH, JULY 16. 1857.

THE DISMISSAL OF THE SANDWICH MAGISTRATES.

The "Indignation" meeting lately held at the city of Toronto by the Colored Citizens of that place whereat, they denounced our Legislative Councillor, Colonel the Honourable John Prince, for something said in Parliament which they conceived to be offensive to their Race, put forth some words which the colonel never uttered: and had they (as they ought to have done) expressed their feelings while the council remained in session, Colonel Prince, no doubt would have explained everything most properly. The reporters who attended the debate have kindly furnished us with a correct report of what did fall from the Colonel on the debate in question, and we publish it and vouch for the truth of it, in substance and in fact, As long as the colored race behave well in Upper Canada, they will ever find a true friend in Colonel Prince, who detests slavery as much as any human being does—But they must behave themselves, and not again rise the British Lion's mane. They asked for all he gave them in return.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

June 9th 1857.

DISMISSAL OF MAGISTRATES.

HON. COL. PRINCE, moved the adoption of the address, of which he had given notice, to His Excellency the Governor General to restore to the Commission of the peace for the County of Essex in C W. J A Wilkinson and T. Woodbridge Esqrs, of the Town of Sandwich in that County, in compliance with a memorial of the inhabitants of Sandwich and others to that effect.

The Hon. Gentleman then stated that these Magistrates had been dismissed in an arbitrary and unjust manner and without any just cause. It did not seem to him (Col. P.) that the Secretary had power to dismiss Magistrates when he pleased, as it was rather necessary that they should be first proved to be guilty either of ignorance or negligence or corruption and neither could be proved in this instance as an apology for the conduct of Government; as the act which led to the dismissal of these Gentlemen was perfectly in accordance with the statute law, and which was wholly misunderstood by the legal advisers of the Crown (hear hear) In December 1855 it appears that a Sheriff from the United States applied to these Magistrates Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodbridge and claimed that a colored man named Lantou, should be given over to his custody on a charge then substantiated on his affidavit, and on other evidence shewing, that he had stolen horses from Ohio. The magistrates then took his deposition, and ordered a Canadian Constable, named Samuel Port, to go with the Sheriff (whose presence was requested to identify the thief) and arrest Lanton who was living near Sandwich. This was done and the Sheriff and his prisoner were then left by the constable at a tavern, while he Port went to procure the attendance of the Magistrates for the purpose of reporting to them the facts; and during his absence the Sheriff drove the prisoner off to Detroit, the river, then being frozen over, into Michigan and from thence into Ohio where he (Col. P.) shall show from documentary evidence, Langton was convicted of the crime of horse stealing, and was now undergoing his sentence for the crime of seven years in the State Prison there. So far, this province was well rid of so rascally and troublesome a customer, and the thanks of the community and the Government too, were due to these Magistrates who had thus been instrumental in ridding the country of one of its greatest nuisances. He was not a Slave but a hardened thief. It had been erroniously stated that Lanton was a fugitive slave seeking the protection of British soil, and considerable sympathy had been elicited, owing to the misrepresentations of an individual from whom one had a right to expect better thingsbut who for the present should be nameless; and the magistrates the people of Sandwich and of Essex had been libelled by a high functionary who said they entertained an antipathy to the colored race; whereas the contrary was the fact, as that race had been treated with invariable kindness by the people of Essex, a kindness which he (Col. P.) was sorry to say had in many cases been met with the basest ingratitude, the recipients rewarding their benefactors by robbing, pilfering and plunder, and committing other crimes. In the present case, as he before observed, the man Lanton was not a fugitive from slavery, but a fugitive from Justice (hear hear) which was vindicated by the capture of this horse stealer, who was reaping his just reward in the States prison, (hear hear) as he (Col P.) had documentary evidence to prove.

HON. MR. VANKOUGHNET, rose and requested that the subject might be postponed, so as to allow the orders of the day to be disposed of at the present sitting, to request Col. Prince at once assented.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,—Evening Session, Friday, June 9th, 1857.

HON. Col. PRINCE, seeing the President of the Council in his place, would continue his remarks upon the dismissal of Messrs Wilkinson and Woodbridge, a dismissal which was against all the principles of law or justice, as he should be able to prove. The Hon. gentleman then read the letter of dismissal, from Mr. Secretary now Attorney General Cartier, and which stated that they were dismissed for not complying with the statute called the Ashburton treaty which did not embrace or touch the crime of Horse Stealing, and which they could not notice. The gallant Colonel then proceeded to shew that in 1833 a very salutary law was passed 3rd and 4th Wm. 4th before the Ashburton treaty and which empowered Magistrates to take cognizance of any fugitive from justice, charged with either Murder, Forgery or Larceny. without the jurisdiction of this Province [and he (Col. P.) would remark that this horse thief Lanton was so charged] and upon application and deposition made before one or more Magistrates, then the party so charged, might be arrested; precisely the case here and mark. The Act empowered any Judge or Justice of the Peace upon such deposition to issue a warrant, such as in the present case had been issued by these gentlemen—and be it observed on the other hand, had they not done so, they would have laid themselves open to complaint, for refusing to comply with the provisions of the said Act. (Hear hear.) Hon. gentlemen would perceive that by the statute the matter left to the discretion of the Judges or Magistrates who should be called upon by the U. S. or any foreign authorities, to act and he (Col. P.) would ask, would the testimony of respectable gentlemen, the sheriff of Michigan taken on oath, be disputed by those Magistrates? (hear hear) would any hon. gentleman present acting in a similar capacity, and having been applied to, have had the least reason for a moment to doubt or hesitate (hear hear). But what does the letter of dismissal say? The learned Secretary and Attorney General East says:—"We dismiss you because you did not conform to the Act of 12 Vic." The Act by which the Magistrates were guided, and correctly guided, provides, that where a citizen shall be charged as aforesaid, the Magistrates shall do just as these gentlemen have done, and yet this learned Attorney General presumes to teach them law, which he is evidently ignorant of himself. (hear hear).

The gallant Colonel then made extensive quotations from 3d & 4th Wm. 4th and 12th Vic: to shew that the learned attorney General East had wrongly construed those acts, the latter of which did not embrace the crime of horse stealing and that the dismissal of the magistrates because they did not act under it was a great blunder, a grevious error, and which betrayed a lamentable and unwarrantable want of knowledge of statute Law, and he contended with much force that these magistrates acting under 3d & 4th Wm. 4th had done perfectly right—there conduct was commendable, whilst that of the Government was in the highest degree censurable. The learned President of the council intended in reply to the charge which he (Col. P.) had brought against the Government to contend that this Act (3rd and 4th Wm. 4th.) had been repealed because some adverse decision had been given upon a point of law arising out of it. But in the name of common sense, are Magistrates to be supposed to know of, or read an obscure decision of a Judge, and he would put this question to his hon friend and would expect a distinct reply; could the adverse decision of a judge repeal an Act of Parliament? certainly not, parliament alone could do it. He (Col. P.) contended that these Magistrates had acted in conformity with a law which remained upon the statute book unrepealed—a law, by which he himself and every man of sense or brains enough to construe a statute, would have acted on if placed in a similar position, and there it yet remains unrepealed. And with such facts before the government, there was but one just and honest course that they could take, which was to believe that these gentlemen had acted in accordance with what they thought right, (even if they did wrong) and the proper construction of an act of Parliament, in issuing their warrants for the apprehension of this horse thief, Lanton.—And when it was fully shown as it had been that the rascal was convicted of the theft—was now suffering, as already stated, the full penalty of his crime,—incarceration for 7 years in the Cleveland Jail, a punishment he richly deserved, he (Col. P.) was proud and happy in the reflection that the Magistrates of the County of Essex, had been the means of gaining for the rascal his deserts, and of sending him out of the Province, (hear hear).

The gallant Col. then gave a succinct detail of the means which had been employed by a certain party, who should for the present be nameless, to accomplish the dismissal of these Magistrates, and that that individual had cozened the Government most effectually; and had deceived them to gratify his spite and malice. His first essay was to endeavour to stir up the colored population of the county of Essex to memorilize the Government, but the more honest of the colored population soon told this mischiefmaker, that they and the Province were well rid of this horse thief and they would not interfere in the thing at all.

It was next found that this meddling and vindictive individual, this worthy instrument, and protector of horse thieves, had gone into the county of Middlesex and sought out another instrument worthy of himself, in the person of one Garrett a colored man, of whom little is known. beyond what he tells of himself, that he hails from London C. W. All that is subsequently learned is not much to his credit, and it is found that he has subsequently from some cause or other, decamped to Australia, or to parts unknown and left this province, and lo! upon the Memorial of this man, the Government take upon themselves, to dismiss from the commission of the peace, two worthy Magistrates, who from their long standing and upright conduct were an ornament to it.—(hear hear hear). The gallant Colonel then detailed the manner in which that dismissal had been arranged by the instrument who had so imposed upon the government, contriving that the dismissal of Mr. Woodbridge should be communicated to him while engaged on the Grand Jury of which he was foreman, but so far from injuring Mr. Woodbridge in their eyes, as doubtless intended, they had unanimously adopted a memorial to the goverut. which he would read to the House. That memorial concluded with the words "Your Memorialists recommend that the said gentleman be at once restored to the Commission of the Peace." In addition to this the leading men of the place, and of the county perfectly astounded that on the memorial of this fellow Garrett, and without that careful enquiry which it was the duty of the government to make beyond the mere instrument who had so effectually imposed them, these two worthy Magistrates should have been dismissed, joined in a further remonstrance to the government, conclude in respectful terms, and setting forth the whole facts of the case. Men of the highest standing in the County, had signed that memorial including the warden of the County—the worthy and learned Judge of the County Court, the members of the bar residing within the County and every respectable man had also joined in it, and he (Col. P.) had forwarded that memorial to the government; and he would say that a memorial signed unanimously and by men of such high standing, should have received early attention at the hands of the government, (hear) but all the notice taken of it was an acknowledgement that the memorial has been received and would have the consideration of the government! and so it has remained ever since.

He (Col. P.) would now briefly advert to the libel the government had cast upon the people of Essex, by a statement one of its members had made that these Magistrates, and the people of Essex had been actuated by a feeling of hatred and bitterness against the colored and fugitive race, than which a greater libel could not be cast upon men who he (Col. P.) had stated in the earlier part of the debate had ever treated that race with kindness. Yet says the member of the government, this learned Attorney General "the people of Essex are opposed to the colored race," and he adduces in proof of his opinion, that they had subsequently elected one of these dismissed Magistrates as their Reeve, because he and they disliked the colored race.

He (Col. P.) could wish the Hon. gentleman would take a trip through Essex, he would see the invariable kindness with which the colored race are treated, and he (Col. P.) had no such feelings of antipathy towards them, but admired there struggle for freedom and could feel proud as an Englishman that the moment a slave touches the free soil of Britain or its dependences his chains are unrivitted, and he becomes disinthralled and free (hear hear) and he could assure the learned gentlemen that similar sentiments are entertained by the inhabitants of Essex generally who felt indignant that so foul a libel should have been cast upon them. Had the learned Attorney General, before uttering that libel looked at the criminal returns, he would have found that a very large proportion of the convicted for larceny and higher crimes, were colored persons—viewing this—viewing the base return, which had been made for kindness and hospitality shown to them, there certainly was a general feeling abroad, not only in Essex, but elsewhere, that if the Government choose to allow these men to escape into British territory and encourage large settlements of them here. The Crown had better appropriate the Manatoulan Islands to them, as their close proximity to others settling around and among the white inhabitants in the majority of cases was anything but pleasant. He believed his hon. friend the president of the council was desirous that these gentlemen should be restored to the Commission but he (Col. P.) had thought it a duty he owed to them and to himself—to the people of Sandwich, and the county of Essex, thus far to state before hon. gentlemen, the facts of the case, and to leave them to deal with it as they deem fit. In any event he felt sure that the public sympathy is and even has been on the side of these worthy Magistrates and will remain so.

In conclusion, he (Col. P.) would state that he was actuated by no other feeling than the honest wish, and aim that justice should be done however tardily to his deeply injured friends and neighbours Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodbridge. There was one very material point connected with this question and he (Col. P.) desired that the hon. President of the Council would point out to him and to the house, in what case these gentlemen had misinterpeted the statute—and to point out as he had already done some isolated decision upon some peculiar case, but to take the statutes as he (Col. P.) had done, and from them shew to the house and to the world in what point these Magistrates had erred. (hear hear) Let his hon. friend shew to him (Col. P.) that the statute under which those Magistrates had acted had been repealed, and he would at once withdraw the motion; but if he could not then he asked the hon. gentleman and the government to look at the long and faithful and upright and distinguished services of these gentlemen and to bear in mind the memorials of the Grand Jury, and of the leading men of Essex, praying that they may be reinstated. He (Col. P.) would urge upon the government to do what would only be an act of Justice, by restoring these gentlemen to the Commission from which they never ought to have been dismissed. (hear hear.)

PREAMBLE.

Whereas, it has pleased Colonel Prince, a member of the Legislative Council of this Province, in moving an address to His Excellency the Governor General (to restore to the commission of the peace, Messrs. Wilkinson & Woodbridge who were dismissed from the same for conniving at the rendition of Archy Lanton, a colored man, to the authorities of the United States) to use the following language relative to the colored citizens of this Province.

"That they are extremely demoralized." "repaying with ingratitude, with pilfering, theft, and other vices and crimes—the kindness they have received at our hands." "In his opoinion they should be kept separate, and not allowed to taint the atmosphere and corrupt white society, and he advised that a colony of them should be founded in the Manitoulin Islands or some other place." Language which for vituperation and prejudice against the colored man, can only be equalled by the most ignorant of mankind.

And, whereas, the said Colonel Prince is the last man in this Province, to speak so despangingly of the colored people; in as much as, during the rebellion of 1838, when he was in command of the troops in the western part of this Province, he walked arm in arm with colored men, and when his life was in danger for having (as he very justly did) executed without judge or jury, the rebels or border ruffians whom he fell in with or captured, it was colored men who guarded his person and household, not one of whom was ever a rebel, or traitor.—

And whereas, this said Colonel Prince owes his election to the distinguished position which he now holds, to the votes of colored men; and much of his earthly gains, has been accumulated from a lucrative practice of the law, among his colored clients,—

And, whereas, it has pleased Almighty God, to enlighten the understanding of British statesmen to give that boon to the colored man, which few other countries have given, namely: To be free as soon as his foot touches British soil, and fully enjoy all the rights and privileges of a citizen. Therefore, it ill becomes a petty colonial counsellor at his progress of enlightenment to advise the government—to colonize her citizens, on a barren island of sand in Lake Huron. They who have fought, bled, and died, to keep this beautiful county from the grasp of the iniquitous slave-holding and depotic republic adjoining us, to starve them out, which is only in keeping with the black hearted scheme of the American Colonization Society—which receives its impulses from the blood stained gold of the South. And for ought we know, "Southern gold" is doing its work of corruption and bribery with men of this Province in high places, to carry on this new scheme of colonization, degradation and kidnapping, to deter colored men from emigrating to this Province. Therefore:—

1st. Resolved, That the charges made by Colonel Prince, the self styled "model old English gentleman," against the general character of the blacks (as reported in the Daily Colonist of the 10th inst), are treacherous and false in the extreme, and that the disgusting and despotic language used in making those charges, whether induced by bribes of southern gold, or a bad excited spirit did so "taint the atmosphere" of the Legislative Council, as to cause several ladies to withdraw from the Council Chambers.

2nd. Resolved, That we, the colored citizens of the city of Toronto, do cast back into the teeth of Colonel Prince, the foul imputations contained in his speech, as a slander of our character as citizens, calculated to foster prejudices against us and to degrade us,

3rd. Resolved, That we will resist by every means in our power, any invasion of our rights as citizens; and will hold up to public scorn and contempt, all such panders to American prejudice against color.

4th. Resolved, That we recommend to the constituents of Colonel Prince, that they request him to resign his seat in the Legislative Council immediately, as being morally unfit to represent them, and as exhibiting a pusillanimousness toward the colored people, without a parallel in the legislative proceedings of this province, not excepting the resolutions of the notorious Larwill.

5th. Resolved, That, it is the opinion of this meeting, that the colored people throughout this Province should unite in the expression of a most decided detestation of both Prince and Larwill, who have shown themselves as more despotic demagogues, and among the bitterest enemies of the colored man, and should set the seal of condemnation upon all disposed so to act.

6th. Resolved, That we return our heartfelt thanks to His Excellency the Governor General and his constitutional advisers, for the promptness with which they acted in defending our rights by dismissing Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodbridge; which will, no doubt, deter others from doing likewise. And they will ever hold a prominent place in our memory.

7th. Resolved, That we will ever hold dear the flag which gives us protection of life, liberty and property; and we pledge ourselves to Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, to be ever ready at a moment's warning to defend the country of our adoption, at all hazards.

8th. Resolved, That we tender our sincere thanks to Mr. Garret, for the prompt action he took in laying before His Excellency the Governor, the case of the man Lanton.

9th. Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolutions be forwarded to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, His Excellency the Governor General, and the members of the Executive Council of this Province.

It was then moved and seconded that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Colonist, Provincial Freeman. Frederick's Douglass's paper, and the Globe, which was amended by striking out the Globe.

Carried.

Moved and seconded—That, whereas this meeting is of the opinion, that the colored people of this Province are under continued and renewed obligations to the proprietors of the Town Colonist for the dignified, out-spoken and disinterested course pursued by their paper from time to time, in favor of our sufferings—Therefore, resolved, that this meeting do recommend that press and paper as worthy of the confidence and patronage of the colored people; and likewise do earnestly urge that they patronize them as much as possible.

Carried.

To the Editor of the Colonist

DEAR SIR,—Your valuable paper of yesterday has afforded me a rich treat and not a little fun in the report of an indignation meeting of "the colored citizens" of Toronto, held for the purpose of censuring me. Perhaps I ought not to notice their proceedings—perhaps it would be more becoming in me to allow them to pass at once into the oblivion which awaits them; but as it is the fashion in this country not unfrequently to assume that to be true which appears in print against an individual, unless he flatly denies the accusation, I shall, at least, for once, condescend to notice these absurd proceedings. They deal in generalities, and so shall I. They denounce me unheard of Toronto I know little or nothing; no doubt, some are respectable enough in their way, and perform the inferior duties belonging to their station tolerably well. Here they are kept in order—in their proper places—but then "proceedings" are evidence of their natural conceit, their vanity, and their ignorance; and in them the cloven foot appears and evinces what they would do, if they could. I believe that in this city, as in some others of our Province, they are looked upon as necessary evils, and only submitted to because white servants are so scarce. But I now deal with these fellows as a body, and I pronounce them to be, as such, the greatest curse ever inflicted upon the two magnificent western counties which I have the honor to represent in the Legislative Council of this Province; and few men have had the experience of them that I have. Among the many estimable qualities they possess, a systematic habit of lying is not the least prominent; and the "colored citizens" aforesaid seem to partake of that quality in an eminent degree, because in their famous Resolutions they roundly assert that during the Rebellion "I walked arm and arm with colored men"—that "I owe my election to the votes of colored men"—and that I have accumulated much earthly gains," as a lawyer, among "colored clients." Well! Lies! are the only terms I can apply to such assertion that one company of blacks did belong to my contingent battalion, but they made the very worst of soldiers, and were, comparatively speaking, unsusceptible of drill or discipline, and were conspicuous for one thing only, rapid scampering in the rear of one of our oldest Colonels, under a mistaken notion that he was hereby doing his duty. But I certainly never did myself the honor of "walking arm in arm" with any of the colored gentlemen of that distinguished corps, and as to my election I owe it, very few blacks voted for me. I never canvassed them, and hence, I supposed they supported as a body, my opponent. They took compassion upon "a monument of infured innocence," and they sustained the monument for a while, upon the pedestal of their influence, and so long as it lasted, well, and the fall proved that such influence was merely ephemeral, and it sank into insignificant nothingness, as it should, and I hope ever will do; or God help this noble land, dear Blackies! Be not so bold or so conceited, or so insolent hereafter, I do beseech you.

Then how rich I have become among my "colored clients!" I assert, without the fear of contradiction, that I have been the friend —the steady friend of our Western "Darkies" for more than twenty years; and amidst difficulties and troubles innumerable, (for they are a litigious race), I have been their adviser, and I never made twenty pounds out of them in that long period! The fact is that the poor creatures had never the ability to pay a lawyer's fee.

It has been my misfortune, and the mis fortune of my family to live among those Blacks, (and they have lived upon us,) for twenty-four years. I have employed hundreds of them, and, with the exception of one (named Richard Hunter), not one has ever done for us a week's work. Again, I have taken them into my service, have fed and clothed them, year after year, on their arrival from the States, and in return I have generally found them rogues and thieves, and a graceless, worthless, thriftless, lying set of vagabonds. That is my very plain and very simple description of the Darkies as a body, and it would be endorsed by all the Western white men with very few exceptions.

I have had scores of their George Washingtons, Thomas Jeffersons, James Madisons, as well as their Dinahs, and Chloes, and Lavinias, in my service, and I understand them thoroughly, and I conclude the whole batch (old Richard Hunter excepted) in the category above described. To conclude, you "Gentlemen of Color," East and West, and especially you "colored citizens of Toronto," I thank you for having given me an opportunity to publish my opinion of your race. Call another indignation meeting, and there make greater fools of yourselves than you did at the last, and then "to supper with what appetite you may."?

Believe me to remain,
Mr. Editor,
Yours very faithfully,
JOHN PRINCE.

Toronto, 26th June, 1857.

P. S.—I think it proper to allude to the case of Messrs. Wilkinson and Woodbridge, of whom the Darkies' resolutions make mention, and who were so improperly and so unjustly dismissed from the commission of the peace. Those two magistrates did their duty—they acted upon a statute which has never been repealed, and they were dismissed for not having acted upon a statute which did not touch the offence charged—Horse Stealing! However, there is some consolation in reflecting that the black rascal whom they caused to be arrested was tried and convicted of the crime charged, and will luxuriate for six years yet to come in the State Prison of Ohio. It is believed (and I believe it to) that the "monument" had much to do in influencing the Executive against those worthy magistrates.

ELECTION OF BISHOP.

The clergy and lay delegates met in Saint-Paul's church, London Canada West, on the ninth of July inst. at 10 o'clock A. M. for the purpose of electing a Bishop for the Western Diocese, when the Reverend Mr. Cronyn was elected. The church was filled by a crowd of ladies, and great anxiety was manifested by all present as to the result of the Election. After the service, some time was lost in arranging for the coming ballot, after which His Lordship the Bishop addressed a few words to those present stating that the same committee of scrutineers that had been appointed yesterday, would hold their offices for to-day. He took this opportunity of stating that he had received a document signed by some respectable gentlemen against the names of two Reverend gentlemen being placed on the synod. This matter had come before the meeting of the Synod yesterday and had been enquired into when it was determined that these two gentlemen had a right to be present. At the same time he thought that it would have been more delicate if those two gentlemen had retired voluntarily, but as the decision of the synod had been arrived at it could not be altered. The names of the lay-delegates and clergymen comprising the Synod, were then called over, the clergymen by the Rev. Mr. Geddes, and the lay-delegates by Dr. Bovell.

The balloting then commenced at about half-past 11 o'clock. A table was placed on each side of his Lordship who occupied his former place in front of the Communion table; on each table was a small black box into which each person according as he was called up dropped a card on which was written the name of the candidate for whom he intended to vote. A committee of scrutineers consisting of 4 clergymen was station ed at the ballot box. The clergymen were first called up; the Rev. Mr. Bethune and the Rev. Mr. Cronyn were seated beside the ballot box for clergymen. After the clerical vote had been given, the lay delegates were called up by townships—each township giving one vote for either candidate; but one clergyman was absent, Rev. Mr. Johnson, from Lake Simcoe. The lay delegates from Dereham, Norwich, or Otterville could not appear, and therefore did not vote. The ballot was closed in an hour. The clerical ballot box was then handed to his Lordship who unlocked it and handed it over to the clerical scrutineer's committee to count over the votes; the lay ballot box was also handed over to a lay committee of scrutineers. His Lordship the Bishop requested all the clergy and lay delegates to join in silent prayer for a few minutes before the decision was declared. After some time his Lordship read out the following figures—Cronyn, clergymen 22; Cronyn laymen 24; total 45; Bethune, clergymen, 20; Bethune, laymen 10; total 30; majority for Cronyn, 15.

We propose next week giving a more detailed account of the proceedings, and regret that our space will not permit of our doing so this.

We have been favoured with a spicy set of resolutions, purporting to have been adopted at a mass meeting held in Windsor on the 10th inst.: wherein great indignation at Colonel Prince is attempted to be shown. As we have already occupied our columns this week with so much coloured matter, it is out of our power to lay them before the public; although they would be interesting as a fair specimen of impertinence and blackguardism, and if came rumour speaks correctly, a certain individual, who has of late taken so extraordinary an interest in the coloured race, has had more to do in getting up this "indignation meeting" than perhaps he would like the white portion of his constituency to be aware of. There are the resolutions also, from a meeting strongly of "injured innocence" that one cannot help believing that a certain wire puller of the Essex negro champion has spent many a sleepless and weary night of toil in their compilation, and closited side by side with the Champion editor, has, no doubt, racked his brains in the hope of producing something that would gain at the next election a few coloured votes for the negro advocate. Hard times indeed are these, when such means are resorted to, to obtain the support of a few ignorant individuals, and those too, who were so indignantly spoken of as having cast their votes in favor of Col. Prince at the last election, but who are now so eagerly sought after, to hold up the tot tering monument.

The style in the composition of these resolutions altogether shows strongly the venom of a defeated opponent, and as it is well known that the persons who were appointed as a committee to draft the resolutions and address in answer to the letter of Colonel Prince, which appears in to-day's paper, are unable even to write their own names, there can be no doubt at all, that the assistance of some half white fellow was called in to act as scribe for their sombre majesties. All we can say is, that we wish the champion and his colour loving tools every joy in their swell fit handsome and successful completion of writing abuse against Col. Prince or the two Magistrates that received a bribe of Southern Gold.

A number of Wolves have been seen prowling about in the neighborhood of Sandwich within the last week and have given no small degree of annoyance to the farmers.

Apportionment of the Legislative School Grant of Upper Canada, For the year 1857.

Circular to the Clerk of each County, City, Town and Village Municipality in Upper Canada.

SIR,—I have the honor to transmit herewith, a certified copy of the apportionment for the current year of the Legislative School Grant to each City, Town, Village and Township in Upper Canada. This apportionment will be payable at this office to the agent of the treasurer of your Municipality, on the 1st of July, provided that the School Accounts have been duly audited, and together with the Auditors' and other reports, have been transmitted to the Department.

I am happy to inform the Council of your Municipality, that I have been enabled, through the liberality of the Legislature, to add a considerable sum to the apportionment of this year; I have, moreover, appropriated a few hundred pounds from the Poor School Fund, and divided it among those new and thinly settled Counties where the ordinary legislative and municipal grants have not been sufficient to enable Trustees to sustain the Schools during the school year.

The statistics of school population, upon which the present year's apportionment is based, have been carefully corrected and revised in this Department. Many inequalities in the apportionment of last year have been removed, and all parts of the Province share in the grant upon equal terms, and in accordance with the demands made upon each locality for school accommodation and instruction.

I have not deducted the apportionment to the Roman Catholic Seperate Schools from each individual City, Town, and Township, as was done in 1855, but I have reserved a special sum from which to make an apportionment direct to each School having a claim upon the fund. This is a more equitable and satisfactory mode of apportioning the grant, and it is one which, while it provides the legal apportionments to Seperate Schools, does not so directly and materially lessen the resources of those Municipalities in which these Separate Schools happen to exist, as has been done in past years.

I trust the exertions and liberality of your Council will be increased in proportion to the augmentation of the School Grant to your Municipality, and the growing necessity and importance of providing for the sound and thorough education of all the youth of the land.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient Servant.

WANTED!!!

500 CORDS of WOOD wanted at the Sandwich STEAM MILL

A BY-LAW.

To impose a duty on Hawkers and Pedlars. [Passed 28th January, A. D. 1854.

I. WHEREAS by an Act passed during the last Session of the Provincial Parliament, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain Duties of Excise, so far as regards Upper Canada, and to vest certain powers in the Municipal authorities of that part of the Province," it is amongst other things enacted, that the Municipal Council of any county or city in Upper Canada shall have full power and authority to make By-Laws for regulating and governing Hawkers and Pedlars, and for requiring any such person to take out a License from such officer of the Municipality as shall be designated in such By-Law.

II. Be it enacted, by the Warden and Councillors of the Municipal Corporation of the County of Essex, in Council assembled, by virtue of and under "The Municipal Corporations Act of 1849." That no Hawkers and pedlars, and other trading persons, going from place to place, or travelling, in any way whatever for such purpose, or who have not become householders by permanent residence in any town or place within the said County of Essex, shall carry to sell, or expose or offer for sale any goods, wares or merchandise, without first taking out a License for such purpose.

III. Be it further enacted by the authority afores aid, that the Licenses hereinbefore mentioned shall be granted by J. H. Wilkinson, the County Clerk, upon a certificate from the County Treasurer, that such person has paid the amount of such License into his hands. And for every person applying for the same, the sum of £7 10s for double horse conveyances; the sum of £5 for single-horse conveyances; and the sum of £2 for foot-pedlars and Hawkers; and for any persons peddling or hawking in any other conveyance than above enumerated, the sum of ten pounds.

IV. Be it further enacted, by the autority aforesaid, That any person or persons who shall sell or carry to sell, or expose or offer to sell, any goods wares or merchandize without first having obtained a License therefor, shall be subject to a penalty of not less than one pound nor more than five pounds for every contravention of this By-Law, to be levied by warrant under the hand and seal of any Justice of the Peace of the County of Essex; and in default of sufficient distress, the party so convicted to be imprisoned in the common Gaol of the County of Essex for a period not exceeding twenty days.

V. Be it enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that all moneys received for Licenses, and all penalties and fees levied and collected under this By-Law, shall be paid into the Treasury of the County of Essex, which shall form part of the general funds of the County.

County papers copy for one month.

A Beneficent Discovery.

THE NOBLEST ACHIEVEMENT OF SCIENCE.

The iron horse, with its tireless strength, its pulses of vapor and its heart of flame, is a glorious exponent of the creative capacity of the human mind; and the metallic nerves through which intelligence courses over a continent, proved by every flash of thought which traverses them, that man possesses one attribute essentially godlike, the power to annihilate space and time. But vast and important as have been the results of making steam and lightning the common carrier and messenger of the world, the discovery by which weak or impure blood can be vitalized or restored to new vigor and purity, by means of internal and external remedies is of infinitely greater value. The resources of vegetable chemistry, as developed and applied by Thomas Holloway, have proved equal to this mighty task. His famous remedies impart to the stream of life a disinfecting principle which frees the system from all impure and poisonous elements. The powers of chemistry are almost beyond calculation, and as he has applied them to bear upon all the varieties of disease, in those invaluable vegetable compounds known as HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, they have compassed their highest and holiest object.

Steam, as the great motor, is after all but a subsidiary agent. Its usefulness consists, mainly, in conveying substantial benefits, with speed and certainty to the fields in which they are to operate. It is simply the bearer of blessings, not their originator. Of all the freight which it carries over land and sea, none is perhaps more so precious as Holloway's Remedies. It is scarcely a figure of speech to say, that whithersoever it conveys them, it flies "with healing on its wings."

Under the influence of the Ointment, the skin, however disfigured by eruptions or excrescences, becomes a tabula rasa, pure, spotless, and transparent; and this erasure of blemishes is not accomplished by driving back disease into the vital recesses of the system, but by neutralizing the morbid material which feeds it.

The Pills act upon the internal fluids and organs which secrete them on the same sanitary principle. They destroy the acrid particles subjected to their chemical action as infallible as an alkali neutralizes an acid; and at the same time impart a mild and constant electric action to the secretive and excretive machinery.

It would be repeating a familiar story to tell of the wide diffusion, the universal celebrity of these twin curatives. They have penetrated wherever civilization has penetrated. They are the medicines of every class, creed, and colour, on the face of the earth. The sanction of governments, the patronage of princes, the approval of all Christian nations, the gratitude of pagan millions, attest their worth. In fact, there is no region with which this country has any commercial intercourse, where Holloway would not find himself at home. Some estimate may be formed of the extent and variety of his foreign correspondence, from the fact that sixty corresponding clerks, of which number sixteen are accomplished linguists, are employed in conducting it. He is the centre of a SANITARY SYSTEM that belts the world.—London Morning Herald.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically purify the malady whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, suffering as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and the constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhœa	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone an l Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds,

 Sold at the Manufactories of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and 244 Strand, London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes at 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1 each.

☞ There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

N. B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box. v1n43

☞CAUTION!—None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernable as a water-mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each pot or box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicine or vending the same, knowing them to be spurious.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction on Wednesday, the

5th day of August next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereout, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

The Pleasure of Having Friends.

Oh, Friendship! dearly were the way,
And faint our hearts without thy stay;
For briskly move our pilgrim feet
To thy sweet footfall's measured beat,
And words, like dew distill'd.

When, travelling through the burning sand,
The desert wanderer sees at hand
The nodding palm-tree's plumy crest,
Hope cheers again his troubled breast,
And bears him on apace.

He almost hears the trickling sound
Of water welling from the ground,
He always feels the flickering shade
Fall from the palm-leaves overhead,
And soothe his fevered brow,

Thus sweet it is for one to know,
That, let it come to weal or woe,
His still may grasp a hearty hand,
Still drink new life from faces bland,
And lit with sunny smiles.

How to Lay out an Orchard.—First, stake out your whole orchard in parallel lines, at the distance the trees are to stand, both ways—leaving the necessary room, 15 feet at least, between the last rows and the lines of the fence for turning when cultivating, taking care to look over it again and see that the rows of the stakes are parallel to the fence lines, and straight in every lineal direction. The stakes thus must be perpendicular, as they are not only for regulating the distance between the trees, but as a guide and check in setting them out. Now having set the stakes four feet from the position the trees are to occupy—take your four foot measure, measure off from the stake to the point for the first tree—stick the stake up in line and dig round it. It will be moved, of course, to take out the second spit in depth. (I dig holes four shovels in diameter, and take out the bottom course with the spade.) Repeat this measurement on the same side and in line, till the whole are all made. Now the holes are ready and paralel to each stake. Now distribute the trees, a dozen or less at a time, to the holes. Then take the same measure to set the tho tree by from stake to stake; keep the tree in line the other way, by the eye, and so on till the orchard be complete and the trees all set—the trees still remaining as a check on the accuracy of the work. Now take your tying material—old cotton cloth in stripes will be soft and not chafe—and tie loosely around each tree. Next transfer the stakes to the trees, driving them on the side the wind most usually strikes—fix round the stake and the work is done. I have just adopted this course entire, and it seems to be effective and satisfactory.

Soft Soap.—Seventeen pounds of potash to twenty pounds of grease; boil the grease; put in two pails of scalding water, and stir it together; fill up the barrel next morning with cold water; stir it from time to time. It will be fit for use in three days.

A Recipe Worth one Thousand Dollars.—Take one pound of soda and half a pound of unslacked lime, put them in a gallon of water and let them boil twenty minutes; let it stand till cool, then drain off, and put it in a stone jug or jar. Soak your dirty clothes over night, or until they are well wet through, then wring them out and rub on them plenty of soap, and in one letter of clothes well covered with water add one teaspoonful of the washing fluid. Boil half an hour briskly, then wash them throughly through one suds, and rinse well through two waters, and your clothes will look better than by the old way of washing twice before boiling. This receipe is invaluable and every poor family in the land should try it. With a patent tub to do the little rubbing, the washer-woman might take the last novel and compose herself on the lounge, and let the washing do itself.

Use of Birds.—A Farmer near Lancaster, last year, in order to convince a neighbor of the usefulness of birds, shot a yellow bird in his wheat field, opened its crop, and found in it two hundred weevils, and but four grains of wheat, and in these four grains the weevils had already burrowed.

Remedy for Hog Cholera.—Salt, sulphur, charcoal—equal parts—in their food; table spoonful of the mixture twice each day. Keep the animal warm.

Mustard.—Every family needs a little mustard. It is good in several diseases, and it is quite agreeable, especially in the spring, as a seasoning for beef and pork. Now, don't go to the store to buy it, for quite probably you will purchase Indian meal a little mustard in it, if you do. Just raise it yourself. Select a little spot in a corner, and sow it, not too thick. When it is fairly up, thin it up so that the plants shall not stand less than one and a half feet apart. Watch the pod for harvesting when the pods turn of a light hue. Spread the tops where they will become very dry, before threshing; dry the seed afterwards. Grind in a common pepper mill.

New Things.—Always have some of them about you. A new strawberry plant will serve to begin with; a new variety of apples for grafting, may come along with it; a new variety of corn tried cautiously, will do no harm; a new corn planter or seed drill, to experiment with, will enlarge your ideas, whether you adopt it permanently or not. A new plow may be added, if a judicious and skillful friend has tried it, and says it will pay. A new axe, hoe, pruning-knife, or rake, may all be examined and adopted, if they are really good. All improvement is secured by engrafting the new on the old, carefully, yet boldly. You may loose sometimes, but you will loose more if you don't keep up with the world. Be careful that your brain is not among your idle tools. Keep head as well as hands busy

A Popular Delusion.—It is an error to suppose that a man belongs to himself. No man does. He belongs to his wife, or his children, or his relations, or his creditors, or to society in some form or other. It is for their especial good and behalf that he lives and works, and they kindly allow him to retain a certain per centage of his gains to administer to his pleasures or wants. He has his baby, and that is all, and even for that he is answerable to society. In short society is the master, and man is the servant; and it is entirely according as society proves a good or bad master, whether the man turns out a good or bad servant. —Punch.

For Sale!!!
A FIRST-RATE LOCATION
AND
DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,
IN THE BEAUTIFUL
TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit, in the County of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a POTASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on an enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood; it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large Brick Yard, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the West, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and peculiarly situated as a private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.; a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality, and which it is believed will be shortly constructed, will run through this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale concluded.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats
DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running immediately upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.
WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays
MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit every Sundays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of comfort and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will possess advantages never before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Boston, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis, which will enable them to forward merchandize with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Stevens, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of John Hosmer, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago

THIS LINE consists of the following First Class Propellers:

MONTGOMERY,	Capt. T. Nicholson.
GLOBE,	" Amos Frost,
ONTONAGON,	" A. Wilkins,
ADRIATIC,	" M. S. Lathrop
OGONTZ,	" W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY,	"

(New Propeller,)

Which will, during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Wisconsin and Hudson River, running from New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

The Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week; and having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property at Milwaukie and Chicago, via

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having no large facilities, showing an aggregate of over Five Thousand Tons Burthen, and being all new and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to shippers of Produce and Merchandize for the transport of Property.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimited - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - $25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been greatly enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in United States.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Folsom's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable Practical Accountants of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING,

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural twofold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mysteries, made such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false systems. Nature alone enables the student to acquire correct notions of accounts as embodied in actual practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. Terms involve the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, rather than more routine and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and so pushes on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the smallest Retail to the heaviest and most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces lengthy practical sets from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some special House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, Practical and Ornamental, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best Teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirhythmegraphic System will also be taught. This system, so popular and so much favor has been with actual men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirhythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

Daily Lectures on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Computation, Comercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affordings a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal having an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for many of his graduates.

Amherstburg, May, 1857.

To the Warden and Reeves of the County of Essex, in Council assembled:

The County Treasurer begs leave to Report,

That the accounts are closed and audited to the 31st March last, the end of the financial year, as usual. Showing a balance on the face of the Books, at that time, to the credit of the County, of £2974. 7. 6½, since when, there has been expended the sum of £839.19.0½ in current and other expenses connected with the new Jail and Court House, leaving the sum of £134.7.9. to pay the interest on the Debentures, £320.0.0. now due, and to meet the current expenses, till the Taxes are collected and paid in this fall.

I have made up the Statement of Non-Resident Taxes since 1850. Showing the amount assessed, the amount paid in, and the amount now due on each Lot, in Book from, one copy for each Municipality and one for the whole County—these, together with the Books of my office, which I have brought down, will show the Receipts and expenditures, by whom paid in, and to whom paid out since my appointment, and will, I imagine meet the object of the Resolution passed at your last Session; the labor being such, that I have barely been able to complete the Books in time for this Session; any explanation, which may be required, to understand them, I shall be most happy to afford at this, or at any other time, to the Reeves of the County or to any other person, therein:—

You will perceive that there is a large falling off in the fund obtained from Peddlers Licenses, only one license having been issued during the year 1856, which license has now run out; so that any person peddling at the present time in this County is liable to be fined in accordance with the provisions of your By-Law on that head:—

Since the last Session of the Council, one of my Sureties, Mr. Strong, having expressed a wish to be relieved from the responsibility, for reasons which I am entirely unable to explain, I have furnished a new Bond, giving four Sureties instead of two, which will be laid before you for your approval and which I am inclined to think you will find much more satisfactory.

The case of the late Fabien Parent which I brought to your notice at the last Session, has not been brought to a close, for reasons which will be explained before the Council.

With respect to the advertising the Wild Lands in arrear for Taxes, 5 years and upwards, I find there are not so many Lots as I anticipated and shall therefore, as there is plenty of time yet, wait your instructions, and in the mean time furnish you a Statement thereof.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

County Treasurer Essex.

To the Warden and Reeves of the County Council of the County of Essex:

Gentlemen,

Your Finance Committee beg to report for your information, that they have examined the Treasurer's accounts for the last financial year, ending 31st March last and found them correct, The Treasurer has also pursuant to the Resolution passed by the Council at its LAST SESSION, furnished a full statement respecting the non-resident Lands in the different Municipalities throughout the County with the amounts due and the amounts received on account thereof at different times, as it must have cost the Treasurer a great deal of extra labour and time in making such a statement out, your Committee would recommend that he be granted the sum of fifty pounds as a remuneration therefor.

Your Committee have made out an estimate of the current expenses for the present year annexed hereto and which with the sum of four hundred pounds for the payment of jurors and six hundred and forty pounds for interest upon Debentures, we recommend being adopted and levied:

Your Committee would recommend that from and after the first of January next, the Treasurer's accounts be kept in dollars and cents, or the decimal currency, and that a new set of books be furnished him, to enable him so to do.

That Mr. Askins account for shelves &c., placed in the Registrars office be paid.

That the prayer of the petition of Messrs Bratt and others, respecting the remission of the debt due by the late Fabien Parent, be granted and that the debt so far as the County of Essex is concerned be remitted to the widow, provided she pay all the Law costs, incurred in the matter.

That the Auditors' Report be adopted.

With references to Mr. Pinney's petition, your committee are of opinion that Mr. Turk should make application to the Municipality of the Township of Sandwich.

With reference to John Turk's petition, your committee are of opinion that Mr. Turk should make application to the Municipality of the Township of Sandwich.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

G. W. LEGGATT,
Chairman.

Committee Room,
20 July, 1857.

REPORT

Of the special Committee to whom was referred the equalization of the assessments for the year 1857.

Your Committee find upon a comparison of the assessment Rolls of the different Municipalities of the County, that assessors have adopted a different standard of valuation; and that in consequence some Townships do not contribute a just proportion towards the expenses of the County.

In the absence of other and better statistical information, your Committee have been guided in their judgment by the returns made by the assessors of the area of each Township in connection with the valuation of property shown on the Rolls, through the two past years. And they beg leave to recommend the adoption of the Schedule attached to this Report, as representing the fairest and most equitable basis upon which to allocate the taxes of the county for the present year.

Your Committee however strongly recommend that some steps should be taken at the present session of the council towards collecting the most authentic information in regard to the extent, condition and wealth, of each Municipality, respectively, for the use of the council at its next session, for equalization of assessments. They would suggest that Maps be procured of each Municipality, showing the area of the townships in acres, the quantity of Wild Land, cultivated land, and land incapable of cultivation, as also the roads opened, Mills, and other improvements. And for the procuring from the Government departments information, as to the exact area, population and wealth of each Municipality, as shown by census returns.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

S. S. MACDONNELL,
Chairman.

S. S. MACDONELL,
Chairman.

Committee Room,
July 1st 1857.

To the Warden and Reeves of the county of Essex, in council Assembled.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges, beg leave to report that the petition of Eaton and others is before them, and consider it unnecessary to take action on it, as your Committee understand, that the Township line between Malden and Colchester, to which petitioners refer, was staked out, by a competent surveyor some eight or nine years ago. Your Committee consider it needless to recommend the petitioners from Colchester and from Mears, and other's, to your consideration, as the By-Law to raise a certain sum for county purposes, provides for the evils complained of.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. H. Cunningham
Chairman.

To the Warden and Reeves of the County of Essex, in Council Assembled.

The Auditors for the County of Essex, have the honor to report that they have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, to the close of the Financial year 1856, and that they have found them correct

The balance, which could not be ascertained at the period of their last report, from circumstances then explained, the Auditors now find to be £974 7s 6½d in favor of the County, but, in consequence of certain disbursements for the current year having been made out of that balance by the Treasurer, the actual sum in his hands at the present time amounts to £134 7s 9d:—

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PAUL JOHN SALTER, } Auditors for the
P. H. MORIN, } County of Essex.

Auditor's Office.
29th July 1857.

To the Warden and Reeves of the county council of Essex.

Gentlemen,

We your Committee to whom was refered the bond handed to the Warden by the Treasurer, beg to state, that we are of opinion that it is insufficient inasmuch as the different sureties therein named are not jointly and severally held to the county, and the amount of the penal sum is too small. Your Committee would suggest that the Treasurer be bound in the sum of three thousand pounds, with two or more sureties (who shall be freeholders, holding unincumbered real estate in value equal to double the amount in which they are respectively bound) in fifteen hundred pounds each.

JOHN BRUSH,
Chairman.

Council Room,
2nd July 1857.

MONSTER DRUM.—Among other appliances which have been sought to augment the musical effects at the approaching Handel festival is a monster drum, the largest of its kind, as we are informed, that has been constructed. The committee having heard that a skin fit for a drum-head, of unparalleled size, was in the possession of Mr. Distin, the musical instrument maker, at once commissioned its construction, more as an experiment than with any certain conviction of its utility in the orchestra. The result exceeds their most sanguine expectations. The tone is full and resounding, and more resembles that of a deep bourdon organ pipe, both in quality and continuance, than that obtained from an instrument of percussion. The vibration continues after the drum has been struck for nearly a minute, and for a longer period its pulsations are distinctly perceptible at a short distance. The diameter is between six and seven feet: the frame is said to contain 300 pieces of mahogany, adroitly joined in a manner best adapted to secure strength and freedom from warping. The instrument is as much under tuning control as a smaller drum. It more resembles a tambourine in its external form than an ordinary drum, having but one head, this form being said to allow greater freedom of vibration. The maker is Mr. Distin, of Cranbourne street.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Delicate females, who suffer from those peculiar disturbances of the system incident to the gentler sex, will find in these Pills a safe remedy for all the functional disorder under which they may labor. Acting specifically upon the local irregularity, and generally upon the system, this comprehensive remedy will simultaneously remove the immediate cause of suffering, and invigorate all the bodily organs which have been affected by sympathy therewith. In the three most perilous phases of female existence, viz., the dawn of womanhood, the period of maturity, and what is termed "the change of life," the alternative and restorative properties of these Pills render them indispensable to the feebler sex.

NUPTIALS OF THE PRINCESS ROYAL AND PRINCE FREDERICK WILLIAM.—BERLIN, June 17.—The news has reached us from Windsor that January 13 of next year has been definitively fixed on for the nuptials of the Princess Royal and Prince Frederick William. Originally the Prince's own birthday, October 18 of this year, was selected for this event, probably by the young Prince himself, and subsequently the Princess's birthday, November 21, was decided on. This was a most fortunate choice, being the day on which she will complete her seventeenth year. Whatever may have been the reason for choosing the day now definitively fixed on, there is nothing left for their well-wishers but to congratulate the young couple that the day is definitively fixed at last, and to hope and trust that all auspicious influences may assist and mark that day for a long life of wedded happiness to look back to as its starting point.

TELEGRAPH ACROSS THE RIVER.—The subscription lists mentioned by us some time since, as being procured to lay across the river, to connect the telegraph lines in this State and Canada, was laid yesterday. It runs from either shore to Bell Isle where a connection is made by the usual poles, set across the island.

This afternoon we received the following dispatch from Mr. Balch the Operater in the Union Office in this city.

[illegible] day and found perfect. We are now in communication by telegraph with all points in Canada.

A NEW PLAN TO EXTINGUISH FIRES.—A writer in Hunt's Merchants Magazine suggests a new plan of extinguishing fires It is simply saturating the water of the fire engine with common salt and potash—both very cheap articles, and acting together to impregnate the wood, so that the flames cannot spread any further—i. e., the muriatic acid flies off, and the soda remains as a glazed surface. The suggester of this idea even goes on to say, that many a fire, which is within reach might be stopped without any engine, bischarging finely powdered clay, lime, or chalk, through a tube on the blaze.

THE SOUTHEN WHEAT CROP.—The New Orleans Picayune of the 13th ult. has the following:

"From every State of the southern country we have most gratifying accounts of the growing wheat crop. In the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Mississipi, Texas, and our own State, the promises of an abundant harvest were never better. Everywhere the crop is backward but vigorous and healthy. The recent genial weather is bringing it rapidly forward unless something now unforeseen occurs, to a rich and early harvest. It is probable, indeed, that the cold backward spring has actually been favorable to it, causing it to take firm root and to 'shoad,' as the farmers say.

A cattle drover from the far west, who came to New York a few days since was apprehensive of losing his carpet sack during the peregrinations about town, resorted to a mode of securing it that might be adopted with advantage by strangers who do not wish to patronize expensive hotels, and yet fear to trust strngers or cheap ones. He put his carpet-sack in pawn for a small amount, assured that thus it would be kept safely, and could be redeemed whenever he desired it.

NEW WHEAT IN CHICAGO.—The Chicago Democrat of Tuesday has the following gratifying announcement:

The first car-load of new wheat consisting of about two-hundred bushels, arrived in this city about 11 o'clock yesterday by the passenger train of the Illinois Central Railroad. It is from Messrs. Bennett & Scott, of Jonesborough, Union county, in this State, and was consigned to Messrs. Mather & Kellogg, one of our most enterprising produce and commission firms. It is a very fine sample of red winter wheat, and was much admired on change. It was immediately purchased by the old and extensive milling firm of Messrs. Gage & Hinsey, at $1,75 per bushel, who will immediately grind it for their customers.—Messrs. G. & H. are certain to make the first purchase of new wheat ever since they have been in the business. We believe we have had the pleasure of noting this fact yearly for the past fifteen or sixteen years.

THE FUNERAL OF MR MARCY AT Albany, on Wednesday, was one of the most imposing ever witnessed in that city. Ex-Presidents Van Buren and Pierce, ex-Governors Bouck, Fish, Hunt and Seward, and many other public men, attended. The display of military was very fine. The buildings in the streets through which the procession passed were draped with mourning, and signs of sorrow were visible on every house.

Late English papers says that Tennyson has in press new poems, the principal is one Tennyson's early favorites, King Arthur, being in fact a further contribution to his unfinished Epic," Morte d'Arthur." Mr. Alexander Smith has also a new poem in the press on the poetiuspects of town life.

Yesterday in the Superior Court a verdict was given against the Grand Trunk for £125 in a case in which Mr. Charles Heepe, an English gentleman, was plantiff, and the Grand Trunk Railway defendants. The plaintiff was one of the persons injured by the explosion of the Grand Trunk ferry-boat beteen Montreal and Longueuil on the 10th June of last year. He laid his damages at £1000, but the injuries he received do not seem to have been of a serious character.—Pilot.

We learn from the Detroit Advertiser that the steamer Ploughboy was seized by the Custom House officers, on Tuesday, for violation of the revenue laws, but nothing was proved against her, and she was liberated. One of the boat's crew had brought down from Goderich a few bags of grain without having entered it according to law, but it was shown that the Captain and other officers were entirely unconscious of this, and not aware of having committed any offence.

There are 573 Savings Banks in Great Britain and the deposites amount to £170,000,000.

Thieves Caught--$2500 Worth of Jewelry Recovered.

(From the Detroit Advertiser)

It will be recollected by some of our readers that about the 1st of June, a jewelry store in St. Louis, owned by S. C. & J. Jett was robbed of watches and jewelry to the value of about $10,000. We received private advices yesterday, chiefly from Michigan City, that the perpetrators of this bold and extensive robbery had been caught at that place. They are two young men about 18 or 20 years of age, named Henry Wilson and John Sullivan—the former of whom had, for a long time previous to the theft, been employed in the store. The circumstances of the arrest are as follows:—On Sunday morning last, the two young men came to the Jewel House, Michigan City, kept by Mr. L. W. Childs, and registered their names as Henry and Thomas Sullivan, differing slightly, it will be seen from their real names.

Soon after arriving one of them told the porter that he was very hard up, and offered to sell him a hat very little worn, and worth $5 for $1, which the porter bought, and the young man went immediately to a watch which he found open, and purchased another for $3. This circumstance, and the general appearance and actions of the young man excited the supicions of the landlord, and also of Capt. S. Packard, of Buffalo, who was stopping at the house, and they determined to watch them after this they saw one of them come down stairs from his room with a heavy gold watch in his pocket. Going down the street he found the door of a jewelry establishment open and the proprietor within, where he showed the watch and chains offering to sell them for $50, as he was hard up for money. The watch proved to be a very heavy gold one, worth at wholesale $275.

The jeweller who also suspected the fellows, told him he would take the watch in the morning, as all his money was then on deposit. The young man said he would call in the morning. While the two strangers were at dinner Mr. Childs and Packard determined to search their room. On doing so they found in their carpet bags twelve large heavy gold watches, estimated at a value of about $2,500, and three Colt's revolvers, loaded and ready for use. These they took to Capt. Packard's room and secured them. Coming out from dinner, the two men went to their room and soon descended to the office, informed the landlord that they had been robbed. He asked them of what they had been robbed, and they enumerated all the articles in the carpet bags. The ladlord said he would go up and see about it, and accordingly went up stairs with them. Before reaching their room door he espied peering from the coat pocket of each, the handle of a revolver, when he stopped short, saying he would not go into the room with those things in their possession. They must give them up. They finally took them from their pockets and passed them over to him.

They were both heavily loaded, and as soon as he had got them in his posession he informed the two youngsters that they were his prisoners. Said he had a telegraph despatch for them. They made no resistance, but were exceedingly flurried, and one begged to be let off. In their fright they revealed the fact that the watches, were stolen and mentioned the name of Jett, the jeweller, from whom they had been taken. The landlord happened to remember having seen a reward offered for $500 for the arrest of Wilson. On questioning them they gave their real names as above, and revealed these facts:—

That Wilson had been employed for a considerable time in Jett's store, and that it was his business at night, to put the watches and jewelry in a large safe and lock them up. He had yielded to the temptation to steal, and had got Sullivan to join him, and carry off the booty. They had taken as many of the most costly watches in the store as they could carry away, and those not found upon them when arrested, they had secreted.

Of their movements from the time of the theft until they reached Michigan City, our informant did not know. Early on Monday morning Mr. Childs telegraphed to Mr. Jett, and received an immediate answer, telling him to hold on the prisoners, and he would take the next train for Michigan city. so that by this time he is probably with them at that place. Wilson is an American and Sullivan an Irishman, and both are described as young men of genteel appearance.

A SAD DISAPPOINTMENT.—THE LATE CALAMITY.—Never in our life have we been called upon to record so heart-rending and distressing a case of disappointment as the one we are now about to relate. Some two years ago, a very respectable young man by the name of Douglas, emigrated from Scotland to this country, to seek out a home, not only for himself, but for a beloved father and mother, with some seven or eight children brothers and sisters of his. After arriving safely in this country, being without means and having a liberal education, he engaged at a store at Milbank, Mornington, and subsequently in a School, some four miles from that place. By this means he, after a time, succeeded in sending home a sufficient amount to enable bringing out his beloved parents and family to his adopted country, and also to erect and furnish a comfortable house most for their reception. And whilst engaged in these commendable acts, he learns with great gratification by the arrival of a friend from his native country, that his father had safely started, and are on their way in high spirits to enjoy the labors of their beloved and grateful son. But, alas! alas! just at the moment when he expected to hear of their safe and happy arrival on the shores of America, the heart-rending intelligence is conveyed to him that all but a little brother of 14 years, have perished on board the ill-fated Montreal, just when they were big with expectation, and when their greatest hopes were on the eve of being realized; in fact, at the moment when they thought all was safe. The effect this intelligence produced on the mind of young Douglas can be more easily imagined than described. The shock produced was so great that he fell senseless to the ground. The bereaved young man is certainly entitled to at least the sympathy of his friends and the neighborhood in general in which he resides, and is to be hoped that an effort —such a one as the extreme nature of the affective dispensation demands — will be made to reconcile the young man to the will of an overruling and all-wise Providence.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, JULY 23, 1857.

A number of the friends of Col. the Hon. John Prince on Monday last, in consideration of their esteem for him, and their appreciation of his conduct, as their Representative in the Legislative Council, called upon him to present an address, a copy of which we give below. The address was read by Thos. Woodbridge Esq., Reeve of Sandwich, after an appropriate speech, as follows:—

SIR,

We have hitherto refrained from coming to offer you our congratulation on your return to the bosom of your family, knowing full well that you required rest, after your arduous and incessant labours in the Legislative halls. We now come to welcome you home, and express to you our heartfelt and sincere happiness, at seeing you again amongst us well and hearty, we have watched with unbounded satisfaction your career in the Upper House, and apart from the true personal friendship we entertain for you, feel proud of you as our representative —and pray to the Almighty that he may spare you long to fill the high Station to which you are an ornament; that he may in his wisdom, see fit always to guide your steps, and shower all blessings on yourself and family, is the prayer of your sincere friends.

Col Prince in his usual happy style, spoke at some length, reviewing his conduct in the House, as the Representative of Essex and Kent, and thanked his friends for the compliment that they had paid him in giving him this friendly welcome home.

The following is his written reply.

MY FRIENDS,

A thousand thanks for your visit, and for your address.

The only pledge I gave you before you returned me as your councillor, for the Western Division was, that I would serve you according to the best of my ability.

I am proud to learn from you that in your opinion, I have recesmed that pledge.

I will continue to do my duty, as your councillor, and I know that I shall give you satisfaction, but not half the satisfaction that I entertain at your kindness, welcoming me home in the way you have done.

Believe me ever to remain,

Your faithful friend,

JOHN PRINCE.

We have observed in the British Canadian of last week, the publication of a certain address to Colonel Prince, from the coloured people of Windsor. In that address John Alexander Wilkinson and Thomas Woodbridge, Esquires, are designated as parties, who in their capacities as Justices of the Peace, kidnapped a negro, and delivered him back to slavery. at the price of gold.—A more infamous libel against those worthy Magistrates was never published, and the publishers of it deserve prosecution, and the punishment, the severe punishment, which must and assuredly would follow the certain conviction of the libeller. But the character and reputation of these gentlemen rest upon too sure and solid a foundation of respectability, to need any vindication in a court of law; and all who know them are well assured that there is not one word of truth in the accusation made against them by their malicious and vindictive libeller, against whom they never did or wished to do one particle of wrong or one atom of injury. It would be beneath them to notice the slander.

MAILS ON TIME.

The Mail left Suspension Bridge at six o'clock. on Monday evening, last, and arrived at Windsor at 5 o'clock P. M., on Tuesday, just 23 hours on the road, being at the extraordinary speed of 9 miles per hour —fast time for the conveyance of Her Majesty's Mails in Canada.(!)

The cholera is raging violently at St. Petersgurgh, the deaths exceeding seventy daily.

From A New York Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 12, 1857.

THE ALDERMANIC INVITATION TO THE GREAT EASTERN.

The abjectly fawning resolutions of the New York Board of Aldermen—lauding English enterprise, and so forth—and that special messenger sent to England to set forth the merits of New York harbour, are really too good. When steam transatlantic navigation was in its childhood (1842), the city of New York refused Mr. Cunard a dock suitable to his steamers; he had to transfer himself to more hospitable Boston. To this day he shows his sense of the illiberal treatment he then received, by starting his second line from Jersey City. In 1853, the Corporation of this city gave John Mitchel the honor of a public reception; yet, in 1857, this Corporation falls at the feet of an English company, begging that company not to snub the city so cruelly as to send its monster steamship to that little upstart, Portland. "The contract is funny. I hope Portland will draw the prize, and this city be left with what it deserves—the blanks.

AMERICAN LINERS vs. BRITISH STEAMERS.

The New York Commissioners of Emigration smell a rat. The liners are lying idle at the docks. Freights are at their lowest—shipbuilding at a standstill; yet foreign steamers increase and multiply. Here is the distressing fable, showing that this "young, progressive" nation is getting behind the age, while the "effete" nations of Europe are going ahead:—

Passengers landed at Castle Garden, from sailing vessels and steamers, from January 1, 1856, to June 30, 1857.

The effete and corrupt city of Hamburg can boast of eleven steamships arrivals at this American port; the "Young Hercules" can only show two! The "Bloody Britishers" show forty-five; and even little Belgium, seven. The Commissioners of Emigration omit to state another fact, which is also to the point. The robberies are not punished, the violence unchecked, which passengers suffer on board American ships have discredited them so much on the continent of Europe that they have lost their continental passenger traffic, which is now performed by Hamburg or Bremen sailing ships. Not only, therefore, have American steamers been pushed aside by British and other European steamers—not only have American sailing packets given way to the same agencies, but in the sailing department German packets have replaced American.

NEW YORK, July 14, 1857.

In my last I gave you a small account of the doings of the "Fourth." On the evening of the 15th the "Dead Rabbits" again made themselves visible. The barricades were erected on Bayard street, and the Bowery, corner of Bayard, was once more crowded with spectators: but the rioters this time "opened out" on Centre street (in the vicinity of the Tombs) which was likewise barricaded. Again the bricks, stones, pieces of iron, &c., flew in all directions, and once more the bullets whistled through the air; and, as on the previous evening, missiles of all kinds showered down from the housetops, the parties thereon converting chimnies into means of warfare. The riot lasted three hours, when the military were at length called in to restore order. Many were wounded, some mortally.

Shortly after this occurrence, while marching through the Bowery, a party of men were observed drawing a heavy lumber waggon, and in which, upon examination, the party having fled at the appearance of military, was found an eight-pound howitzer! The "Dead Rabbits" are known to have quite an armory of their own in the Sixth Ward, and yet no effort is made to dispossess them.

While this scene was going on in Centre street, another was "going off" on Second Avenue. A party of libertines, having some trifling grievances to redress, had the boldness to stop the street cars, to assault the conductors and passengers, and to demand of them pay for the privilege of passing on. A model toll-gate indeed to be erected in the heart of the city! At first their demands were light, but they kept rising in amount and growing still more abusive until hearing of the approach of a body of police, they made good their retreat.

The most painful feature of the riot on the evening of the 4th, was the death of a young man named William Pentenay, who while witnessing the scene from the second story window of 78 Bayard street, received a bullet in his forehead—the ball passing through his head, lodged in the casing of the window. The deceased was a native of England, and resided on Hudson Street.

Mayor Wood, notwithstanding his many defeats, is still as obstinate as ever. He continues to advise the aldermen to keep possession of the police-stations, &c., predicts (to use his own words) "a d—d big fight in the matter yet," as if there had not been fighting enough already, and says "that he will show the people that the new commissioners are not competent to preserve the peace of the city." Ominous words, indeed, to proceed from the lips of the chief magistrate of the metropolis.

The Supreme Court has sustained the Governor in his appointment of the Street Commissioner. The Mayor's appointee, however, refuses to hand over the books, papers, &c., until forced to do so by further legal process. His case will no doubt be promptly attended to. What a highly favoured people the taxpayers of the city are!

The Hudson's Bay Company.

(From the Leeds (English) Mercury June 23)

The reasons why the troops were—we hope we must not say, are—to be sent a round of 2,900 miles have been given by Sir Geo. Simpson to the Governor General, and by his Excellency sent to the Canadian Legislature. The principal is that "The Hudson's Bay Company upon whom devolve the duty and expense of transporting the troops, and who, it may be assumed, possesses the very best information connected with their territory, have decided on adopting from Canada by Hudson's Bay as the only practicable one. In the year 1846, when troops were sent to Red River, the same route was adopted after very careful consideration."

This reasoning might have been good in 1846 when there were no railroads in Canada, no ship canal to Lake Superior, and no steam ships on that lake; but will not serve in 1857, when the city of Superior, 230 miles from the settlement, can be reached by steam in seventy hours from Collingwood, or eighty from Detroit, at a cost of about £2 for each person returned to his residence about eight o'clock, bringing a quantity of gold and silver; that he told her it was Little's money, and that he had killed him. She saw him burn a pocket-book, and also his cravat; that she saw him cover with paint the blood-stains on his clothes, and that he told her, he had made his escape through the roof, after committing the murder, She assisted to conceal the money, and she further stated that the bag of silver found was Spollen's, and the bag was placed in the trunk by Spollen; that the hammer found was Spollen's, and believed the razor also, as he appeared very nervous the day it was found, and said he had thrown it in with the case on, and if the case was discovered, it would, no doubt, be identified. She further stated that she knew where the money was concealed, and would show the police the place.

Subsequently, Superintendent Guy accompanied the woman, and found between two walls, within the precints of the railway terminus, a large portion of the missing money, consisting of gold, bank notes, and silver. The notes, from the damp, were nearly destroyed.

Amongst the money found were several pieces of paper, which were identified by Mr. Chamberlain as having been taken from the cash-box of the office on the night of the murder. On one piece of this paper he recognized Mr. Little's name in his own hand-writing. The key of Mr. Little's office is stated to have been thrown into the river Bradeghue; and for the purpose of discovering the key Sergeant Craven and a number of workmen were busily engaged in searching the portion of the stream which runs through the garden of the North Union Work-house, up to a late hour yesterday evening, but without success.

From the time the prisoner was placed in Frederick lane station-house up to the time his name was placed in the calendar, he was unconcious of his wife having given information against him, and up to the present he is not aware of the arrest of his son.

On Thursday night, the prisoner was brought down from the room which he occupied in Frederick-lane station-house, when he was placed on the office sheet, charged by Mr. Superintendent Guy with the willful murder of George Samuel Little, on the 13th of November last, by striking him several blows on the head with a blunt instrument, and cutting his throat with a razor.—The prisoner was then charged with stealing the sum of £350, the property of the Midland Great Western Railway Company.—While this charge was being preferred, the wife of the prisoner was present, and seemed to be much affected. She said, addressing him, "Confess your guilt, you unfortunate man; what I have done was to save your soul, and that you may repent of your crime." On the charge being read for him, he only said, "I deny it." He was then led back to his cell.

The Dublin Post of Thursday evening states that Spollen, the father, is in custody in Frederick-lane station, and the son is in custody in Chancery-lane. Spollen's wife is also in custody. There was no public investigation held in the police office on that day; but the police authorities were prosecuting their inquiries with great vigilance and activity, and it is stated that, without producing the wife as a witness, a chain of collateral and circumstential evidence is in course of preparation. There is no charge against the son as a principle in the murder, but it is expected that he will become a material witness.

Dublin, Friday, June 26.—Nothing new to be communicated to the public. It is stated that the Crown will bring up Spollen this day on the charge of murder; if so, the case will be held at chapel street police office.

The Hamilton Spectator says that the names of persons who have visited Townsend have been registered in a book kept by the gaoler at Cayuga. Three hundred and seventeen had been to see him up to to the 30th of June. Of these 107 seem to have had more or less acquaintance with Townsend's features; 74 said the prisoner was not he, 3 said he was, and 10 were doubtful.

The Broadstone Murder.

The Dublin Mail of the evening of Wednesday, the 24th of June, announces that after several weeks spent in fruitless inquiry —after over and over again declaring that the murderer was well known, and ere 24 hours elapsed he would be in custody —now after the lapse of six months, the murder having been committed so far back as the 13th of November, an arrest has been made, and one person at all events, a painter named Spollen, stands charged with perpetrating that atrocious murder. The evidence upon which Mr. Spollen was that morning arrested was that of his own wife, which being illegal, will require other evidence to sustain the charge. Spollen was employed it appears, as a painter in the office of the Midland Railway, and his wife's information is to that effect. She swears that Spollen painted Mr. Little's room a few days before the murder. She declares that on the night of the murder, Spollen returned to his residence about eight o'clock, bringing a quantity of gold and silver; that he told her it was Little's money, and that he had killed him. She saw him burn a pocket-book, and also his cravat; that she saw him cover with paint the blood-stains on his clothes, and that he told her, he had made his escape through the roof, after committing the murder, She assisted to conceal the money, and she further stated that the bag of silver found was Spollen's, and the bag was placed in the trunk by Spollen; that the hammer found was Spollen's, and believed the razor also, as he appeared very nervous the day it was found, and said he had thrown it in with the case on, and if the case was discovered, it would, no doubt, be identified. More Lynching--Two Men Hung in Jones Co.

From Mr. Jackson, a resident of Cascade in this county, we learn the particulars of some proceedings of Vigilance Committees of the counties of Jones, Jackson and Linn. Between Monticello and Anamosa there resided a Dr. Long and his brother, who had fallen under the suspicions of the community as persons engaged in horse stealing operations.

On Friday night the Vigilance Committee arrived at Long's, and captured the brother and another person charged with similar offenses, and hung them. Dr. Long was informed of the approach of his enemies in time to make his escape, and fled toward Dubuque. In passing through Cascade he informed a confederate named Parrot, a resident of the place, of his danger; a guard was raised, and the citizens resolved that the lynchers should not effect their purpose.

On Saturday night two strangers rode into Cascade from the south, reconnoitered the town, stayed around a short time, saying but little and transacting no business, and finally departed as they came. They were supposed to be scouts of the advancing army of Regulators, and as the latter did not make their appearance, it is supposed they thought the town too much aroused to permit of success in securing Parrott.

We believe that up to this time there have been nine persons hung by the Vigilance Committees in Jackson, Jones, Clinton and Cedar counties.—Where this is going to end is hard to say. The Sheriff of Clinton Co. has addressed a letter to the Governor, stating that he has in his hands warrants for the arrest of the persons who hung Bennet Warren, on the 15th ult, that he is informed a very large combination has been formed, banded together by agreement or oath to execute similar outrages upon other persons, and to protect and defend any of their members who may be attempted to be dealt with by law, and that the same combination is supposed to number about two thousand persons in Jackson and the adjoining counties.

The Montreal Gazette learns that Sir William Logan has received a note from Sir R. Murchison, stating that it is his intention to come to the Meeting of the American Scientific Association, to be held in that city on the 12th August. He will come by the St. Lawrence route by the Canadian line, taking the Indian on her way trip out. In this he acts on the advice of Sir William, notwithstanding that he states some of his friends endeavored to dissuade him on account of the "slowness" of our steamships and the length of time they take. He desires to see the magnificent scenery of the lower St. Lawrence. Sir William stats the Geological Society of London, will send Mr. Hamilton, one of its ex-President, to represent it in Montreal.

What the Authorities Propose to do to secure the Peace of this City.

Quite a warm discussion has taken place as to the remedies to prevent armed conflict between bands of ruffians in the streets at noon-day. The only plan agreed upon is to close all the grog-shops on Sunday. This doubtless is good as far as it goes, but while it will be an annoyance to hundreds of the peaceable, it is but little hindrance to the others. The authorities also have armed the Police with revolvers, and given orders to the Military to fire low and each soldior to aim at his man, whereupon the Times comments as follows:—

The wretched "Dead Rabbits" and "Atlantic Guards," et hoc genus omne, poor, ignorant, depraved, scoundrels, as they evidently are, are entitled to something more at the hands of the State than a scarcity of whiskey, and volleys of musketry. They have grown up, or assembled in our midst, whether with our sanction or without our sanction matters not, with strong passions, abundant animal spirits, and an intense craving for excitement. These are all things which, properly regarded, may be turned to the advantage and not to the detriment of the community. These men need excitement as much as any of us. The gratification which their wild untrained natures find in strong drink and street-fights, richer and more fortunate men find in the theatre, in hunting, in music, painting, reading and the society of friends, and in whirl of commerce and of the forum. In shutting up the lagar-beer saloon upon the "Dead Rabbit," and shooting him down when he gets up a row in the street, we merely consign him to a life of hopeless, unvaried toil, in a narrower den in a vile alley. To be sure, he has books and newspapers within reach, and the money spent in pistols and ammunition we shall doubtless be told, might be spent if he pleased, in country rides. We admit all this, but we must remind objectors that moral and asthetic tastes need training just as well as the physical palate, and you can no more expect a rowdy to turn at one jump from street fights to the sober amusements of gentlemen and scholars, than the practical toper can brandy to turn with gusto to Johannisberg or Szegzardi. There is plenty of missionary work to be done here, and the sooner it is done the better, for these bands of ruffians are being, each year, recruited by boys, whom a little effort might make ornaments instead of plagues to the City.

ALEXANDRIA, June 21.—The Vectis, with the Marseilles mail, left yesterday evening. The dates from India are, Bombay, May 27; Calcutta, May 18; Madras, May 25.

The mutiny in the Bengal army had spread in a most alarming manner at Meerut. The 11th and 20th native infantry had united with the 3rd light cavalry in open revolt. After some bloodshed, they had been dispersed by European troops; they had fled to Delhi, where they were joined by the 38th, 54th, and 47th native infantry. Delhi was in possession of the mutineers, who had massacred almost all the Europeans, without regard to age or sex, plundered the bank and proclaimed the son of the late Mogul Emperor as king.

Disturbances have also broken out at Ferozepore, but had been suppressed.

The Rajah of Gwalior had placed his troops at the disposal of the British Government. Government was taking active measures to suppess the revolt, and was concentrating troops around Delhi.

The 35th Native Infantry was disbanded on the 7th.

The Nizam of the Deccan died on the 19th.

At Bombay the money market was much higher, and the banks had raised their rate of interest.

The transactions in the import market were limited. Exchange 2a. 1¾d.

At Calcutta there was no particular change in either exports or imports. Government securities had advanced—Exchange, 2a. 0¾d to 2a. 0¾d.

SURVEY OF COUNTY ROADS.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf,

SIR,

It appears that the County Council at their last sitting, voted for raising a sum of money, to be applied in laying out and improving certain roads in our county.—This Mr. Editor may be all right enough, but, why did they employ to execute this important work:—why a person totally uneducated in the profession of an Engineer or Surveyor—of no experience, and who doubtless obtained the appointment because he could afford his "professional" services at a much lower rate than one regularly educated.

I should suggest Mr. Editor that we should at once adopt the Yankee principle and let every man place a frying pan under his arm and blowing his own trumpet pronounce himself an Engineer &c. which would apply in this case, for if every regular practitioner is to give way to pretenders the sooner they leave the profession the better, and apply themselves to the scientific employment of sawing wood!

It evidently appears that competency is at a total discount, and all that seemed necessary was, that the person employed should be able, clearly to distinguish without a doubt, the difference between a "logarithms and a cart wheel."

Your obdt. servant,

SAM JACK.

Sandwich, July 20, 1857.

To the Editor of the Maple Leaf.

Dear Sir,

I observed an article in last week's Canadian—headed "a Good word for Rankin,' purporting to be from Mr. Devlin a J. P. of Mr. Rankin's creation—it is quite evident from the masterly manner in which he treats the subject that he is perfectly qualified to assist the unfortunate object of his regard.

One portion of his life I can give partial testimony in favor of—I mean that part in which he states that he knew every part of ground in the County—he ought to do so, if he has made as close an inspection as I saw him do in Sandwich, during last Assizes, when he (no doubt in order to be more exactly Scientific) had himself dragged down the streets by his heels.

A BY-LAW.

To impose a duty on Hawkers and Pedlars. (Passed 28th January, A. D. 1854.

I. WHEREAS by an Act passed during the last Session of the Provincial Parliament, entitled, "An Act to repeal certain Duties of Excise, so far as regards Upper Canada, and to vest certain powers in the Municipal authorities of that part of the Province," it is amongst other things enacted, that the Municipal Council of any county or city in Upper Canada shall have full power and authority to make By-Laws for regulating and governing Hawkers and Pedlars, and for requiring any such person to take out a License from such officer of the Munipality as shall be designated in such By-Law.

II. Be it enacted, by the Warden and Councillors of the Municipal Corporation of the County of Essex, in Council assembled, by virtue of and under "The Municipal Corporations Act of 1849." That no Hawkers and pedlars, and other trading persons, going from place to place, or travelling, in any way whatever for such purpose, or who have not become householders in the permanent residence in any town or place within the said County of Essex, shall carry to sell, or expose or offer for sale any goods, wares or merchandise, without first taking out a License for such purpose.

III. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the Licenses hereinbefore mentioned shall be granted by J. H. Wilkinson, the County Clerk, upon a certificate from the County Treasurer, that such person has paid the amount of such License into his hands. And for every person applying for the same, the sum of £7 10s for double-horse conveyances; the sum of £5 for single-horse conveyances; and the sum of £2 for foot-pedlars and Hawkers; and for any persons peddling or hawking in any other conveyance than above enumerated. the sum of ten pounds.

IV. Be it further enacted, by the autority aforesaid, That any person or persons who shall sell or carry to sell, or expose or offer to sell, any goods wares or merchandize without first having obtained a License therefor, shall be subject to a penalty of not less than one pound nor more than five pounds for every contravention of this By-Law, to be levied by warrant under the hand and seal of any Justice of the Peace of the County of Essex; and in default of sufficient distress, the party so convicted to be imprisoned in the common Goal of the County of Essex for a period not exceeding twenty days.

V. Be it enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that all moneys received for Licenses, and all penalties and fees levied and collected under this By-Law, shall be paid into the Treasury of the County of Essex, which shall form part of the general funds of the County.

County papers copy for one month.

A BY-LAW,

To raise by way of Loan the sum of £30,000 for opening Town-lines and improving County Roads, in the County of Essex.

Whereas it is expedient to raise by way of Loan the sum of £30,000 for opening Town-Lines and improving County Roads and particularly for opening out the series of Town-lines running East and West across the County and dividing it into two parts North and South, and also to open out the continuation of the old Malden Road, until it intersects the Talbot Road West; and whereas the whole rateable property of the County of Essex as returned for the year 1856 was £709,000; and whereas it will require the sum of £3600, to be raised levied and collected annually to pay the interest upon the said sum of £30,000; and the creation of a sinking fund and whereas it will require an annual rate of 1d and ½ in the £ as a special rate to pay the interest on the said loan through the space of 20 years and the creation of a sinking fund for the payment of the principle of the said loan.

Be it therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the County of Essex in Council Assembled under and by virtue of the "U. C, Municipal Corporations Act of 1849," and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That it shall and may be lawful for the Warden of the said county of Essex for the time being to raise by way of loan, and he is hereby authorized and required for on behalf, and in the name of this Council, to raise by way of loan, at a rate of interest not exceeding six, per cent. per annum, from any person or persons, body corporate or politic, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Debentures hereinafter mentioned, and the special rate hereinafter imposed, a sum of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of £30,000 currency, for the term of 20 years, and to cause the same to be paid into the hands of the County Treasurer, to be by him appropriated, under the direction of this Council for opening Town lines and improving County Roads and particularly for opening out the series of Town lines running East and West across the County and dividing it into two parts, North and South, and also to open out the continuation of the old Malden Road, until it intersects the Talbot Road West.

II. And be it enacted that it shall & may be lawful for the Warden to cause any number of Debentures to be made out for such sum or sums of money in Sterling or otherwise, not exceeding in the whole the said sum of £30,000 currency, as any person or persons, body Corporate or politic shall agree to advance upon the credit of such Debentures and the special rate hereinafter imposed.

III. Be it enacted that the said Debentures shall bear interest from the dates thereof respectively, at the rate of six per cent per annum, which interest shall be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the said County of Essex, or such other place as may be agreed upon by the Warden and the party or parties who may agree to advance the said sum, half yearly on the first days of January and July, in each year, such Debentures to be under the Common Seal of the County, and they shall be signed by the Warden, and countersigned by the Treasurer of the said County of Essex, and shall have coupons attached to each for the said interest, with the signatures or initials of the Warden and Treasurer thereto; and the said Debentures shall be made payable 20 years after date.

IV. Be it enacted, that for the purpose of paying the said sum of £30,000 so to be borrowed and interest thereon, there shall be raised, levied and collected upon the whole rateable property, both real and personal within the said County of Essex a special rate in each year over and above and in addition to all other rates and assessments whatever, a rate of 1¼d in the £ from the year 1858 to the year 1878, both years inclusive.

NOTICE. The above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law, to be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the County of Essex in the Council Chamber in the town of Sandwich in the said County of Essex, on the 3rd day of November A. D. 1857, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, at which time and place the members of the said Municipalities are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

The first publication of this By-Law in the "Maple Leaf" Newspaper, published in the Town of Sandwich aforesaid, was on the 23rd day of July 1857.

Further notice is hereby given, that Tuesday the 25th of August, at 10 o'clock A. M. at the following places have been appointed by the aforesaid Municipal Council, for a general meeting within the several Municipalities comprising the county of Essex, to take the said By-Law into consideration and to signify their approval or disapproval thereof.

HEALTH OR SICKNESS

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

Holloway's Pills.

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ; when corrupt, it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady whether located in the lungs, the stomach, theliver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

Used throughout the World!

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race, and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

Alarming Disorders!

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alterative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the system and tone constitution at the same time.

General Weakness—Nervous Complaints!

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victims of general debility.

Delicate Females!

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible Purifiers. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

Scientific Endorsements!

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the name of eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints	Indigestion
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflammation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dysentery,	Lowness of Spirits
Diarrhea	Piles.

ESSEX BUILDING SOCIETY.

AUCTION SALE OF LANDS.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the following lands will be exposed for sale by public auction, on Wednesday, the

5th day of August next

at the office of the Essex Building Society in the town of Sandwich, the said lands being so sold by virtue of certain powers of sale in certain Mortgages thereof, to the said Society, to secure certain sums advanced thereon, by the said Society to the owners of the said lands, the particulars of which are as follows.

Lots numbered 19, 20, 25, 26, and 27, on the Russell Street; Lots Nos. 18, 27, & 28, on the East side of Russell Street aforesaid, and Lots Nos. 25 & 28 on the West side of Bedford Street, all in the Town of Sandwich in the County of Essex, and the West and Eastern half parts of Lot Number 17, on the Fourth Concession in the Township of Maidstone, in the County of Essex, containing Two Hundred Acres or more less.

Little Fools and Great Ones.

When at the social board you sit,
And pass around the wine,
Remember though abuse is vile,
That use may be divine;
That heaven in kindness gave the grape,
To cheer both great and small—
That little fools will drink too much,
But great ones none at all.

And when in youth's too fleeting hours,
You roam the earth alone,
And have not sought some loving heart
That you may make your own;
Remember woman's prized on earth,
And think when pleasures pall—
That little fools will love too much,
But great ones none at all.

And if a friend deceive you once,
Absolve poor human blind,
Nor rail against your fellow-man,
With malice in your mind;
But in your daily intercourse,
Remember lest you fall—
That little ones confide too much,
But great ones none at all.

Soap.—To make Windsor soap, slice the best white soap as thin as possible; melt it in a stew-pan over a slow fire; scent it with oil of carraway, or any other scent, and then pour it into a mould made for that purpose. When it has stood for three or four days, in a dry situation, cut it into square pieces, and it is fit for use. An excellent toilet soap is thus made: Take a quarter of a pound of old Castile soap, slice it down into a pewter jar, and pour upon it two quarts of alcohol; place the jar in a vessel of water at such a heat as will cause the spirit to boil, when the soap will soon dissolve; then put the jar, closely covered, in a warm place until the liquor is clarified; take off any scum that may appear on the surface, and pour it carefully from the jar face, and pour it carefully from the dregs; then put it into the jar again, and place it in the vessel of hot water; distilling all the spirits that will arise; dry the remaining mass in the air for a few days, when a white transparent soap will be obtained, free from all alkaline impurities, and perfectly void of smell.

TRIAL OF AN IMPORTANT AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENT.—A number of the neighboring gentry assembled on the farm of Mr. Charles Keeling, congress, near Pendreigh, by invitation from that gentleman, to witness the trial of an implement manufactured by Chambers, supplied from the establishment of Mr. Whitehouse, of Wolverhampton. The implement is intended to dispense with the old system of sowing more broadcast by the hand, and the want of a machine of this kind has long been felt by agriculturists. It covers a space of seven feet, in width, and is worked by one or two horses, according to the condition of the soil and the quantity of work required. The day was most propitious, and the opportunities of examining the merits of the machine thereby rendered more abundant. Considerable difference of opinion prevailed prior to its trial respecting the capabilities of the machine to affect the object contemplated, but the result of the trial set all doubts at rest by proving that it was capable of effecting all that Mr. Whitehouse had promised for it, after it had sown various kinds of manure in the manure in the most perfect manner, varying in quantity from three to five cwt. per acre, according to the wishes of the company, the party left the field highly satisfied with the working of the machine, it having manured a space of from four to five acres in much less than two hours.—Staffordshire Advertiser.

BAD EFFECTS OF GRASS ON COLTS.—When horses are turned out to grass in the spring of the year, the succulent nature of the food causes them to purge, often to a great extent; this is considered by many persons a most desirable event—a great misconception. The herbs are overcharged with sap and moisture, of a crude acrimonious nature, to such an extent that all cannot be taken up by the organs designed for the secretion of urine, or by the absorbent vessels of the body; the superfluous fluid therefore passes off through the intestines with the indigestible particles of food, and thus the watery faces are thrown off. Flatulent colic or gripes is a frequent attendant. The system is deranged; but the mischief does not terminate here. If the purging is continued, a constitutional relaxation of the bowels is established, very debilitating to the animal, and often difficult to control. I am so decidedly opposed to unrestricted allowance of luxuriant grass to horses at any age, that nothing could induce me to give it to them. After the second year, hay should form a considerable portion of the daily food in summer to every animal intended for riding or driving. So says the Mark Lane Express, an English agricultural journal of high character.

GOOD ADVICE FOR LOAFERS.—A chap in this city, who was bred to the trade of a carpenter, but who has abandoned that calling for a gentlman loafer, because it is not "genteel," called on a female acquaintance the other evening. During his stay he complained of lack of exercise and a want of companionship. "I am dying," said he, "of ennui; I wish you would find me a first rate companion, with whom I can while away my time." "I know of one, just the one you need," she replied. "Who's that?" he asked. "Jack plane," was the cool and wicked response. The fellow suddenly conceived that he felt a flea in his ear, and left to consult an artist, and has not called to see his plane-talking female adviser since.—Lowell News.

FARMERS NOTE THIS.—In a cloudy morning, it is a matter of importance to the farmer to know whether it will be sunshiny or showery in the afternoon. If the ants have cleared their holes nicely, and piled the dirt up high, it seldom fails to bring a clear day to the farmer.—Spider webs will be very numerous about the tops of the grass and grain, some cloudy mornings; and fifty years' observation has shown the winter of this that those little weathergeesers seldom fail in their predictions of a fair day.

For Sale!!!

A FIRST-RATE LOCATION

AND

DESIRABLE RESIDENCE,

IN THE BEAUTIFUL

TOWN OF SANDWICH.

LOTS Nos. 11 and 12, containing about One Acre and a half, on the East Side of Russell Street, being situated about two miles from the Terminus of the Great Western Railway, and situated on the bank of the River Detroit, opposite the City of Detroit in the State of Michigan.

For a private residence, the beauty of the locality is unsurpassed in Western Canada.

On lot No. 11, there is erected a FIRST ASH FACTORY, which is now, and has been in constant operation for years past, having been erected on an improved plan and on the enlarged scale, and being the only one in operation in the neighborhood, it affords the greatest facility for immediate and beneficial operation. On the same lot is a large BRICK YARD, paying an annual rental of £25, which has been in operation for a few years past.

On lot No. 12, which fronts on Russell Street on the North, and on Chippewa Street on the South, is erected a TWO STOREY BRICK DWELLING HOUSE, 35 feet by 22 feet, now used as a SOAP AND CANDLE FACTORY, and if necessary for the use as private residence, commanding a view of the beautiful and navigable waters of the River Detroit and of Detroit City, together with a Frame Dwelling House, one and a half storeys high, fronting on Chippewa Street, with Barns, Stables, &c.: a Brick Milk House, a never-failing spring well, and all things connected, necessary for the use and comfort of a private family.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY, which is now awakening so much interest in this locality and which is to be built, will be shortly constructed, will much benefit this property, as the Terminus thereof will undoubtedly be on or adjacent to the above property, on the borders of the River Detroit.

Terms, with all Fixtures, Apparatus and Implements now in use, Cash—£550.

Possession to be given one month after sale thereof.

Application to be made to the undersigned if by letter post paid.

North Shore Line of Steamboats

DETROIT AND BUFFALO.

THE new and magnificent steamers PLYMOUTH ROCK, WESTERN WORLD, and MISSISSIPPI, will form this line the ensuing season, and commence running (weather permitting) upon the opening of navigation, as follows:

PLYMOUTH ROCK,
P. J. RALPH, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Mondays and Thursdays
" " Buffalo, Tuesdays and Fridays.

WESTERN WORLD,
J. S. RICHARDS, Commander.
Will leave Detroit, Wednesdays & Saturdays
" " Buffalo, Mondays and Thursdays

MISSISSIPPI,
S. G. LANGLEY, Commander.
Will leave Detroit Tuesdays and Fridays.
" " Buffalo, Wednesdays & Saturdays

These steamers are all new, of the largest class, being about two thousand tons each. The Commanders and Officers are gentlemen of great experience and capability. They are fitted up and furnished for the convenience of passengers in a style of neatness and luxury, entirely unequalled, and are in all respects considered the safest and most desirable steamers that sail upon the Western Waters.

For the transportation of freight, the line will surpass anything ever before offered to the public, having arrangements with parties between New York and Buffalo, and all points west of Buffalo to St. Louis; which will enable them to forward merchandise with greater despatch than has ever yet been attained.

For the transportation of live stock these steamers offer facilities to drovers which cannot be surpassed or equalled by any.

Shippers of merchandize from the East, should mark packages to the care of Messrs Seymour, Buffalo; merchandize from the West should be to the care of John Hosmer, agent, Detroit.

C. B. SWAIN, Agent.

Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago

THIS LINE consists of the following First Class Propellers:

MONTGOMERY, Capt. T. Nicholson
GLOBE, " Amos Pratt,
ONTONAGON, " A. Wilkins,
ADRIATIC, " M. S. Lathrop
OGONTZ, " W. D. Wilkinson
WABASH VALLEY, " ——

(Name not yet chosen.)

Which will, during the season, run between Buffalo, Milwaukie and Chicago, touching at intermediate ports.

This line connects with the North-Western Transportation Company Line on the Erie Canal and Hudson River, between New York and Buffalo, forming a continuous Line from New York to Chicago, and affording as good facilities as that of any other line.

A Propeller of this Line will leave BUFFALO and CHICAGO THREE times a week, having Upper Cabins, afford good accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers, and Families emigrating West will find this the CHEAPEST and most comfortable route.

Arrangements are made for transportation of Property and Merchandize, via

New York & Erie Railroad

on as favorable terms as can be by any other Railroad Route.

This Line having so large facilities, showing an aggregate of over FIVE THOUSAND Tons Measurement, being fully equipped and staunch first-class Propellers, offers superior facilities to Shippers of Produce and Merchandize for the transport of Property.

TUITION FEE IN ADVANCE.

For entire Mercantile Course, time unlimit ed - - - $40
Same Course for Ladies - - - 25
Twenty Lessons in Practical Penmanship, simply - - - - - 5
For full Course in Flourishing, etc., as per agreement.

THE COLLEGIATE COURSE,

which is designed to embrace all branches PURELY MERCANTILE, has been recently enlarged, and can now be regarded as one of the most lengthy, thorough and complete ever introduced to the public in any similar Institution in the UNITED STATES.

THE BOOK-KEEPING DEPARTMENT

embraces three distinct grades, viz: Initiatory, Regular and Extended Courses, and taught on Allen's New Method, recommended by over twenty of the most reliable PRACTICAL ACCOUNTANTS of Cleveland.

THE METHOD OF TEACHING

strikes at the very germinating points of the Science, revealing the great natural two-fold division of the Ledger, whereby is seen the proper line of demarcation between Real and Representative Property and the governing law of transfer, as regards it affecting the two classes of accounts, and those of the same class in every variety of transactions, thus stripping this most useful and beautiful science of much of its time honored mystery, made such such by arbitrary and infallible rules, meaningless forms and false notions; and hence enables the student to acquire corr ect notions of accounts as embodied in each practice.

THE INITIATORY COURSE.

embraces a regularly progressive series of manuscript cards, classified somewhat as to the variety of transactions. It aims to develop the first principles and philosophy of Accounts, and the Science, Theory and actual formula, by addressing the reason and judgment of the student, who studies with the view of apprehending and arriving at results and by rules on his investigations with much greater confidence, pleasure and independence.

THE REGULAR COURSE

is intended to represent every species of business, from the simplest Retail Store to the most intricate of Wholesale and Commission, as well as Banking, Railroading, etc., demanded, at present, by our vast and constantly increasing Commerce.

THE EXTENDED COURSE

embraces the highest practice from various business firms, and is designed for such students as may wish to spend longer than the time required by the Regular Course, (and that gratuitously) preparatory to entering some such House.

By taking in addition the Extended Course the student will be faithfully and profitably employed six months.

PENMANSHIP, PRACTICAL AND ORNAMENTAL, in all its varieties, will be taught in the most thorough and efficient manner by one of the best teachers in the West.—Besides the usual method of teaching Business Writing, the Chirlythmegraphic System will also be taught. This system, so popular, and recommended by our best educational men, is now taught in the Public Schools of Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo. Many other places are open for good teachers of Chirythmography as soon as they can be qualified.

DAILY LECTURES on Practical and Theoretical Book-keeping, Mercantile Laws, Commercial Ethics, Political Economy, Art of Composition, Commercial Calculations, Mercantile Customs, Banking, Exchange, Commerce, Railroading, Commercial History, Business Correspondence, Penmanship, etc.

The new suit of rooms of this College, occupies the finest location in the city, situated as they are on the corner of Public Square and Superior street, affording a fair view of most parts of the city and the lake. The rooms are neatly and tastefully furnished, surpassing in beauty and convenience perhaps those of any similar Institution in the Union.

THE LADIES' COURSE is the same as that of the Gentlemen, affording equal facilities to all ladies who may wish to avail themselves of the Commercial Course.

The Principal will give an extensive business acquaintance is enabled to secure good situations for may of his graduates.

A Merry Heart.

'Tis well to have a merry heart,
However short we stay;
There's wisdom in a merry heart,
Whate'er the world may say.
Philosophy may lift its head,
And find out many a flaw,
But give me that philosophy
That's happy with a straw!

If life but brings us happiness—
It brings us, we are told,
What's hard to buy, though rich ones try,
With all their heaps of gold!
Then laugh away, let others say
Whate'er they will of mirth;
Who laughs the most, may truely boast,
He's got the wealth of earth.

There's beauty in a merry laugh,
A moral beauty, too;
It shows the heart an honest heart
That's paid such one his due,
And lent a share of what's to spare
Despite of wisdom's fears;
And made the weak less sorrow speak,
The eye weep fewer tears.

The sun may shroud itself in cloud,
And tempest wrath begin,
It finds a spark to cheer the dark,
Its sunlight is within.
Then laugh away—let others say
Whate'er they will of mirth;
Who laughs the most may truly boast,
He's got the wealth of earth!

From Dicken's Household Words.

The Shadow of the Island of Madeira.

Who is Gonzalves Zarco?

It is the beginning of June; the year 1492. Two small vessels are leaving the port of Lisbon. The infant Don Henry waves his hand from the quay as the commander of the little expedition bows profoundly from the deck of the leading ship.—That commander is Gonzalves Zarco. Let us pursue his shadow in companionship with that of Juan de Morales, his pilot.

Where is Gonzalves sailing when he trusts his ships to the broad bosom of the Atlantic? Whom will he consult as guides of modern navigation? Charts, he has none. He has heard that Marco Polo brought from China to Europe the knowledge of an instrument that invariably pointed to the North—but he doubts. He will hug the land as long as he can. The meridian sun and the polar star must direct him in his need. His business is to find the Isles of the West, of which ancient tradition imperfectly whispers. In 1418, Gonzalves was engaged in exploring the coasts of Africa.—He was shipwrecked on a little island, which he will now endeavor to reach.

The seas are calm; the days are bright and long. If the nights are dark, Gonzalves anchors. He is pretty certain of the course. In due time he reaches the small island of Porto Santo, in which, last year, he left two or three of his crew.

What is this strange relation which soon meets the ear of Gonzalves—a relation which is to give new ardor to his sagacious courage, but which has terrors for his superstitious seamen? On the north-east of the isles, there appears, at a long distance, a thick darkness—a motionless cloud—which hangs over the sea, and reaches to the sky. That region of darkness—is it not the abyss?—There, is the boundary of this earth; and beyond, is the entrance of the shades.—Sometimes a distant murmur, as of troubled waters, comes across the sea. It is the rush of the mournful river of Acheron. Some say, that when the Christians fled from the oppression of the Moors and Saracens, they found and island of refuge in this ocean and from that time a mysterious cloud covered that island, so that no enemy could come near to harm them. Who shall dare to pierce that cloud, and solve these mysteries?

Gonzalves sits on the bench of Porto Santo, and looks again and again in the direction of that cloud. When the morning sun shines bright in the East, the cloud is there. When the moon climbs the sky, the cloudy distance is still visible. It never changes its place; it is form is always the same. Gonzalves will take counsel of Juan de Morales.

Juan is many years younger than Gonzalves; yet his forehead is wrinkled with cares that scarcely belong to the young.—He has passed his boyhood in captivity in Morocco. He has done servile offices up to the period of manhood. He has been chained to the oar, and rowed his task-masters through many a perilous sea. There is something strange and mysterious about him. His mossmates shun him, for they say he is a Castilian, and an enemy to Portugal. He has the Castilian steadiness, with more than Castilian reserve. Misfortune has not abused him; he carries himself as lofitly as the proudest of his countrymen; and yet he is of a fairer complexion than those countrymen, and he speaks their language with a singular mixture of other dialects, and even of other tongues. But that may come of his long captivity among Christian slaves of all lands. Juan is not popular; but Gonzalves has unbounded confidence in his pilot.

"Juan," says Gonzalves, "we will wait no longer. Hold you still your opinion?"

"My belief is ever the same. That dark mass, so undefined and unchanging, is a mountainous land, seen through a constant mist."

"You have the confidence of knowledge, rather than of conjecture. Did you ever hear speak of such a mountainous land?—In that quarter, leagues off, must lie the African deserts."

"I have no knowledge—except my dreams be knowledge. I dream of mountains, rising from the sea, covered with trees to the very summits; of ravines, where rivers come dashing down out of the mountains mists, and rush brightly to the ocean; of a narrow beach under the mountains, where the waves break wildly, and yet how beautifully!"

"Juan! you must have seen such a land!"

"Oh no! it is a dream—a dream of the poor ship-boy's loneliness."

"We will sail to-morrow. Juan!"

"Good!"

The anchors are weighed in the dawn of a summer morning. A brisk breeze soon carries them away from Porto Santo. There is a man of importance on board, Francis Alcafarado, a squire of Don Henry's chamber. He is keeping a diary of that voyage and busy inquisitive man.

"Captain, where are you steering?"

"To look for the Isles of the West."

"But you are sailing towards the darkness!"

"I think they lie beyond the darkness."

"You are tempting Heaven. See, we are in the bosom of a mist. There is no sun in the sky. Change your course, Gonzalves."

"Sir, I must obey my commission."

"Look! there is something darker still in the distance."

"I have seen it before—it is land,"

Juan is at the helm. He steers boldly through the mist. It is land. The sun is behind that mass of mountains. Juan must be cautious; there are rocks in that sea.—Gonzalves orders out the boats. There is a loud murmuring of oars, and a shore not very distant. The sun is mounting out of the exhalation. The mist is rolling off.—There are trees on the hills. The boats may near the shore. Glory to Saint Lawrence! That eastern cape first seen, and now doubled, shall be the Cape San Lourence! All are joyful but Juan de Morales It is not the land of his dreams. The crew gather round the pilot—and greet him well. But he is silent.

There is a streamlet gushing down to the sea. Gonzalves commands the crew to disembark. A priest goes with them. The water is blessed. The shore is blessed.—The commander of the expedition proclaims that the mysterious cloudland is a veritable possession of the King of Portugal.

And now they coast carefully along in their boats. They peer into the dark ravines, covered with everlasting forests.—Again and again they land. Are there any inhabitants? Not a trace of human dwelling, not a foot-print, not a token that man has ever abided here. Birds of bright plumage fly fearlessly about them. They gather up some wild grapes. They eat of the fruit ere they commit their course to the sea. They fill their flask to carry that sparkling water to the banks of the yellow Tagus. They bring provisions on shore, and sit down in a green valley where gentle waterfalls are sparkling around. They penetrate a wood; the rough bark torn up some trees. They observe one tree, and form a cross; they kneel, and the priest gives his benediction. This point is Sonto Cruz. They coast on; a tongue of land stretches far out—a shady covert. Suddenly a flight of jays darkens the air. This is! This shall be Punta dos Grafiões, the points of jays. Further on, another tongue of land is covered with cedars, and this, with the Punto dos Grolhos, a wooded bay. It shall be the bay of Cedars. Another valley is reached, and here Gonzalves makes an attempt to ascend the high ground, he sees enough to satisfy him that what he has discovered is an island. Again Gonzalves leads the way in his boat, and reaches an open space, where the lands is not encumbered with the dense growth of timber that has every where else met their view. The sea-beach is the foot of the mountains is covered with fennel, the funcho of the Portuguese. This beach shall be called Funchal.

What has happened to Juan de Morales! He stirs not—he speaks not. He looks upon the sea—he looks on the ravine.—Then he rushes to graze upon the hicks which the rivers of that valley have formed in their perennial courses; he smiles, he weeps; he sees something very like the land of his dreams.

The ships have followed the course of the boats; but at a wide berth from the land.—They now come into the bay of Funchal, and anchor in the river; here will the crew next day take in wood and water. They cannot have a pleasanter harbor. They will sleep in security. The sea is smooth; the air is balmy. The watch is set; and Juan, though his duty is ended, is amongst the watchers. The ripple of the river seems a familiar sound. He listens, as if he expected some human voice to mingle with that murmur of waters. The moon rises.—The wooded ravine lies before him in deep shadow; there and there is a beam of silvery light. Is that the figure of a man moving on the bright greenward! The sea breeze stirs the top most branches of the cedars, and their shadows, Juan, make up the semblance of humanity.

On the morrow the island is again explored. No sign of cultivation—no trace of man. In the heart of the mountains there are mighty chasms, into which the torrents rush, and form gentle rivers. Cedars and chestnut trees rise into the foggy summits of the highest peaks. Myrtles clothe the precipitous declivities. Deep caverns have been dug into the sides of the rocks by the untiring sea. Hush! there is a noise as of the tread of men. A multitude of seals rush out from that hollow, with a sudden cry, and plunge into the waves. That point shall be Camara dos Lobos, the cave of seals. The navigation becomes more difficult. The surf is more dangerous on that rocky coast. Gonzalves will return to his ships in the Bay of Funchal. He is eager to be once more in the Tagus; he has brave tidings for Don Henry. One such discovery is enough for a summer. But what shall he call this noble island? He takes counsel of the squire Alcafarado, who has been busy with his tablets incessantly. He will write a narrative of this prosperous voyage, which shall be deposited in the archives of Portugal. The island shall be called Maderio—the island of wood.

It is the summer of 1421, and Gonzalves Zarco is again embarking in the port of Lisbon.

The preparations for this voyage are very different from those of the expedition of 1419. One ship of considerable tonnage is now employed. Large stores of provisions are taken into the hold—raisins and olives, and casks of wine from Xeres and Oporto. There are live animals too in considerable numbers—sheep and goats, and a few mules. Fittings of the choicest vines, and small plants from the orange groves, are carefully stowed, and duly watered. There are implements of husbandry, and artificers' tools—spades and axes, anvils and hammers. Tents are there for shelter; spears and and bows for defence. There are the nets of the fisherman and fowler. But, in greater abundance than all, packages of clothing. A colony is to be founded.

Gonzalves comes on board with his two sons. They carefully inspect a little cabin, that is fitted up with unusual luxury.—They are satisfied—they go on shore.—Presently a litter appears, borne by four of the crew, who tread briskly under their load. Gonzalves walks before them. The litter is set down upon the deck, and a delicate girl is lifted out by the sons of Gonzalves, and carried to the decorated cabin.—She scarcely speaks—she is ill and exhausted. The ship is under way. Juan de Morales is again at the helm.

The heat of the day is over. The ship has dropped down the Tagus, and passed the bar. The distant vesper bell is sounding into the quiet evening. Anna Zarco is refreshed, and begs to be brought upon deck. A couch is made up at the stern. The sick girl speaks cheerfully to her father, as she watches the stars coming softly out of the blue sky. There is a light in the foot of St. Julian, which grows fainter and fainter as they sail on. Anna has fixed her lustrous eyes on that light. It is the last object that marks her native land. It is gone. It mingles with the stars. She looks in her father's face. A thought comes across him which forces a tear or two. Will Anna ever again see her birth-place! Will she reach her new home?

The ship's course is now direct to Maderio. Every evening the feeble girl is brought upon the deck, and lies peacefully there, with her him hand resting in the large rough palm of her father's. She listens, and told me soon to surrender talks to his pilot. They talk of the beautiful island to which they are sailing, of its pleasant climate, its green woods, its sparkling streams. They will land at Funchal. They will run up their houses on that sheltered beach; their sheep and goats shall pasture in the green valley between the mountains. They will find clear sunny spots on the hillsides to plant their vines: they will have an orange grove sheltered from the north, and will water their plants by channels from the river, whose streams will never fail. "Quintal" of olive and maize shall flourish in that genial soil. They will have everything for comfort soon around them. Gonzalves has the command of the island—he will be a kind viceroy over few but happy subjects.

We see the shadow of Gonzalves, after he has landed, without storm or pirate to harm him during his passage. He has dwelt with his sons and his daughter for a short time in tents; but a house strong enough to stand against the Atlantic gales is soon built; it has abundance of conveniences; other houses are growing up around them. Friends have come with Gonzalves to settle with him.—An ecclesiastic is here to teach and to console. Before the equinox the good ship is to return to Lisbon with diminished crew—and freight of native curiosities for Don Henry their patron.

Let us look at the shadow of Juan de Morales in this interval of sea life. He comes on shore daily to assist his captain: he works at the buildings; he cuts timber; he dries the reeds and rushes of the water-courses for a ready thatch. Juan is handy; and seems to have an almost instinctive knowledge of the weather, pastures for the sheep and the best soil for the corn and olives. But Juan had a gentler task to perform. Anna Zarco is grown strong enough to take exercise; Juan daily leads her mule up into the shady hills, or along the margin of the sea. Sometimes, when there is not a cloud in the sky, and there is a gentle ripple in the bay, Juan straws sweet rushes in his boat, on which Anna placidly lies, breathing the soft air with a sense of delight that is the herald of renovated health. Juan, then, tells her the seamen's stories of storm and wrecks, of pirates who lie in wait for the defenceless merchant-ship—the enemies of all nations; of Moors, who in their hatred of Christian people, fiercely attacked every vessel that comes near their inhospitable coasts, and carry their crews to a life-long slavery. Juan tells her of distant lands, for in his own captivity he has gathered much knowledge from other captives—of England, especially, and its great King Edward, and his wars in France. Of English Juan delights to talk; and when Anna asks his own life, before he was in slavery at Fez, he has a confused, story, with something English in his recollections, which makes her think that he is not a Castillian, as the sailors say he is. Gonzalves is happy that his daughter is gaining such health in this daily life, and willingly does he spare her pilot to be her guide and companion; for in a few weeks Juan will return to Lisbon, and then, when the house is finished, and the quinta planted, he will lead her mule himself, and himself will row her, in bright autumn days under the shade of the mountains. There is a place about three miles off, where Anna's mule is often led by the pilot. He coolers her through a narrow defile, when suddenly they are in a valley—a mere chasm between the loftiest mountains—a solemn place, but one also of rare lovliness—for the basaltic rocks are clothed with ever-greens, and the narrow level plain has a smiling river running through its entire length. Juan delights to bring his tender charge to this secluded spot; but here he is ever more than usually silent.

One day, Anna looks in Juan's face, and sees that he has been weeping. There is one spot in that valley that he often stops at—a spot marked by a pile of stones. On this day Juan suddenly falls on his knees at this spot and prays for a minute. Anna is scarcely surprised for Juan is a mysterious man—quite unlike other seamen. She questions him.

"Juan, my kind nurse, for you have been as a nurse to me in my feebless, why did you kneel and why have you been weeping?"

Senoral forgive me. I must not tell you. The knowledge that makes me weep is now little more than a vain memory. It has nothing in common with my present fortune. I shall sail again to Lisbon—perhaps never to come back. Do not ask me."

"But Juan! I look on you as a brother. I am getting well under your care. Will you not confide in your sister?"

"Nay, lady! Yet I must speak. You will keep my secret. I believe that I have knelt at my mother's grave!"

"Your mother's grave! How Juan could your mother ever come to this Island, where never sail touched before my father's ship?"

"It is a wild story, and an almost impossible story. But you shall hear it. My earliest memories, I once thought, were of my task-masters in Morocco, of whom I have before told you. I became a slave when I was four or five years old, as near as I may guess. There was a companion in my fate, who was kind to me—an English sailor. He taught me his language; he said he would one day tell me my own history. All that I knew was, that the ship in which he and I were sailing was captured by a corsair, and carried into Fez. I was in captivity twelve years; but I then escaped, and got to Spain. The infidels had made me a skilful seaman, and I had good knowledge of their coasts. After some time I went to Lisbon I became your father's pilot. The Englishman and I had been soon seperated, but he had told me something about an island in the west; an I gladly left with your father in quest of those western islands. When we came here two years ago, it seemed to me as if everything was familiar, but yet confused. I was in a dream. In the spring of this year an English vessel came into the Tagus. I asked many of the crew, I spoke of our discovery of Madeira, and of the price it might be to the Crown of Portugal. An old sailor said that the Portuguese were not the first discoverers. I grew angry; but the Englishman was confident, will repeat what he said:—

The discovers of that Island was Robert Machin, my countryman. Robert Machin, a bold Adventurer, won the love of Annie Artfe, the daughter of a Bristol merchant. His suit was rejected by the father; but Robert married her, and carried her off in his ship. They were bound for the Mediterranean, but missed their course. Their vessel foundered in the Atlantic; Machin and his wife were saved. They reached the wooded island, which you Portuguese have named Madeira. They abode there three or four years, in utter solitude, but contented and happy. The wife then sickened and died. They had a little boy; but Robert could not endure that loneliness, and he dreaded now that he might die, and that the boy should perish. He resolved to leave the island as he had come to it. He stowed his boat with cheese, and with fish dried in the sun—the food on which he and his wife had always subsisted. It was a calm season, and he wade good way. Off the coast of Morocco an English ship picked him up. I was the mate of that ship. Poor Robert's tale and his grief had been too much for him. He died in a few weeks—his boy was my charge. I was little used to him, for we were soon taken by a rover, and carried into Fez. I wish I could meet with that orphan boy. But that will never be!"

Anna Zarco blu h s and trembles:—"I know the rest. You were the little boy; and this island is your inheritance, and not my father's discovery."

"Keep my secret Anna. I love your father, and would not rob him of an atom of his honor."

Anna Zarco does not keep the secret from her father, who i s just man, and not unmindful of his daughter's happiness.

Juan de Morales does not return to Lisbon.

In a few years there is a pretty cottage, and a vineyard in the "Corral," where not far from the tomb of stocks, dwell other Machins, John and Anna, whose shadows are pleasant to look on.

PROGRESS OF TIME.—A pedlar going through the land with wooden clocks.

Advices from Honduras, say the New York Herald dated Brazil, 20th ult., state Colonel Kinney, of Greytown, was at Ruatan and found much favour with the negro population. The colonial official and dress of England was still adhered to in the superscription of all letters sent to her Majesty's and other officers at Ruatan. Native sugar was extensively cultivated around Belize, and but for the lazy habits of the free negroes the people of the Colony would soon export that article. The mahogany trade was declining, and other sources of industrial profit were rapidly failing all over the Bay Islands. By the arrival of the brig Adelphi, Capt. Brown, we have received advices from Para to the 26th ult. Tranquility reigned throughout the province.—The city residents enjoyed good health; but new comers rarely escaped an attack of yellow fever, which often proved fatal. The new tariff would go into effect on the first of July. Our Havana correspondent, writing on the 10th inst., states that the U. S. steamer Dee was in port from Vera Cruz, with $2,500,000 in specie for England. A portion of it was sold in Havana at 4¾ premium, to be delivered in Southampton.—The Spanish fleet was only preparing for the cruise before mentioned. It is said that the Spanish soldiers in hospital were severely affected with the slight febrile attack always endured by persons newly arrived and in drinking freely of the water of the city. The markets remained as last reported.—Joint stock speculation bubbles were still in vogue.

Despatches have gone west from Washington, directing General Harvey to throw the entire Utah expeditionary force upon Kansas, in order to assist General Walker in quelling the Laurence disturbances. One statement is, that it is Walker's design, through this movement against Laurence, to keep in Kansas the troops designed for Utah, as a pretext for the Administration to back out of the Utah expedition.

Mayor Wentworth, of Chicago, has been fined $25 and costs for an assault and battery on Charles Cameron Esq., of that city. The offence of the mayor was that he roughly pushed Cameron, who is an Attorney, from the window of the watch house, where he was engaged in conversation with a prisoner who was his client.

The papers all announce the death of Mr. John English, the senior editor of the Arcadian Recorder. Although ailing for a long time, Mr. English's death was at last sudden, and to many of his most intimate associates, quite unexpected. For years he has complained of ill health, and this indisposition grew upon him so far, that for some time, he found it necessary to withdraw himself practicaly from the business.

For thirty-four years, Mr. English has been uninterruptedly connected, in some way or other, with the Arcadian Recorder. He entered the office in 1823 as an apprentice to the printing business, since which time he passed through the various grades of apprentice, journeyman printer, foreman of the office, co-proprietor, and senior editor of the paper. He resolved his last named position in 1837. He was a man of character and decided ability.

Civic Morality in New York.

The following infamous charges are plainly and boldly made against Mayor Wood, of New York, by perhaps the most respectable and influential newspaper in the United States—namely, the Tribune. The States' Prison is literally elected to supply New York with a Mayor!

If a majority of the people of New York desired the blessing of his election as Mayor next fall, why not? He has been twice elected as a forger and swindler to that lofty dignity, and why not again? Of course, the great merchants and men of money with sign another laudatory letter imploring him once more to lend the luster of his name to the office. Won't the highly respectable managers of some one of our banks (say, the one Mr. Wood once drew a check on), go about again and get signatures to such a letter? Perhaps by so doing they may not only aid in re-electing this model of commercial probity, but may succeed in obtaining for their bank the fat profits of the city deposits.

—Faugh! what a disgusting business it all is!

Constituencies of Great Britain.—Mr. Locke King lately moved for a return of the numerical strength of the constituencies of Great Britain from 1850 to 1856 inclusive, specifying the number voting in right of each particular denomination of franchise. The county constituencies appear to be of about the same strength in 1850 as 1856. The decrease in some is pretty nearly counterbalanced by an increase in others, but generally the numbers are very nearly the same at both periods. The largest constituency is the West Riding, which numbered 36,750 votes in 1850, and 37,153 in 1856. The smallest county constituency returning a member is Sutherland, with 251. Of the borough constituencies the largest are the Tower Hamlets, with 27,080 electors; Marylebone, with 20,851; Finsbury, with 20,626; Lambeth, with 20,276; London, with 12,115; Liverpool, with 18,314; Glasgow, with 18,118; and Manchester, with 15,044. The two smallest are Ashburton and Calne, the constituencies of which number 182 and 164 votes respectively.

The Rochester Union mentions two or three cases of death by sun stroke, as having occurred in that city.

The Late Attack on the King of Naples.

A letter from Naples of the 16th of June, received on Sunday, says:—Yesterday, the 17th, in the fortress of Gaeta, whilst King Ferdinand, followed by a numerous staff on horseback, was proceeding to a review of the garrison of Gaeta, his Majesty received in audience four soldiers, one of whom in taking out of his breast his petition, presented a double barrelled pistol, and discharged one of the barrels at the King: but did him no farther harm than burning the skin of the right temple and the hair. The soldier thereupon discharged the second ball, causing it to be circulated that a soldier, whilst in the act of presenting a petition to the King, fell dead in a fit of apoplexy; but now that it is midnight, some one has been able to ascertain the truth. The soldier on the preceding day requested his commanding officer's permission to go to confession, and to take the sacrements, on the plea that he was not well,

A Fleet of 300 Screw Steamers.—The latest accounts are that 300 ocean steam vessels are being built in England. 300 ocean steam vessels supposing that only one-half of them go into the Atlantic trade —will entirely revolutionize our commercial intercourse with Europe. They will compel sailing vessels to restrict themselves to the carrying of breadstuffs, cotton, timber, ashes and other bulky articles; and will entirely monopolize the business of carrying passengers, specie, and light, valuable or perishable freight. The first and most important effect of the change will be to transfer the most lucrative and most important branch of our maritime trade to our great rival England.

That England must become the carrier of goods and passengers on the Atlantic, with a steam fleet of twenty-five vessels to our one, is to plain for demonstration. As it is, the British steamers are to ours as four to one; next year they will be ten to one; and the year after twenty-five. They will regulate the tariff of charge, as it suits her English lake. In the event of war, they will seal up our ports, and sweep our sailing vessels from the face of the ocean.

What then are we to do, to obviate a contingency which would necessarily involve a certain degree of national decline and retrogression?

We are told to build screw vessels. But it is not certain whether wooden screws will answer, so as to compete with foreign Iron vessels; some ship-builders say they will; others that they won't, and the point is left in doubt. There seems little reason to doubt that iron vessels are the best for screw purposes. Why can we not build iron vessels? Is there no possibility of stimulating by a legitimate demand, the production of iron so as to bring it nearly on a level, in point of price, with that of England? There is no deficiency in the country; cannot our machinery in some degree compensate for the increased cost of labor?

We desire to draw the particular attention of all persons concerned in shipbuilding to these facts; we desire them to ponder them with the attention that is due to a subject on which our national progress may hinge. Some remedy must be found, or the decline of the United States may have begun.—New York Herald.

A Cargo of Irish Girls.

A company of seventy Irish girls passed through this city on their way for the West, a day or two since, accompanied by an Irish gentleman, who had them in charge, and had brought them all the way from Ireland. They were a fine looking lot of girls, from sixteen to eighteen years of age, and intend to make the West their homes; and of course are ready to marry, but are willing to work and earn their living until the time arrives when they will get a husband. They are to earn money sufficient to pay the expense of bringing them over, and return it to the benevolent gentleman who took the expense upon himself, the first thing; after that they will be at liberty to indulge in ribbons and hoops if they choose. The girls are all of the working class, being somewhat the better class of emigrants. Father Hennessy selected them, selected thirteen of the number, and took upon himself the task of finding homes for them. They came through by railroad from New York. The various roads along the route showed their gallantry by providing them with first-class cars to ride in, although the tickets were emigrant tickets. There is room on the Western praries for all such cargoes that can be brought to the country.— Detroit Free Press.

The Latest from Father Chiniquy.—It is stated in the Journal de L'Illinois, that Sunday before last, the excommunicated priest preached on "Freedom of conscience according to the true Catholic principles;" he held forth in the vast hall of the Court of Justice in Kakkakee city, in the presence of a crowded meeting, in which was seen the elite of the American and French citizens of the place and neighborhood. The sermon of Father Chiniquy is to be published in the above paper, which offers to the Rev. Mr. Champeaux, the priest of the Hierarchy, to publish also a sermon he preached on the same day to extol the virtues of Bishop O'Regan.—From the same source we learn also that the Romish priest of Galesburg, Illinois, has fallen into the same disgrace as father Chiniquy, and for the same cause, he having refused to make over to the Bishop of Chicago the deed of the lot on which is built his church. He is consequently removed from the priesthood, and, after the example of Father Chiniquy, has used the press in self defence, and published against the tyranny of his Bishop a strong letter, which cuts him off from all hope of episcopal forgiveness, and places him in a position similar to that of M. Chiniquy.

So perfect were the Egyptians in the manufacture of perfumes, that some of their ancient ointment preserved in an alabaster vase in the museum at Alnwick, still retains a very powerful odor, though it must be between 2000 and 3000 years old.

The Maple Leaf,

SANDWICH, JULY 30, 1857.

We beg to draw attention to the following order from the Post Office Department in relation to Newspapers, which will take effect on the first of August next.

Postage on Newspapers and Periodicals.

The provisions of the Act passed in the last Session to amend the Post Office Laws of this Province, (which comes into force on the 1st of August, 1857) render it necessary to modify the Instructions now in the hands of Postmasters, with regard to the Postage charges on Newspapers and Periodicals, and from the 1st of August therefore, the following will be the regulations applying to this branch of the Post Office business:

Newspapers.

No. 1.—All Newspapers printed and published within this Province, and addressed from the office of publication, are to be transmitted from the Post Office where mailed by the publisher to any other Post Office in Canada, or to the United Kingdom or to any British Province, Colony or Possession, or to France, or the United States, free of Canadian postage.

2.—Postmasters of Towns where Newspapers are printed, will arrange with the Publishers as to the mode of posting the Papers sent from the Office of Publication, so as to preclude the possibility of mistaking Papers so mailed for transient Papers liable to eighteen pence.

3.—Newspapers printed and published in the United Kingdom, or in any British Province, Colony, or Possession, or in France, when received in mails addressed to this Province are to be delivered at the Post Office to which they may be directed in this Province free of Canadian Postage.

4.—Newspapers received in the ordinary Mails from the United States are to be charged one half penny each on delivery in Canada, to be accounted for by the delivering Postmaster, with the exception only of "Exchange papers" addressed to the Editors or publishers of Canadian Papers which are to pass free.

5.—Newspapers, whether printed and published in Canada, the United Kingdom, or elsewhere, when posted or brought into Canada, otherwise than as provided in the foregoing clauses, or when remailed in Canada, including all transient papers, may be forwarded on prepayment of one half-penny each by Postage Stamp, but unless so prepaid, papers so posted or re-mailed cannot be forwarded.

6.—The class of Transient Papers, liable to prepayment by newspaper postage-stamp, will include all newspapers posted in Canada otherwise than from the Office of Publication.

7.—Newspapers addressed from Canada for transmittal by way of England to Foreign States or countries beyond sea, and newspapers received from such States or Countries through the same channel, will continue to be liable to the special rates of charge prescribed by the Imperial Post Office, as laid down in Department Circulars, Nos. 25, 33, &c.

8.—Newspapers intended for the British West Indies or Newfoundland, cannot be forwarded unless pre-paid a Packet-rate of one penny half penny each by postage-stamps.

9.—Newspapers from the United Kingdom, received in Canada in the closed British Mails via the United States, though free of Canadian charge, will continue to be liable, as heretofore, to a rate of one penny each on delivery — representing a transit charge due to the United States on every paper so received.

10.—Publishers of Newspapers and Periodicals may continue to send, free of postage to their subscribers, subscription accounts, and receipts for the same, included in their publication, as heretofore.

11.—It is declared by the Act that the word, "Newspaper" shall be held to mean periodical prints published not less frequently than once in each week, and containing notices of passing events.

Periodicals.

Periodicals printed in this province other than newspapers, when specially devoted to Religious and general Education, to Arieulture, to Temperance, or to any branch of Science, and addressed directly from the Office of Publication, are to be transmitted from the Post Office where mailed, to any other Post Office in this Province free of postage.

13.—Periodicals other than such as are exempt under the preceding clause, will be liable to the existing rates of charge, namely, if not exceeding 3 oz. in weight, 4d.—if over 3 oz. 2d.

14.—Transient Periodicals posted in Canada, must be pre-paid by postage-stamp; this class will include all periodicals of whatever description posted otherwise than from the Office of Publication.

15.—The exemption accorded under Department Order of 1st January, 1854, to certain periodicals published in the United States, and devoted to Educational, Temperance, Agricultural, and Scientific objects, is to be continued until the 1st January, 1858.

From and after the date all Periodicals from the United States, will without exception, be subject to the regular rates of charge applicable to Periodical publications, to be collected and accounted for by the Canadian Postmaster who may deliver the same.

New Postage Stamp for pre-payment of Newspapers, Periodicals, Drop Letters, &c., &c.

16.—To supply a medium for the pre-payment of transient Newspapers and Periodicals, and of Drop or Town Letters, a new Postage Stamp, to bear postage value at one half-penny each, has been prepared and will be supplied to Post-masters, for sale to the public at all the principal Post Offices (including all Money Order Offices) and further, to any Postmaster on application, the business of whose Office may require the accomodation. Though specially intended for the lesser rates of postage change, —these stamps if affixed to a sufficient amount will prepay ordinary letters.

New Barley.

☞ We were shown a fine lot of new Barley at the Sandwich Brewery yesterday, which had been raised in the neighbourhood of the Canard river, this we believe is the first lot that has come into market this season and it was certainly a handsome sample. The lot was immediately put in process of manufacture for making beer and we hope shortly to be in a position to praise the beer made from it, as highly as we now praise the grain, from which it is to be made.

We regret to learn from many of the back Townships that the weevil has caused great injury to the wheat fields, and in fact many other grains have also suffered from this distructive insect. There never was a better prospect for a large crop until the weevil made its appearance.
